INTRODUCTION.

These texts result from a visit to the Chipewyan of Cold Lake Reserve, Alberta, Canada, from June 28 to July 15, 1911. This visit was made with the desire of obtaining at first hand some definite knowledge of the sounds and structure of a northern or Déné dialect of an Athapascan language for the purpose of comparison with Pacific Coast and southern dialects.

The band which numbers 273 is attached to Onion Lake Agency. They are the southernmost Chipewyan and therefore are closely associated with the Cree. Their manner of life is still much that which has prevailed in the Mackenzie Valley for a century. The winters are spent in hunting and trapping, for which purpose, long journeys are taken into the wilderness to the north, dogs and sledges being used for transportation, and tents for shelter. The food required is obtained from the fur-bearing animals trapped, and an occasional moose. A narrative of such a trip was obtained and is presented in text 15. The summers are spent about the lakes where fish and water fowl are plentiful. Travel is by birchbark canoes and may be continued many miles to the north and east with but short and occasional portages. Recently, grain has been sown, gardens raised, and a few milch cows kept.

The only primitive arts remaining relate to the building of canoes, and the making of snowshoes and moccasins. The moccasins are in one piece of moose skin colored by the spruce smoke with which the hide is cured and have decorations at the instep worked in silk.

The entire band are faithful Catholics. The church literature and ministrations are in the Chipewyan dialect. Father Le Goff¹ has been their missionary for forty years and knows their language thoroughly. No instance of the old religious practices or beliefs was observed. The older people remember an annual spring ceremony called, "feeding the fire" during which many small pieces of animal food were placed in the fire. Part of an old ceremony was unwittingly obtained in text 8. This was used in fishing, the story being related in accompanying songs. Inquiry resulted in securing one other fragmentary text (9), and accounts of other ceremonies relating to fishing and hunting. Mention was also made of the former use of a tall sweat lodge in which songs were sung and other ceremonial acts occurred.

The texts are myths and tales apparently typical of the Chipewyan and other Déné. Most of them have parallels among those of Petitot¹ and those obtained by Dr. Lowie which will appear as a number of this volume. Unless otherwise indicated by footnotes, they were obtained from Jean Baptiste Ennou, a man of about thirty-five years of age who speaks good English although his schooling was confined to a few terms in a school formerly maintained on the Reserve. The texts are reproduced as first recorded with the exception of a few evident errors of writing. The inaccuracies and errors due to hearing have been intentionally retained since such errors often point to the character of the sounds misunderstood. The second part of this volume will furnish an analysis of the material here presented with many illustrative tracings. All comments on phonetics and structure are reserved for that paper.

KEY TO SOUNDS.

- a as in father.
ā nasalized.
e open as in met.
ē nasalized.
ē closed as in they.
i as in pin.
ī as in pique.
î nasalized.
o as aw in law.
ō as in note.
õ nasalized.
ū as in rule.
y as in yes.
w as in will.
m as in met.
n as in net.
ñ as ng in sing.
r a tongue-tip trilled r related to d or t, one or the other of which may be used correctly in the place of r.
l as in let.
L a surd lateral spirant; the breath escapes between the back teeth and the sides of the tongue. Father Le Goff represents this by 'l.'
L' the last sound with glottal affection. Father Le Goff writes this ttl or ll.
ʒ as th in this, a sonant interdental spirant. Father Le Goff represents this sound with zh or dzh.
θ as th in thin, a surd interdental spirant for which Father Le Goff uses sh or dsh.
θ' the last sound with glottal affection. Father Le Goff makes use of tth for this sound which he considers a compound one.
z or j nearly as in lizard or azure. It seems the same sound was heard sometimes with one value and sometimes with the other. The different representations have been preserved with the hope that some regularity would indicate a real difference in sound. Father Le Goff makes similar distinctions.
s or c as in sit or sh in shall. The remarks concerning z and j also apply.

- g a palatal sonant spirant similar to the sound of g in Tage as spoken in Northern Germany. Father Le Goff represents this sound and g by ρ, describing the sound as an uvular r (r grassevant).
- x a palatal surd spirant as ch in German nach.
- h as in hit, but often confused with x in writing.
- b as in bit; a fully sonant bilabial stop.
- d as in did; a fully sonant dental stop.
- t a strongly aspirated surd dental stop. Father Le Goff writes 't.
- t' a glottally affected surd dental stop. Father Le Goff uses tt.
- g as in go, a fully sonant palatal stop.
- g an intermediately sonant palatal stop. Father Le Goff sometimes writes 'g.
- k a strongly aspirated surd palatal stop; Father Le Goff writes 'k.
- k' a glottally affected surd palatal stop, indicated by Father Le Goff by means of kk.
- q a velar stop of intermediate sonancy.
- dz and dj are sonant affricatives.
- ts and tc are surd affricatives.
- ts' and tc' are glottally affected affricatives.
- ' is used to denote marked aspiration.
- ‘ is used for the glottal stop. Father Le Goff does not list or describe a glottal stop, but represents it by ''.

1. THE MONSTER BIRD.¹

In the beginning, two young men secured some geese and tied them to their canoe so that they might be drawn through the water by them. The young men lay down in the canoe, saying to the geese, "Take us wherever your land may be." When they stood up, they found the geese full grown. As they were without food, they killed them, built a fire, and cooked and ate them, and when they had finished their meal, continued their journey.

After they had gone a long distance, they again found themselves without food. Some wolves came to them and fed them with fat and pemmican. "Do not eat it all," the wolves admonished them, "leave some to eat in the morning after you have slept." The wolves also gave them arrows but cautioned them as to their use and said, "If you should shoot grouse, after a time, and the arrow sticks a short way up in a tree, do not climb up to get it." The young men resumed their journey. After a time, one of them shot grouse and his arrow fell rather high on a tree. Not heeding the warning of the wolves, he said to his companion, "I am going to get it." "No," said the other, "the wolves told us not to do that." Thinking the arrow was not very high, he stood on something and reached toward it. The arrow moved still further out of his reach and the young man involuntarily ascended toward the sky after it.

The one who had ascended to the sky traveled alone until he came where a tipi stood. He found an old woman there who blackened his face with a coal. He heard two girls laughing in the brush behind the house. When they came in, they said, "Mother, what sort of a bad animal has come here?" They laughed at him a long time, and then went out again into the brush. The old woman immediately washed his face and combed his hair. Soon he heard the girls talking again, saying, "We will go in again and laugh at that thing which came." As soon as they came in each said, "I would like to have that man. I will marry him." That night, one lay down on either side of him. After a time, when the man woke up, he found he was under the ground and could not move. In the morning, he heard the family going away. He heard the two girls laughing as they started; but ¹ Petitot, Émile (Traditions Indiennes du Canada Nord-Ouest, Paris, 1886) secured a version of this myth from a native of Great Slave Lake (pp. 352-362) which differs in the beginning in telling of the father of the two young men who sent them out to hunt and in the omission at the end of the capture of the young man and his second imprisonment in the nest. He also includes a myth recorded by Faraut in 1859 of very different import in which the same characters, both human and supernatural appear (pp. 362-372).

Dr. Lowie's version obtained at Fort Chipewyan is exactly parallel except that giants first befriended them instead of wolves and that the burning of the nest is omitted.

the old woman was crying, and saying to herself, "They have done that way to many nice men who have come to me." Not long after that he heard some wolves coming to the campsite. "What has happened?" one of them said, "There is the smell of a live man." One of the wolves, named Ebedaholthi, was addressed, "There is a man under the ground. We will take him out. Go and get the partly chewed bone we left behind the old camp." The man heard someone tapping with a spear on the ground as he ran along. Soon he heard the same sounds as the wolf returned. They tried to dig with the rib which he had brought, but it broke. "Get something else," he heard him say. He went again and brought the leg bone of a moose which has the two side bones and dew claws. That did not break and with it they soon dug the man out. Then he found it was the wolves who had done all this.

The wolves then gave him two arrows and directions for their use. "This arrow is female," one of them said, "and this one is male. If when you hunt, a cow moose runs away into the brush, you must shoot this female arrow toward the place. But if a bull moose runs into the brush, shoot in that direction with the male arrow. When you have killed a moose, take the intestines and tie them back and forth on a tree. Then you must tell one of the girls that you have left a rope with which she shall carry the moose. If her rope breaks and she begins to curse we will attend to her should we hear her saying, 'mean wolf.'"

Then the man went on, following the tracks of the women. When he came close to them, he began to hunt. Seeing where a cow moose had run into the brush, he shot the female arrow. Where a bull moose had run in, he shot the male arrow. He found that each of his arrows had killed a moose. He then went where the people had camped and said to the two girls, "Go and get the moose I have killed." To one of the girls whose name was Weasel-vermin he said, "You need not take a rope with you, for I have left one for you." He told the other girl called Mice-vermin, to take a rope. The girls started for the moose, the man following along with them. When they came near the place where the moose were lying, he said to Weasel-vermin, "You get the one that is over there." He found that each of the girls was accustomed to carry an entire moose on her back at one time. Weasel-vermin found that he meant the intestines when he told her that he left a rope hanging in the tree for her. When she attempted to carry the moose whole with it, the rope began to break. She began to curse and finally said, "mean wolf." Immediately, he heard her running in a circle and shouting. When he came to the place, he found only some human hair lying there, and the marks on the snow where the body had been dragged away. He ran immediately to the other girl and pulled her clothes off. Mice ran under the snow. He found that she was a mouse and the other girl a weasel. After that, she became a person and married the man. The man lived there with his mother-in-law.

He remained there for considerable time. He killed many moose but did not know what became of the skins of the moose which he killed. His mother-in-law had dressed just one of them. After a time, she said to him, "Your relatives are lonesome and I do not like that. There is a hole through the sky here ahead of us. Let us go there." When they came to the place, she wrapped the man in the one moose hide she had dressed. He found that she had made rope of the other hides. With the rope she lowered the man. "When you feel yourself touching the ground," she told him, "you must untie the rope and pull it several times." After a time, he thought he felt the ground under him. He crawled out of the hide, pulled the rope repeatedly, and it disappeared toward the sky. When he looked about he was astonished to find that he was not yet on the ground but on the nest of the flying things which feed upon people. Human bones were lying about. A young one of the birds was sitting there. He took a liking to the man and said to him, "I usually eat people but you shall live. Sit here under my wings." The bird was so large that a person could hide under it. Soon it spoke to him again, saying, "After a while, it will be dark as if it were night. It will be my mother coming. When it becomes light again, my father will come." After a short time it grew dark, and the mother bird lit there. She said to the young one, "I smell a human odor coming from you." "Oh, its the human remains lying there which you brought," the young one told its mother. "No, it is not. It is the odor of a living person, which I smell coming from you," the mother replied. When she had found the man, the young one said, "You shall not do anything to him, he will live. If you kill him you must kill me too."

After a time it became light again and the father bird arrived. He said the same things to the young one and received the same replies. On account of that the man was allowed to live. When they had both gone off again, the young one said to the man, "I am going to put my wings on you. You shall fly across." The man found that the nest was on an island and that there were rapids on either side in the large stream flowing there. The bird put the wings on the man saying to him, "Fly around here until you are sure you can fly across." The man flew about the nest a little way until he felt certain he could fly across the stream. "Do not put my wings right on the ground, lean them against a tree," the young bird told him. "On your way home, do not travel at night. Even if you think you have not far to go, lie down wherever night overtakes you."¹

Then the man flew across from the nest, took off the wings, and leaned them against a tree. From there he started toward the place where his relatives used to live. He came where a beaver had his house and commenced to dig it out. After a time, it became dark without his knowing it. "The house is not far away. I will not sleep here since it is so close by," he said to himself and started on although it was dark. As he walked along, he carried his spear with which he had been chiseling for the beaver. Suddenly, he felt himself being taken up into the air without visible cause. He found that Hotelbale, the bird monster, had taken him away. When he had been carried a long distance, above a high rock he was thrown down upon it. Catching the top of the rock with the spear, he jumped over it and saved himself. Again, he was caught and carried away. When he was thrown again upon a sharp rock, he placed the end of his spear against it and jumped over it. He found that this rock was covered on both sides with dried human blood where the people had been killed. He was carried, still alive, to the young bird. When the young one saw him it said, "This is my grandchild, that I love. This is the one I said you must not kill. If you kill it, you must kill me too." For that reason he was not killed. "You shall remain here," the young one said to him, and he lived there with him.

When he had been there some little time, he began to think how he might kill them. They slept only in the daytime. He placed a quantity of hay and small brush on the tree under the nest. When there was much of it there, the old one said, "Grandson, why are you doing that?" "Oh, I am playing with it," he replied. After some time he spoke to the old bird, "Grandfather, let me have your firedrill. I want to play with it." He addressed Hotelbale, as grandfather. He was given the firedrill. Then when they were asleep, during the day, he set the brush and hay on fire and burned the nest with them in it. They lay with their wings all burned. Taking a club he struck the old birds on the crowns of their heads and killed them, but he let the young one live, rubbing the burned portions of its wings away. He said to it, "If you had been the only one, I would not have done it; but your parents have killed many of my relatives."

After that, there were no such monsters but the young one was still alive. Someone has recently heard from the west that it has grown again.

A man who has knowledge of something magical does not get killed.

2. RAISED-BY-HIS-GRANDMOTHER.¹

An old woman heard a little child crying. After she had looked for him some time she discovered him sitting under a caribou chip. As he was a very little child she put him in her mitten, carried him home, and undertook to raise him. Whenever caribou were killed, and his grandmother went out after meat, the boy asked her to bring him the feet of the young caribou. One time when she went out after meat, the boy sat and waited for her return. When he saw her coming, he began calling to her, "Grandmother, the feet, the feet." "Grandson," his grandmother said, "the feet are not for you. You are not the only child. 'He is always asking for young caribou feet. This time he shall not have them,' they said about you." "Let them all freeze, let them freeze," he said. "What will your uncles do, if you say that?" his grandmother asked. "'May they find the last poor bear, the last poor bear,' you may say," he said. Then he told his grandmother when they moved camp, "Do not take me along." "What will we do? We shall die for want of meat," she said. "No, we will not die," the boy replied.

When the people had all moved away, the boy went back to the campsites and pulled away the partly burned sticks from the fireplaces. After a while, he came to the deserted camp of his uncles where he found the partly burned feet and hoofs of the caribou. "It looks like partly burned hoofs right here," the boy said to his grandmother. "Grandmother, carry me over in that direction." She took him on her back and carried him. When she had gone a long distance she put him down to rest. "Grandmother, sit there and fish in that small slough." "There are not any fish there, grandson," she replied. "Yes, there are," he said. The old woman then cut a hole through the ice and let down a hook into the water of the small slough. She immediately pulled out a large trout. "Put the hook in again," the boy said. When she put the hook down again, she pulled out a jackfish. "That is enough," the boy said. "We will camp not far from here." She made a shelter of spruce boughs in which they lived for some time.

In these versions from Petitot, Raised-by-his-grandmother is a person of great power who comes to relieve the natives to whom the caribou migrations have ceased. He restores the caribou on the condition of being given the tips of their tongues as tribute and when the tribute fails, he leaves them. He is ever after invoked as the deity in charge of caribou. According to one version, he joins the musk ox and to another the bear. Evidently then, this myth is related to a caribou hunting ceremony which, judging from their almost complete reliance on that animal for food, was probably the most important of their ceremonies.

"Make snowshoes for me," the boy said one day to his grandmother. She made him small round snowshoes. Then he asked her to make him some arrows. When she made them he wanted her to dress him. As soon as she had done so, he said, "Put on my snowshoes. I am going outside a little way to play." When he had been gone some time his grandmother went out to look for him. She followed his tracks for some distance and then came where his snowshoes, his arrows, and his poor little clothes were lying. From that place there was only a line of caribou tracks. His grandmother turned back, crying, and saying to herself, "My little grandson has left me and become a caribou." When she got back to her camp, she sat far into the night waiting for him and crying. She heard something outside and later heard a noise again. "What can it be," she thought. It was Raised-by-his-grandmother who came into the house and said, "Take off my belt." As his grandmother loosened it, many caribou tongues fell out. "We will go after them to-morrow," he said. "Where I went, there were many caribou."

The next day, as his grandmother was carrying him along, the boy pointed the way saying, "It is over there." When they came to the top of a hill near a large lake she saw something lying on the ice. "There they are," the boy said. As they were walking along together on the lake, he said, "That young caribou, the farthest one that lies dead over there, laughed too much at me. Roast its head for me." She saw that he had killed many caribou. While he was playing with them, he bit their tongues and killed them all. They camped there by the shore of the lake, where the old woman dressed the caribou and brought them into the camp. "I am going to play with the head you roasted for me, grandmother," the boy said. He took it out-of-doors to play with, and the magpies ate it up.

After a while, without his grandmother's knowledge, the boy went to the place where those who had left them had camped. He found where they had scraped the snow from the ice to fish. All the people had frozen except his uncles who had found a bear. The uncles found the tracks of a young caribou on the ice and the spruce with which he had cleared it of snow. "Perhaps it was not just a caribou that did it," the uncles said to each other. "May be it was the small child we left behind which mother was carrying." They followed the tracks of the caribou until they came to a big lake. There they found where he had walked along with small round snowshoes. These tracks led them to the place where Raised-by-his-grandmother was living with her. They had much meat there.

3. THE DISCOVERY OF METAL BY A CAPTIVE WOMAN.¹

Once a woman was stolen by the Eskimo. After she had lived with them for some time and had a child, she went away, taking it with her. She went a long distance killing birds and rabbits for food. The child was very greedy often eating everything up away from its mother. After a time they came to a large lake where she sat and cried. While she was sitting there she saw a wolf walking through the water. She wondered how he was able to cross the lake. He came up to her and licked the tears from her eyes. She soon got up and broke off two sticks. "I want to see how deep the water is," she said to herself. She waded far out into the lake but the water was only a little below her knees. Finally, she could not see the land behind her. It grew dark but she continued to wade until morning. Toward evening of the next day, there was something behind that looked like land. "The Eskimo must be following me," she thought. Ahead of her there also seemed to be land. When she came close to the shore, whatever it was behind her was also approaching. She walked very fast; the water was always at the same depth. When she came to the land, she found that it was a vast herd of caribou that was following her. She had only an awl with her but tying it to a stick she sat with it by the trail. As they came by her, she speared them. There were so many of them that they looked like land. They continued passing her until the trail was worn down so deep that only their horns stuck up. When she had killed a large number, she began drying the meat so that she could carry it with her. "I am going to leave that greedy boy behind," she said to herself. "I will make some soup for him, in a paunch."

"My son, wait here for me, I am going to carry the meat to the top of the hill," she said to him. She started away without him. When she came to the top of the first hill she looked back and saw that he was still sitting there, eating. She went on to the top of another hill and from there she could still see him eating. The woman walked along alone. When it was night she saw a fire toward which she continued walking. She walked on for many days and nights. Every night she could see the fire. When she came to it, she found it was metal. She gathered up the best pieces and

Pettitot secured this myth at Cold Lake in 1881 with the interesting additional incident of the woman gradually sinking into the mountain, pp. 417-422. This conclusion of the story was also given by the informant from whom text 13 was secured. He added that the shallow place crossed by the woman was caused by the body of a giant who fell there in a combat.

placed them in her blanket and carried them with her. As she went back she piled stones on top of each other on the tops of all the hills, so that she would know the way if she wished to return. Finally, she came to some kind of people whom she did not know. When they saw that she had metal they asked her where she got it. "Very far away, in that direction, there is one hill of nothing else. It was there that I found it." "Take us to it," they said to her. She went with these people who are believed to have been Frenchmen.¹ Ever after, they knew about metal and were the only people who possessed it. The stones which she placed one above the other were always to be seen after that. They say the stones have now grown to be very large.

4. A MAN-EATING MONSTER.

A man was walking alone one time when something happened to him. Although he could not see anything when he looked about, he took his knife and began slashing the air as he turned from side to side. He found himself tied up worse than before and that he had been caught in sunbeams which someone had set for a snare. After a time he heard someone coming along, saying to himself, "I think I feel something." Before the person came to him, the man hit himself and covered himself with his own blood. The giant came to him and thinking him dead put him in a sack. It was the giant, Holdile, who eats men. He started away carrying the man on his back. He put him down occasionally to rest. The man tried to make no noise but sniffled in spite of himself. "I heard something," the giant said and took the load off. Then he tickled the man all over on his hands, feet, and body. The man was unusually powerful and was able to refrain from laughing. He put him back in the sack and carried him to his home. He hung the sack on a tree and went away to the top of a hill to cut some sticks with which to make spits for roasting the kidneys.

When he had gone away, the man began to swing himself gently in the sack, until he fell down. The young ones called out, "Father, your caribou is alive." The man jumped up, put ashes in the children's mouths and ran away. The giant ran after him. They came to an island that lay in the midst of the muskeg. They ran around it until he was tired. The giant shouted to the man. "My son, make a fire for me, I am cold." He had been sweating and his clothes were wet. They stood by the fire drying themselves. The giant hung his cape up to dry and lay down with his back to the fire. Soon the man broke a piece of wood. "What did you do that for?" asked the giant. "I am going to fix the fire with it," the man said. Then he told him, "Grandfather, your cape fell into the fire." The man had pushed it in with the stick. He struck the giant and killed him with the same stick that he had used to push the cape into the fire. After a time, he came to life again. The man ran away but the giant ran after him. The giant is still hunting men.

5. CROW-HEAD.

Crow-head was living with his grandmother. While he was away looking at his nets, some girls came to visit her. They laughed at his blanket, made of crow skin with the bills of the crows joined together all about its border, which was hanging in the house. When Crow-head came back from his nets, he said to his grandmother, "Who has been laughing at my blanket?" "No one laughed at your blanket," she said. "I see the marks of their laughing on it," he replied. "There was no one here in your absence," his grandmother said. "People were not here. But their laughing shows. Because they laughed at my blanket, may the Cree get them all!" "What shall I do then?" said his grandmother. "I will take you back north," he said. At night, he heard the people fighting with the Cree. All those who had laughed at his blanket were killed. He himself crawled under a birchbark dish. The Cree threw all the clothes into the fire. Then they threw in the birchbark dish, but it jumped out again. Again, they threw it in, and again it jumped out. Then they held it in the fire with a stick and a squirrel ran out of the fire from it. The Cree fought with the squirrel until they thought they had killed it. Then he turned himself to a hair and went through the hearts of all the Cree and killed them. After that, he went to his grandmother whom the Cree had killed, put his head down by her, and began to cry. He was there a long time without going to sleep. Soon his grandmother was alive again and sat there hunting for the lice in his head.

Once, when he was living with the people, there was a young man of whom he was very jealous. After a while, the people all went out to their canoes, after swans. As they were paddling about, he met this young man. Crow-head himself, had no swans; only the young man had succeeded in killing them. He overturned the young man's canoe and caused him to drown. Taking the swans, he paddled back with them. When they were boiled, and were placed before Crow-head he said, "I will not eat the swans because I love only my young friend." After a long time, the others looked for the young man and found him drowned. "We will kill him," they said, and went back after Crow-head. When they tried to spear him, he hit the points of their spears so that they could not kill him. They fought with him a long time and tried hard to kill him but were unable to do so. Crow-head used to fight with the people and kept killing them.

6. EBEDAHOLTIHE.

Once the Chipewyan and the Cree both came to the same place to fish. It was snowing and blowing, so they could not see anything. Soon one man came where another was sitting by his line. "You are the only one who has caught any fish," he said. When the man looked back at him, he saw it was a Cree to whom he had spoken. Then he killed him with a spear and told his friends. Immediately, the Cree and the Chipewyan came together. There were many of them and they continued fighting each other until only two men were alive; one Chipewyan and one Cree. When these two had tried in vain to kill each other, they walked together to the lake. The Cree proposed that they should sit there and fish. "I have no hook," said the Chipewyan. The Cree took the larger muscle from his arm and the Chipewyan the small muscle. They fished with these for hook and line. After a while, the Cree went to look at the hook. "I did not kill anything," he told the Chipewyan when he returned. "You must have gone to it too soon. If I had gone, there would have been something." "Well, you go and look at it," said the Cree. When he came to the hook, he caught two trout.

After a short time, many Cree came to the lake. The Cree man then told the Chipewyan that there was one dangerous Cree named, Ebedaxoltihe. When they came up to them, one said to the Cree, "Many young men came here with you, I suppose that one sitting with you is one of your relatives." "He is a dangerous man whom I have tried in vain to kill," replied the Cree. "Do not bother him; he will make trouble for you." Ebedaxoltihe, said, "Fire is not disturbed by songs. Pile up a lot of wood for him." Then they built a big fire and began to push the Chipewyan toward it. As he began to burn, he said to himself, "I wish otters would come here." Soon otters came. When those who were trying to burn him saw the otters running toward him, they ran away. The Chipewyan followed by the otters ran after them. As he came near a man, he would catch up an otter and throw it at him. The otters bit them and they died. He threw two of them at his friend who caught them. When he threw one at Ebedaxoltihe, it nearly killed him. When he pushed his head up through the bloody snow, he struck him on the crown of his head. He gave one of the otters to his friend. "Now, you see, I told you he was a dangerous man," said the young Cree.

After that, the Chipewyan went to live with the Cree. When a tipi had been put up, the Cree called to him, "Come here." When the Chipewyan was near he called to him to come in, and made a place for him on the opposite side of the fire. The Cree had two wives one sitting on either side of him. He picked up the one sitting near the door and threw her across the fire to the Chipewyan who caught her and threw her back. Then he took the wife sitting beyond the fire and threw her to him but he threw her back. He threw again the one sitting next to the door. She caught the Chipewyan about the neck and he married her. After that, he lived with the Cree.

He lived with the Cree a long time after that. He had children which were growing up. One time when he was away hunting he saw tracks of some people and followed them until he came where they were living. He found two of his sisters gathering firewood. He went with them to the village. One of his moccasins was torn and one of his sisters sewed it up for him. Taking a sack of red paint, he started home. When he came back to his tipi, his wife noticed that the moccasin had been mended. Her husband asked what she was thinking about. The wife, without replying, hung up his moccasins.

He went over there again and told the people what had happened. They talked it over and said they would come and kill them. The Chipewyan who was living with the Cree told them not to come near his tipi which they would recognize since it would be of untanned skins. When he came home he told his wife that his head was aching and asked her to make a tipi for him of untanned skin and pitch it to one side in which he might lie. She made a tipi for him and he went into it with all his family. He told his wife not to let the child go out of doors. In the night, he heard the Chipewyan coming. He went out immediately and came to his friend. "I will fight you again," he said. "This time I will not think about living. Do what you intend to, spear me here." "Put your spear down near by," he said. Several of the Chipewyan's relatives were killed but they killed all the Cree who were living there. The son of the Chipewyan had gone out and also been killed; but his wife and the remainder of his family were alive. The Chipewyan was about to kill some of his own people because of it but they gave him a young man of the same age in the place of his son who had been killed. Then he was satisfied and went with the Chipewyan and afterward lived with them.

7. HIS-LEG-TREMBOLES.

Once when the Chipewyan were returning from an unsuccessful war party against the Cree, they were approaching the top of a hill. His-leg-trembles was far behind them. "I wonder what those two things are, sitting there ahead of us," one of them said. When they started up the hill their blankets were blown back. His-leg-trembles came up to the party and started to climb the hill. "I want to see what they are," he said. "Do not go up there, there are some white bears living under the top of the hill," the others said to him. "I like to see something frightful," he said, "I am going to look at them." "No, do not," the others urged him. "I am going to look," he said. The string which held the blanket around his neck broke when it was blown back by the wind. He ran around the two white bears who were sitting there waiting for him, making the ashes fly until nothing could be seen. When the ashes settled, they saw the two bears lying with their heads away from each other and His-leg-trembles standing a little way from them leaning upon his little old spear. That man could run so fast that nothing could catch him. Without running very hard, he could keep along beside a young caribou.

At another time the Cree had put some willow sticks on a lake making them look like the horns of caribou. The Chipewyan thought they were caribou and hung pieces of clothing about the lake to prevent the caribou from running out and began to hunt them. While they were going to their several positions, they came where His-leg-trembles was sitting. On a point of land nearly opposite the side, they thought they heard a noise. It sounded like shouting but they were not certain. Then a big woman came near. "Niece, what has happened," they asked. "'The Cree have put up sticks,' Thananye told me. Then I started from there in a straight line, running sidewise that I might go faster. Over in the middle of the lake, I saw the Cree fighting. When I was about to run into them, I stopped. I slipped and fell under the Cree. 'I will spear that mean little child,' one of them thought to himself. They were holding their spears ready for me, but the spear points all came together behind me. Then I saw him standing there, it was so quickly done." He had killed all the Cree.

8. THE JACKFISH THAT BECAME A MAN.¹

A large eagle caught a jackfish and was carrying it to a tree. It fell into the middle of the lake and lived there until it grew to be a big fish. Finally, it was caught in a net. A girl, while eating it, suddenly stopped. She had a child on which there were fish scales. Her father started to throw it away but relented and gave the girl permission to raise it. When the child became a man, he used to tell his story in songs.

"When I was a small jackfish I stuck my nose in the grass by the shore. An eagle took me up suddenly and started with me toward his nest. I fell back into the middle of the lake and became a large jackfish. Once, when swimming through the narrows, I thought I smelled something. As I swam around I thought I saw a small fish and bit him. I broke the fish line but could not eat because the hook was in my throat. Soon after, while swimming through the narrows, I thought I saw some algae but it was a net and I was caught. 'It is only a poor jackfish, just skin and bones,' he said of me and threw me by the shore. As I lay there I thought to myself, 'I wish a young girl who is pregnant would roast my tail.' Soon a nearly grown girl came there. 'I am going to roast that jackfish's tail,' I heard her say. She began to eat me, but as she was swallowing the last bit, I caused her belly to shake. She caught her breath and stopped chewing. I became a person."

This is what he told by means of songs in the sweat lodges. They found out from him what kind of a person he was.

Long ago, a man used to know something like this.

9. CEREMONY FOR OTTER.

A man in a dream heard some otters say. "They will kill us all, ahead there in the narrow. I am the only one who will be able to run away." He heard the otters singing this as they walked. When they came there to the narrows, he killed all of the otters except the one who had said this. He escaped. "That is why otters now come to me," he said. Sometimes when one sings that song the otters do not come to him because he only laughs.

¹ This was given as a "story." The interpreter, Ennou, insisted that it was only a story, but the relator immediately explained that it was ceremonial as the context plainly shows it to be.

The objects used were small pieces of the fat from the tail of an otter, piece of moose tongue, tissue from the inside of bear's tongue, "stone" from the head of a fish, tooth of a weasel, silk thread and beaver scent. These are tied to the hook as a charm.

10. MOOSE AND RABBIT.

One time Moose and Rabbit were having a contest. They were then of the same size and were without names. They were fighting to see who would be moose.

"The one who is the stronger will be moose," one of them proposed. They began to wrestle near the fire. Rabbit was pushed near the fire and stepped into it with both his hind feet which were burned. Then moose fell back and singed his rump in the fire. Since then the rumps of moose look as if they had been burned. Rabbit's feet were so drawn up that he could not be moose.

11. BEAR AND SQUIRREL.¹

Bear once said, "There will only be night. In the summer, when the nights are not long, I cannot find anything good to eat. For that reason there shall only be night." Then Squirrel, who was his younger brother, replied, "If there is only night how would you manage to live without being able to see?" "I could find food by smelling it," Bear replied. "But," asked Squirrel, "what would you do if something should stick in your nostrils?" "Oh, I could feel for food with my paw," Bear suggested. "Well, but if you should stick something in your paw, what then?" Squirrel asked. "Why, then I would roll around until I found something," Bear said. "But if something should stick through your body, you would kill yourself," Squirrel warned him. "Well, then, let there be daylight," conceded Bear.

"Come let us have some contests," said Bear. "The one who jumps the farthest will be Bear." Bear won. "Let us see who can jump the highest over a tree," Bear again proposed. Bear won again. "Let us see who can run around this small lake first," Bear said. Because Bear was the larger (being the elder brother) and Squirrel the smaller, Bear was first to run around the lake. Bear had beaten him each time, but not fairly.

Squirrel, still saying, "I will be Bear," began to cry. His eyes became red and the tears made stripes below his eyes. Finally he said, "I shall not be good for anything. I shall just amuse the children." Then he climbed a spruce and became small.

Bear again spoke, "When there is no other meat, I will be a supply for them." He ran along the side of the world and went inland where he became large.

12. BEAVER AND MUSKRAT.

Beaver and Muskrat were brothers living together by a lake. The oldest could swim very fast. Beaver said to Muskrat, the older brother, "Lend me your tail; I want to try it." "No, I will not lend it to you, for any length of time," Muskrat replied. "Well then, we will exchange tails for a short time," Beaver said.

Muskrat gave Beaver his tail with which he was able to swim fast. After Beaver had swam around for a while Muskrat suggested that they exchange hands. "First put my tail on me again," Beaver said. He put it back in the proper position but Beaver put Muskrat's tail on edgewise. Since then he has not been able to swim fast. He became angry toward his young brother. He has been mean tempered ever since, and that is why he is called bedjede dzen "mean muskrat."

13. THE BOY WHO BECAME STRONG.¹

In the beginning a woman was walking along with her boy. They came where a bi-colored ribbon lay on a tree. "I am going to take it," the boy said to his mother. "No, you must not," she told him, "it belongs to someone." When they had walked on a little way the boy asked his mother to go on ahead as he wished privacy for a moment. When she was out of sight he hurried back, took the ribbon, cut off a piece two yards long and tied it around his waist. Because of that ribbon he became very strong so that he was able to tear up even large trees by the roots. His mother who did not know the source of his strength wondered how he could do this.

They went along in this manner until they came where two man-eating giants lived. There was much human flesh hanging in the house. When they went in the boy was not afraid of the giants but looked around at everything in the house. "Feed us," said one of the giants to the boy. He took up a knife as if he were about to kill him, but the boy was not frightened. He began to handle all the implements² and then the giants began to be afraid and let him alone. The mother married one of the giants but the boy lived by himself near by. He stayed there a long time making all sorts of things and the giants were afraid of him because he was so strong.

¹ Prof. G. L. Kittredge has identified this tale as one of the "Blue Band" group common in Northern Germany and Scandinavia. It will be found in Müllenhoff, Karl, "Sagen Märchen und Lieder der Herzogthümer Schleswig Holstein u. Lauenburg," pp. 416-420, Kiel, 1845. A translation is in Thorpe, Benjamin, "Yule-Tide Stories," pp. 431-435, London, 1853.

² Very heavy ones, of course, since they belonged to giants.

After a time his mother became sick. When she had been ill some time and it seemed she could not live the boy came to her and said, "Mother what can I do so that you may live?" The mother replied, "Way over there are many good berries. If I could eat them I might live." "Then I will get them for you," the boy replied. He started out, and when he had gone many miles found some good berries which he thought must be the ones his mother meant. He found one hundred large panthers guarding them. The panthers were all asleep and he stepped along among the sloughs until he came within a mile when one of the panthers woke. "A boy is stealing our berries," he called to the others. Then the boy seized one of the panthers and with it as a club killed all the others. Taking the berries, he went back to his mother who recovered after having eaten them. The boy lived outside as he had done before.

After a long time his mother fell sick again. She lost flesh so that it seemed she could not live. The boy came to his mother again and asked her what had happened. "Son, I shall not live," she replied. "Mother, what can I do that you may live?" he asked her. "Way over there is some water which smells a little. If you could bring me some of that I might live," she told him. He started after it and found water that smelled a little hanging in the top of a tree near a house which was standing there. The boy began to climb after it, but when he was half way up a mean man came out of the house. "Boy, you will die. You are stealing my water," he said. He was carrying a huge iron cane. The boy came down the tree, took the cane from him and struck him on the crown of his head with it, killing him. He then went in the house and looked all around. When he went upstairs he saw a young woman sitting there. "Why do you sit here?" he asked. "A mean man stole me, and I had a child for him long ago," she replied. "Well, go to your home wherever it is. I have killed the man who held you a prisoner. Do not be afraid," he told her. He took some of the water and carried it back to his mother. He gave her some of it and she recovered. The boy lived outside as before.

Again after a long time the boy's mother was dangerously sick. The boy said, "Mother, what is the one thing I can do so that you may live?" "My son, it is something difficult," she said. "I must know what is the source of your strength, on that condition only may I live." "Then you are planning my death," replied the boy. "I took that ribbon which we passed long ago and tied it around me. I am strong by means of that." He gave the ribbon to his mother saying, "Now do whatever you intend."

When the woman had tied the ribbon around her waist she became strong. "My son, let us walk over there," she proposed to her son. She began to pull up trees, even large ones. They came to a very large spruce. "Climb this one," she said to the boy. The boy began climbing it with his mother behind him. She pricked his eyes out and left him.

The boy, blind and helpless, started off alone. He soon heard a sledge coming, drawn by dogs. He could hear the bells and knew someone was approaching. When they came up to him, one of the men said, "This is the sort we are looking for. We are taking the unfortunate with us." They brought him to the settlement and gave him into the care of an old man. This old man, who was cook for the big chief, loved the boy. He lived with him a long time.

This big chief, for whom the old man was cook, sent out invitations to bring about the marriage of his daughters. The men were to gather and the daughters were to make their own selections. On the day the selections were to be made, the old man who was the cook said to the blind young man, "My grandchild, let us go over there where the chief's daughters are to be married and see the people." "Grandfather," the young man replied, "it is no use for me to go. I cannot see anything and the people will just make fun of me." "Oh, that does not matter," said the old man, "we will go anyway." The young man finally consented and the old man led him to the house and gave him a seat on the floor just inside the door.

They found the house already full. There were many minor chiefs there. The big chief had three daughters two of whom had already chosen rich men for their husbands. The remaining daughter chose the blind young man. She was the girl he had rescued many years before when his mother had sent him for the water. When he killed the mean man and sent her home, she had made a vow that if she ever saw him again she would marry him. As soon as he came into the house she recognized him. Her father was very angry and said, "My daughter, because you have chosen to marry a blind man I will not keep you. Go away from me to-day somewhere where I will never see you again." Then he gave her much money and provided her with a large boat and servants.

They went away in the boat. The young man was not happy although he was married, for he thought she had taken him because he was unfortunate and she pitied him, but his wife loved him to the limit of her ability and kissed him. When it was noon and they were stopping to eat she proposed to her blind husband that while the servants were making tea they should go to a neighboring hill. "No," the young man said, "you are only planning to take me there to desert me. I will not walk with you." "Oh, no," his wife replied, "I have loved you for a long time because you saved my life. It is only on that account I wish to lead you there." "Well," consented the blind man, "Lead me there." They started up the hill and soon came to a large lake. A large moose was approaching feeling its way along as if searching for something. "A blind moose is coming this way," said the wife to her husband. "It acts as if it were searching for something." "Let us watch it," said the man. When the moose came to the water it waded in, put its head under water and held it there some time. When it raised its head, it looked about. It put its head down again and held it under the water. When it raised its head its eyes were all right again. Then the woman said, "The moose put its head in the water and its eyes became good again. You do that." "I will not do it," replied the man. "It is because you wish me to drown you say that." "No," said the woman, "the moose's eyes are certainly good. You do that too, and the same thing will happen to you." "Well, I will do it," he said. The woman lead him to the lake. When he had held his head in the water some time he raised it again, "Well, your eyes seem a little improved," his wife said. "You look like a small woman," he told her. "Well, do it again," she advised him. He put his head in the water again. When he raised his head he said, "I can certainly see."

Then they went back to their servants. The young man said, "I will go where my mother is." He started toward his mother's house accompanied by the servants but without his wife. When he came near to the place where he used to live he went close and saw that the ribbon was indeed lying there. At night they went into the house. He took the ribbon and tied it on again. The next night when the sun had set he went there again and killed his mother and his two fathers.

Then he went again to his wife and they returned to her father's house. When they came there his father-in-law saw his eyes were good again. He welcomed him gladly, and urged him to live with him and promised he should have all he possessed. The young man did so and became a great chief.¹

14. HOW LOT KILLED THE DUCKS.

There were many ducks flying about. When Lot came there he could not get a shot at them. Near by, was a large hill above the top of which the ducks were flying about. He came there and seeing a tall spruce climbed it. As the ducks flew by, he shot and killed many of them. He is the only man who knows how to kill ducks in this manner.

15. ENNOU'S HUNTING TRIP.

After there had been three weeks of cold, snow, and wind, the weather cleared. We started on the trip and camped that night six miles away. The next night we reached the base of Goose Lake where we camped for the night. As we were going along the shore, the next morning, we all saw a moose. I went toward it but did not succeed in killing it. We saw three moose that day. I shot at the nose of one which was all that could be seen of it and missed it. That was why I did not kill any that day.

We went on from there but the snow was four feet deep and I had to tramp back and forth to make a road. Finally, we came to a small lake called Big Log Lake. From there we went to Wolf Lake where we stayed for a short time. Going out from that place, I set traps for lynx. I killed one. We went on from there to the opposite side of Black Fox Lake. We camped there three weeks during which time I killed nine lynx. We walked to White Fish Lake. I killed one lynx on the way. There was a beaver house at the lake. I chiseled through it with the help of a young woman. While we were there some wolves came after us. We had no gun. We killed four beaver at White Fish Lake outlet.

I went back for the traps and other property. It was a two day's journey, but I brought back seven lynx. Starting down the White Fish River one morning, we came where there were beaver living, five of which we killed. From there we went to Big Beaver Lake where I trapped a lynx and we chiseled out three beaver and killed one mink. We then turned back, traveling over the same way we had come. Nine lynx had been caught in the traps set as we first passed over the road, but one had gotten away taking the trap. The next morning I went after this one with the dogs. With the help of the dogs, I killed, that day, one moose and a lynx. We came back from there to Goose Lake at the outlet of which we found some Indians. At the narrows there were more Indians. Finally, we came back to Cold Lake and into the Reserve and stopped at Alfos house. I had twenty-five lynx, six beavers, and one mink. I sold them to Baptiste Jacob for four hundred ninety dollars, two horses, and a spring wagon. I also bought a cow. I could not tell in a whole day all that happened on that trip.

16. THE DEATH OF EDALAKONE.

Edalakone became angry with his wife and daughter. He went away from them in his canoe, saying, "I will not live with you longer." After he had been gone two days, we went to look for him. Then next day, many joined in the search. Although it was summer, we found his tracks which we followed until noon. While we were stopping for lunch one of the two dogs which had left with him returned to our fire. There were eight men and two women in the company. When we had eaten, we again followed the tracks. After we had gone about half a mile, the three of us who were ahead, thought we saw something. An old man named Samuel Egu asked us to wait for him while he went ahead. When he had gone forward about twenty paces, he stopped. There was Edalakone with one of the dogs lying at his back. Samuel started to laugh but did not. Edalakone lay there dead. His going away angry into the brush did not turn out well for him. The others came there where we were.

INTRODUCTION.

The Athapascan languages of the North are usually referred to as the Déné from the word which in many dialects means a man who speaks that tongue. It is in the North that we find the largest continuous territory occupied by these people. They have all of the continent north of the Churchill and Peace Rivers on the east side of the Rocky Mountains and on the western side of these mountains, the territory as far south as 57° 30' except that in all parts the Eskimo and other tribes hold the coast. It remains to be determined how many languages and dialects are spoken in this territory and the degree of their relationship.

The Chipewyan are in the southeastern portion of this territory along the Athabaska River and Lake and the lakes and streams draining into the Churchill River. There are minor dialectic variations within this area but no thorough study of them has been made.

The Chipewyan language has been treated by Petitot in his *Dictionnaire de la langue Déné-Dindjie*¹ which includes the Chipewyan. This work has a comparative grammar of the Mackenzie languages in the introduction and tables of conjugations as a supplement. Father Petitot has also published a text of Chipewyan in "Traditions indiennes du Canada Nord-Ouest."²

Father Laurent Le Goff who has been with these people for forty-five years has published a number of books in Chipewyan, using both the syllabic characters and the Roman alphabet, for the use of his parishioners and co-workers. Of particular interest is his "Grammaire Montagnaise ou Chipeweyane" published in 1887. It is also pleasing to know that Father Le Goff has a voluminous dictionary in manuscript which he hopes to publish shortly.

To Father Le Goff and his friends the writer wishes to apologize for his entry upon this field and for this publication put forth after so short a study of the dialect. The chief purpose of the visit was to actually hear a Déné language in order to have a conception of the sounds used that a comparison with the other Athapascan languages, particularly those of the Pacific Coast and the Southwest, might be made.

This paper has been prepared as a result, hoping that the description of the sounds of the language, somewhat more detailed than Father Le Goff has given, and the illustrative tracings and comparative references to the other groups may prove of value. The material furnished by the texts of the preceding number of this volume and word lists has been analyzed and presented in the order followed in the Hupa¹ and Kato² languages. It will only be necessary to place corresponding sections of these papers and the present one side by side to obtain a comparative view of their relationship.

It is desired to call attention here to the large number of simple substantive elements, monosyllabic nouns, names of parts of the body, terms of relationship, etc., which occur also either on the Pacific Coast or in the Southwest. Of the verbal elements not only are most of the prefixes and stems common to other regions but complex and phonetically modified forms are easily traceable.

It is the phonetic changes that make the language nearly unintelligible to one knowing only southern dialects. The chief difference is in the presence of surd, sonant, and glottally affected th (ʈ, θ, θ') where most of the Pacific and the Southern dialects have surd, sonant, and glottally affected tongue point consonants (z, s, ts, ts'). The sonant stops also are fully sonant instead of intermediate and are lightly articulated approaching continuants.

There occur in the Chipewyan both nouns and verbs for which the people of California and Arizona would have little use, such as eθûn, caribou; de nî, moose; 'ai', snowshoes; na tse de, to chisel for beaver. It may be possible in the future to show that the natural features of the north are provided with simple definite names and terms while those peculiar to the south have compound names and new formations, or the reverse. If any preponderance of simplicity should be shown to exist in favor of one locality, the argument would be a strong one that migrations originated in that quarter.

PHONETICS.

TRACINGS.

Those unfamiliar with the apparatus and work of Rousselot will find a brief description of the method in the American Anthropologist.¹ A kymograph is used with a horizontal cylinder 25 cm. long and $13\frac{1}{2}$ cm. in diameter driven by a spring clock at a speed of 7 revolutions a minute. White paper is put about this cylinder and given a thin coat of smoke with a candle. A light flexible horn point rests on this paper and moves to the right or left on the end of a lever which is attached to the center of a rubber tambour. For breath tracings a mouthpiece is held rather firmly to the lips and the full force of the emitted breath sent through a tube to the tambour. Variations in the force of the breath are shown by the major movement of the tracing point while the vocal murmur is represented by the fine regular vibrations. The closures of stop consonants are shown by the low straight horizontal lines; the releases by the vertical lines; aspiration by a continued high elevation; and glottal affection by sudden retraction. The continuant consonants result in varying curved elevations, smooth when surd, and with superimposed vibrations when sonant. The liquid r shows coarse vibrations caused by the movement of the tongue tip. The sonant l has one such movement only. The vowels have strong regular vibrations on lines rising, falling, or straight, according to adjoining consonants and varying stress. The semi-vowels usually show less prominent vibrations and less elevated lines.

It is probable that even in these tracings change in pitch can be measured by counting and comparing the number of vibrations in given lengths of the lines. Stress would be shown, other conditions being equal, by the elevation of the line since the tracing point goes higher with greater strength of the breath but this force of the air column is dependent upon the configuration of the mouth and the degree of the opening of the glottis. It is only possible then to judge stress when the same sound occurs in the syllables under consideration. The duration or length of the sounds may be measured by referring to the base line drawn by revolving the cylinder before removing the paper. This line has 49 mm. to a second of time or about .02 seconds to a millimeter.

The tracings were made from Jean Baptise Ennou, at Lloydminster, Saskatchewan in a single day. The apparatus arrived in bad condition but after repairs were made, proved to be available for the use desired. The speed in particular seemed to be reliable. Rousselet tambours 2 cm. in diameter freshly covered with good rubber were used; the Marey tambours of 5 cm. proving unsuitable.

Figs. 1 to 26 were made to show the degree of sonancy; a second tambour, having attachment to the larynx furnished a synchronous tracing uninterfered with by mouth movements. In Figs. 5, 7, 8, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 21, 25, and 26 the larynx tracing is below and the breath tracing above. In the remainder the breath tracing is below. Tracings from the nose to show the nasalization of the vowels were attempted but proper adjustment could not be secured in the time available.

The numerous breath tracings were selected to illustrate the more important words and elements in the dialect. They should prove valuable in distinguishing the sonant, aspirated surd, and glottally affected surd stops, the sonancy of the continuants, and the duration of all the sounds. Comparison with published tracings of Hupa¹ and Kato² words will show interesting similarities and differences.

VOWELS.³

The original, underived vowels appear to be Italian a, open e, closed or continental i, closed o, and closed u. Besides these a closed ē occurs, perhaps influenced by neighboring closed sounds like y; an open i, short and occurring only in closed syllables; and a neutral û which seems usually to represent a, but sometimes i. These vowels occur as nasal as well as oral sounds. The nasality is always due to the absorption of n which originally followed the vowel and which reappears when in the word structure a vowel follows, or when the utterance is deliberate. There was no opportunity for a graphic study of vowels except as they are represented in the tracings where they are available for a study of length only.

SEMI-VOWELS.

The semi-vowels y and w both occur, the former rather frequently, but the latter only under such circumstances as to point to fully sonant g as its origin. This is brought about by the neighborhood of a rounded vowel, ō or ū. Often y has somewhat of a spirant sound especially in its earlier portion. Tracings of intervocalic y show a definite weakening of the vibrations and sometimes a bodily lowering of the line, due no doubt to the constriction of the mouth passage. (Figs. 1-3, 74, 81, 201.)

NASALS.

The most frequently occurring nasal is n, which is found initially, between vowels, and finally (Figs. 7, 25). In the last position it often disappears, resulting in a nasal vowel. In other cases it is preserved, but no reason for these differing results has been found. In many cases the glottal stop follows n written n', but perhaps might have been written as consistently n' (Fig. 20). When followed by a palatal stop the nasal takes that position also and has been written ñ. In only a few words has m been found. The sonant bilabial stop b is the only one of that series. It is possible that m has become b since if b existed originally one would expect to find also the aspirated and glottally affected surds. Many of the Athapaskan dialects have m but not b.

LIQUIDS.

A tongue tip, trilled r is frequently heard especially from certain speakers. It is very curious but certainly true that other sounds may be substituted in every case for this r with entire correctness. The word for meat, is pronounced bet or ber by the same speakers. In a few other words a final t gives place occasionally to r. Some individuals habitually pronounce r when the position is intervocalic where others use d. In the latter case such a transition is not surprising since the d is fully sonant and the trilled r results from several light contacts instead of one firm one (Figs. 16, 53).

Both Petitot and Le Goff write Greek ρ for a sound described as uvular r, "r grassévant." They employ this to represent a fully sonant palatal sound which is ordinarily completely stopped (g), but in some cases a continuant (g). In the latter circumstance, however, it lacks any decided flapping of the uvula and certainly does not impress the ear as does German or Parisian uvular r.

A lateral liquid, l, is prominent in all positions in the syllable (Figs. 12, 22, 66, 76, 98, 115, 128). It happens that no formative element beginning with it stands at the beginning of words. It shows morphological connection with the surd spirant L.

SPIRANTS.

There are three interdental spirants: a sonant written ð, a surd written θ, and a glottally affected surd written θ' (Figs. 4, 6, 7, 8, 41, 45, 80, 89, 105). The first two closely resemble English soft and hard th. The tip of the tongue is placed against the edge of the upper incisors and the air allowed to flow on each side of this contact. These sounds occur where the Pacific and southern languages have z, s, dz, ts, and ts'. It is possible that affricatives are sometimes uttered which should have been written tθ, dθ, and tθ' (Figs. 4, 43, 123, 207) but in only one or two cases was an initial stop strong enough to attract attention although it was looked on as a logical probability.

A series of spirants and affricatives is formed between the front of the tongue and the palate not far back of the teeth. These are very similar to English z and s, but were written even in the same words as j (zh) and c (sh). (Figs. 5, 8, 10, 38, 48, 74, 93). In the texts they have been printed as originally recorded. It was hoped some reason might appear for this variation although it was recognized that they always correspond to dj, j, c, tc, and tc' as they occur in other Athapascan dialects recorded. It may be that the sounds are really intermediate between z and zh as they exist in English and therefore heard alternately.

Closely connected with the liquid l is the spirant L which is formed at the same place, between the side of the tongue and the molar teeth. It seems to begin with one approximation of the tongue to the teeth followed by a decided vibration of the surface but no bodily movement of the side of the tongue. The sound impresses the ear as decidedly spirant closely akin in that respect to s (Figs. 32, 33, 93, 130). A glottally affected surd l written L' occurs which in some cases at least might be regarded as an affricative, that is as t followed by surd l followed by glottal closure (Figs. 5, 34, 38, 83).

A palatal spirant, x, in which more or less bodily vibration of the uvula takes place occurs (Figs. 51, 52, 56, 174, 178). The vibration of the uvula is plainly evident in the irregular waves shown in several of the figures referred to above. Often, however, this sound was hard to distinguish by ear from h, presumably a glottal spirant, and much confusion occurred in recording it, which has mostly been reproduced in the printed texts. A sonant spirant in this position has been written g, but it seems not to be a definitely independent sound (Figs. 79, 99, 102, 127, 152, 153, 220), and appears to be the result of incomplete contact of the fully sonant palatal stop. In certain words the continuant was always heard while in many words it was only occasionally recorded. In one or two cases an affricative, gg, seemed to be present.

That h, the glottal spirant, occurs independently of x, the palatal spirant, seems certain (Figs. 135, 191, 200). When intervocalic as in other Athapascan languages and English, the tracings often show a sonant which the ear does not differentiate from the surd (Figs. 201, 207). When the glottal spirant occurs after vowels it is written ' since the use of h might be mistaken as modifying the quality of the vowel (Fig. 219).

STOPS.

Only the sonant bilabial stop is found in Chipewyan. The tracings obtained show it to be fully sonant, that is, sonant during the closure as is the case in English (Figs. 9, 53, 78, 151). It is surprising, however, that Petitot recorded it sometimes as p. This probably was due not to a lack of sonancy but to some other peculiarity.

The dental series has a fully sonant stop, d (Figs. 10, 13, 14). When it is intervocalic it is often replaced by a tongue tip trilled r (Figs. 15, 16) but this seems to be due to dialectic mixture rather than to change or development within the dialect.

The surd of this series, t, is very strongly aspirated, much more so than in emphatic English syllables. The average length of the aspiration is .12 seconds, as long as ordinary simple sounds (Figs. 11, 54, 55). The passage is considerably constricted resulting sometimes in a vibration of the tongue (?) which appears in Fig. 18. The glottally affected dental t' is not different from that described for Hupa and Kato and doubtless is made in the same manner with a glottal closure closely following the release. Compare Figs. 57, 85, 121, 129 with a Hupa tracing, Pl. 8, Fig. 6, and Kato Pl. 7, Fig. 7.

In the palatal position there is a fully sonant stop, g (Figs. 80, 108, 123, 193). The contact is light and often not complete, resulting in a continuant g or, in the neighborhood of ō or ū a semi-vowel, w (Fig. 198 compared with Fig. 197). Since both Fathers Le Goff and Petitot write ρ and describe this sound as an uvular r even where it is evidently stopped, some peculiarity of sound was looked for but nothing particularly suggesting such a sound was heard.

A sound evidently originally different is the intermediate palatal stop ġ the sonancy of which begins with the release. (Figs. 19, 22, 235). The surd (k) is strongly aspirated corresponding to t (Figs. 24, 101, 112). The glottally affected surd k' is harsh in sound and quite distinct from the other members of the palatal series. The harshness is undoubtedly due to a vibration of the surface of the back of the tongue, and perhaps of the soft palate also, resulting from the diminished air pressure back of the preceding contact. In Fig. 72 these vibrations are reproduced. With this tracing compare a Hupa tracing.¹

Of the aspirated and glottally affected surds there are labialized varieties written kw (Figs. 20, 69, 248) and k'w (Fig. 117). The w of the former ss probably surd; in both cases the sound is probably a simple one and a single character should have been written since the sounds may have been originally independent of the unlabialized stops. It is possible that the intermediate is also labialized (Fig. 96).

The glottal stop ʔ, strong and regular, is found as an important part of certain words and word-parts. In other cases it was sometimes noticed and written and at other times overlooked if in reality it was uttered. It is probably present before every vowel not preceded by other consonants (Fig. 27). It tends to disappear after spirants but is prominent when intervocalic (Figs. 39, 156, 183, 198). A stop coming before the glottal stop becomes glottally affected. At the end of words ending in vowels (Figs. 26, 33, 62, 113) it has sometimes been confused with the aspiration ʰ, since the glottal stop is usually released with a similar aspiration. It appears to follow n (Figs. 20, 43) and other consonants in which case the stops are written with ' after them.

AFFRICATIVES.

By affricatives is meant a stop plus a spirant. The union is usually a permanent one, the sounds being originally associated or derived from a simple sound. Theoretically, there are three members of each series: an intermediate stop followed by a sonant continuant; a surd stop followed by surd continuant; and a surd stop followed by a surd continuant with glottal closure. The dental series is fully represented with dz or dj (Figs. 17, 58, 59), ts or tc (Figs. 24, 61, 62, 63) and ts' or tc' (Figs. 65, 66, 67, 68). A complete interdental series might be expected, in fact Father Le Goff writes it. In only a few cases was a stop heard preceding the continuants in this series but the tracings in some instances indicate stops. For tθ examine Figs. 4, 43; dθ results from morphological elements being brought together (Fig. 207), while θ'i, "again" (Fig. 6) is written by Father Le Goff tθ'i (tθ'i). Of the lateral series dl is frequent (Figs. 37, 40) and there seems to be a stop in Figs. 34, 38, 39, and perhaps in every case where L' is written. There is, however, no clear example of tL, the sound in all cases appearing to be a spirant not preceded by a definite contact. In one or two cases a palatal stop followed by a sonant continuant was written but there is no illustration of this in the tracings. In no case was kx heard.

¹ The first line of these gives the period of closure and the second line the portion of the consonant following the release.

to be sure the variations were not individual. The frequency with which a sound occurs with a particular length is of more significance than the average. The vowel e, for example, occurs 45 times with a length of 4 mm. (.08 sec.) which may be considered its normal duration. It seems that nearly all of the sounds are at times given double or triple length but there are too many intermediate lengths to make the matter conclusive. Only in the case of û is length definitely related to quality since the sound does not exceed 5 mm. and averages 3.5 mm.

It is of interest to note that dissyllabic words accented on the first syllable have relatively short vowels in the second. For example, dlõ ne (Fig. 37) 10:3, L'i ze (Fig. 38) 12:4, cī ne (Fig. 50) 8:5, djī ze (Fig. 94) 10:5. When in such words the accent is on the last syllable the ratio of lengths is reversed: ena (Fig. 73) 5:10, na gai (Fig. 79) 7:20, dûn nī (Fig. 88) 3:11. There are also many dissyllabic words with nearly even stress in which the lengths are quite exactly balanced. ya zã' (Fig. 113) 6:6, ts'û tcõk' (Fig. 110) 4:4, gin gaL (Fig. 182) 6:6.

Many of the words of three syllables have the middle vowel considerably the longest, and the accent seems to rest also on this syllable: da dzin ne (Fig. 83) 3.5:5:3, bes a ze (Fig. 114) 4.5:6.5:4, xai t'a zī (Fig. 124) 5:10:4, se ðe ge (Fig. 127) 6:12:4. In the greater number of these words it is the syllable of greater importance that is the longest. The greater degree of length may not be the result of stress accent but used in itself to make the syllable emphatic.

STRESS.

Something resembling the stress accent of English is heard with considerable regularity in Chipewyan. As has been said in the preceding section it rests on the syllable having the greater importance as to the meaning of the word. The word for mouse is dlõ'ne (Fig. 37). In many Athapascan languages the word is monosyllabic and is applied to rodents, e. g. Jicarilla, dlõ', prairie dogs.¹ The second syllable is weak as is clearly seen in the tracing. A few words like ena', Cree (Fig. 73) and dûn nī', moose (Fig. 88) are always accented on the final syllable. The latter word may be a verb form with the stem -nī "to make a noise"² and have the accent on the stem as is usual in verbs. Many words have two accents as, be ðûn'del ġai', his skin white (Fig. 131) in which the accent rests on the syllable meaning skin and the stem -ġai of the adjective, white.

The above statement is quite incomplete for the subject of stress is difficult in any case and requires much more observation and analysis than it was possible to give.

PITCH.

Father Le Goff credits pitch with the power of differentiating certain words and syllables as to meaning.¹ While he does not indicate variation in pitch by accent marks, he does call attention to such differences in notes. The present e'te'l kkezh (e teL k'eθ), he shoots, has the voice raised on the final syllable, the stem, while it is lowered in the past where the word is in other respects identical.²

No variation of pitch in the syllable itself as in Chinese was observed. Ordinarily, the voice is slightly lowered on the final syllable as the words were spoken in the machine; the ratio being 13:11 or nearly C to A below. In e na', Cree, and dūn nī', moose, however, the voice was held level. We have then in these words a combination of stress, length and maintained pitch coinciding to strengthen the final syllable.

ASSIMILATION.

Considerable phonetic adjustment has no doubt taken place which has not been noticed. In many cases it may be difficult to detect changes due to the influence of neighboring sounds. The following examples are quite evident.

A surd spirant makes a following continuant consonant surd.

na ne θet hwū sa, did you stay? Fig. 206; but, nas θet, I stayed.
Fig. 205.

ne ga, you make, 16, 2;³ but, was xā, let me make.

ye te gīn, she carried him, 15, 12; but, nū wūs xe, I am going to carry it, 19, 21.

wa le, it will be, 33, 12; was le, I will be, 33, 18.

The first person singular subjective prefix s also causes L, a modal prefix to disappear.

nū was ʔi, let me look, 29, 4, Fig. 196; but, niL ʔi, you look. Fig. 194.

as ʔi, I did it, 22, 12; but, a niL ʔi t'a, did you do it? 22, 12.

Compare na wa sa, I am going across, with nan nī ya, I went across, and note that the y of the stem -ya has been displaced by -s, the first person subjective prefix. Similar forms occur in all known Athapascan languages showing the assimilation to have taken place in the mother language.

It is not to be assumed that the sounds represented in the various languages by the same characters are identically alike. The differences are of the evasive sort which cannot be expressed with printed characters, not differences in position of articulation, sonancy or aspiration.

¹ Hupa, Kato, Jicarilla, and probably Navajo have the intermediate (ḡ) which should have been distinguished in writing from full sonant g.

MORPHOLOGY.

The structure of the Athapascan languages seems remarkably uniform. Since a rather thorough discussion has been given of the Hupa and Kato, it does not seem necessary to repeat at length the general characteristics of the Chipewyan. The verbs and qualifying adjectives stand off from the other parts of speech since in most instances they are composed of a stem and many prefixes and suffixes by the changing of which inflection is produced varying their meanings in many respects. The nouns and pronouns receive suffixes most of which express position or the direction of motion. These are comparable to case endings, but usually have considerable phonetic distinctness.

There are a number of clear cases of noun incorporation when the object is included between prefixes of the verb which cannot be used or understood independently of the verb. In other cases the object noun stands first in the verb and only the weak form of the verb indicates that the noun is considered a part of it. An example is a de ne heL nī, he spoke to the man, 11, 14 in which de ne, man, is incorporated. The preceding a is meaningless if separated from the remainder of the verb. In line 11 of the same page de ne hel de lī, people eat, is probably a single word "peoples-eater" but there is no means of being certain. The syllable l'ū in na l'ū ye te nūk t'a, she lowered him with a rope, 11, 4 seems to be connected with l'ūL, rope; if so it is an example of the instrument being incorporated as a noun.

NOUNS.

The nouns of Chipewyan fall into about the same classes that appear in the case of the other Athapascan languages which have been systematically studied. There are many simple nouns, generally monosyllabic, with specific non-descriptive application; similar nouns not used without possessive prefixes; and nouns of descriptive meaning qualified by adjectives and verbal suffixes. These suffixes may be conjugated.

The names of classes of people alone may take plural endings. There are no syntactical case endings, but postpositions often have the force of locatives, etc.

SIMPLE NOUNS.

There appear in each of the Athapascan languages a considerable number of elemental nouns which seem to have been the original type of substantives.

e t'e de ke, girl. 31, 6.

Of relatives, in the plural only.

Cf. Hupa, nik kil xai, your brothers; Kato, tc' yan kī, women; Jicarilla, bi teec ke, his children.

An uncertain suffix occurs in dūn ne yō, man, 21, 1 (Fig. 122) distinguished as a male being from dūn ne, which means man in the wider sense.

There are two suffixes employed with the names of plants and animals either to indicate the young or the adult of the species, or when different species resemble each other to indicate the larger or smaller species. They are also used of natural and artificial objects to grade them into classes according to size.

ōl dai ye tcōk', large jackfish, 31, 8; cf. ōl dai ye, jackfish.

Lū we tcōk', large trout. 15, 17.

Līn tcō, horse (Fig. 112); cf. Līn, dog.

tcī ze tcōk', panther, lion, 36, 7; tcī ze, lynx.

ts'ū tcōk', spruce. 43, 1. (Fig. 110.)

des tcōk', large stream, 12, 6; des, stream.

ts'ī tcōk', large boat. 40, 5.

teθ tcōk', large cane; cf. Hupa, tits cane.

Cf. Hupa, kil we kyō, spider; Kato, dūs tcō, grouse; Jicarilla, ī ya ne tsō, large buffalo; Navajo, mā' ī tsō, wolf.

-ya ze, small; perhaps originally was restricted to the meaning, "the young of."

e θūn ya ze, young caribou, 29, 12; e θūn, caribou.

Lū we ya ze, small fish, 31, 2; Lū we, fish.

des a ze, small stream. (Figs. 10, 11.)

ōl da yī was ze, I was a small jackfish, 30, 16, has the diminutive ending conjugated.

Cf. Kato, ca' na' yacts, small creek.

COMPOUND NOUNS.

Many nouns are composed of a noun stem followed by a qualifying adjective which by describing the object differentiates it from a similar one.

ī dū e, vest; cf. ī', coat and ne dū e, short. (Fig. 120.)

ī t'ā ba θas, a tree; ī t'ā, leaves, baθ, round, yas, small.

 na gī ʔe zûn¹, black fox; na gī ʔe, fox, del zûn, black. 43, 18.
 sas del gai, white bears, 29, 2; sas, bear.
 sa ʔe beθ, full moon.
 ʔûn ʔō ī, evening star; ʔûn, star, del ʔōk, yellow.
 de ne slī ne, mean man, 37, 11; de ne, man; slī ne, mean, bad.
 tc'ai le sō lī nī, a small frog.
 k'ai k'ō ze, a dogwood; willow red.
 k'ûc ta ʔe, black poplar; k'ûc, poplar, (?).
 ya zā¹, blue sky, ya, sky, zā¹, only (?). (Fig. 113.)

Closely related to these are the following in which the second term is not a qualifying adjective, but has verbal force.

na ga dīn, blind man; na ga, eyes, dīn, none.
 dza ga la ze, a proper name; leg trembles.
 be tsū ne ye ne ca, a proper name 15, 2; be tsū ne, his grandmother, ye ne ca, she raised him.

Many compound nouns have the second member in the possessive case. In other instances it is difficult to be sure whether this relation exists or not.¹

e lez ʔûθ, bladder; urine sack.
 e tcā hō ʔ'ûn ne, rib. 9, 1.
 sa L'ū le, sunbeams; sun strings. 21, 2.
 sa ʔûθ, furs, beaver skins. 44, 18.
 djeθ L'ûl, fish line; hook line. 31, 2.
 ka tū we, goose lake. 43, 7.
 līn tcōk' ʔī L'ū le, bridle; dog large head rope.
 da tsa tcel le, a small crow; da tsa, crow, tcel le, younger brother (?).

A few compounds have no indication or possibility of a possessive relation but have the first element qualifying the second.

ʔe ceθ, Rocky Mountains; this term is probably a translation only of the English name. (Fig. 116.) tc'ail e dlū ne, a jumping mouse; frog-mouse.
 L'ō bec, mowing machine; grass-knife.
 yaθ lū, hail; cf. yaθ, snow and ī lū, hail. (Fig. 115.)

One noun, tel k'īθ ī, gun, 44, 2, is a verb in form with the stem -k'ēθ, to shoot with a gun. There are probably many other verb forms so used.

¹ In other Athapaskan languages the second member is usually preceded by a possessive prefix. Cf. Navajo, nī līj bī zīs, your urine its sack; Jicarilla, ca bī l'ū le, the sun its strings (beams).

PRONOUNS.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

The personal pronouns are seldom used independently except in direct address or where emphasis or contrast is desired. Both subject and object are incorporated in the verb, but in some instances it is impossible to connect them with the independent forms.

First Person.¹

se, I, me. Used when emphasis is desired for nominative or accusative case.

sa, sa^ε, for me, to me. 16, 4; 17, 7. (Fig. 133.) Evidently a contraction of se with -a, the latter giving the force of a dative.

seL, with me. The final element L, perhaps preceded by a vowel, indicates accompaniment and is probably connected with the prefix eL-, which has a reciprocal force.

Cf. Hupa, hwe, me; Kato, cī, I, ca, for me, cūL, with me; Jicarilla, cī, I, Navajo, cī, I.

First Person Plural.

nū hwū nī, we. 9, 11.

nō xa, nū xa, for us, to us. 36, 11; 45, 9.

nū xeL, with us. 20, 16.

nū' ba, for us. 40, 11.

Cf. Hupa, ne he, we, us; Kato, ne hiñ, we, n hūL, with us; Jicarilla, na xī, we, na xa, for us; Navajo, nī xī, we, us.

Second Person Singular.

nen, nūn, you. 14, 2; 10, 4.

neL, with you. 25, 19.

na, for you. 36, 5.

Cf. Hupa, niñ, you; Kato, niñ, you, na, for you, nūL, with you; Jicarilla, n dī, you; Navajo, nī, you.

Second Person Plural.

nū xe, you.

nū xa, to you.

nū xeL, nō xeL, with you. 20, 16; 45, 4.

Cf. Hupa, nō hin, you; Kato, nō hiñ, you; Jicarilla, n da xī, you; Navajo, nī xī, you.

Third person singular.

The pronouns of the third person usually betray some demonstrative force. The limited material employed does not disclose a clear distinction in the meaning or use of the stems listed below.

xa, for him. 38, 18.

xī lī, hī lī, with. 13, 14.

Cf. Hupa, xōñ, he, him; Kato, hūñ, he, him, hûL, with him; Jicarilla, hī, he.

ba, to him, 8, 3; for her, 14, 14.

keL, with it. 17, 8.

Cf. Kato, kīn, himself, kwûL, with him.

Reflexive.

e dī nī, himself. 10, 4; 23, 14.

e de bā, around himself. 21, 3.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

e ye ne, those. 27, 17.

e yī, that. 7, 15.

yaʔ, for him. 16, 4. (Fig. 204.)

yeL, with him. 24, 9.

Cf. Hupa, yō, that; Kato, hai ye, that.

dī dī,¹ this, these. 9, 7. (Fig. 15.)

dī rī, this, these. (Fig. 16.)

Cf. Hupa, ded, this; Kato, dī, this; Jicarilla, dī, this; Navajo, dī, dī dī, this.

t'a that, 9, 21; often used to point out one of several persons or things characterized by a descriptive phrase or clause.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

The possessive forms are in some cases simpler than the independent forms which it seems probable have been extended by formative elements. They are prefixed to the nouns they limit. A list and examples will be found on page 96.

¹ This seems to be an example of reduplication, since dī, or de is a demonstrative by itself.

RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

There seem to be no relative pronouns, although relative clauses are not infrequent. A verbal suffix, -nī, seems to be used to subordinate one clause to another. An example will be found on page 7, line 9; nū nī ye ga nī nī ya nī, "wolves to them which came." In some instances the demonstrative, t'a, has the double meaning of "that which."

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

Only a few adjective pronouns have been observed.

t'a θe rī, the oldest. 34, 2.

bō neL t'ū, both. 9, 21.

lāī ī, lā ī, many. 16, 20; 17, 1.

t'a hī ūn nī, the next. 21, 18.

INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

e dlā gī, who? 23, 5.

e dla gī ga, for what reason? 27, 14.

e dlī nī, where? 20, 14.

e dla jī, where?

e dlā nīL θa, how far?

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

t'a, that one, those. 23, 13.

t'a ts'ūn, toward somewhere. 9, 18.

t'a sō, t'a sō^ε, something. 7, 9; 11, 20.

t'a hī, some kind, 33, 12; which one, 32, 5, 6.

NUMERALS.

The numeral system of the Athapascan languages is decimal beyond ten, but in some dialects the numbers from five to ten are the first five digits distinguished by some qualifier as belonging to a second series. Kato has for six, "the other side one," and Chipewyan "again three," ī la ī, one. (Fig. 136.)

ī lā ī, one man, 7, 13.

ī la ge, one man. 31, 6.

Cf. Hupa, la, one, lū wūñ, one man; Kato, la ha^ε, one; Jicarilla, da la^εe, one; Navajo, t'a la^ε ī, one.

na ke, two. 9, 6. (Fig. 137.)

na de ne, na dūn ne, two persons. 25, 7.

Cf. Hupa, nax, two, na nīn, two men; Kato, nak ka^ε, two; Jicarilla, na kī, two; Navajo, na kī, two.

ta, ta ge, three. 43, 5; 43, 9. (Figs. 18, 138.)

ta nī, three persons. 39, 13.

Cf. Hupa, tak, three; ta kūn, three persons; Kato, tak', three; Jicarilla, kai ī, three; Navajo, ta^ε, three.

dī gī, four. 43, 12. (Fig. 139.)

Cf. Hupa, dīñk, four; Jicarilla, dī ī, four; Navajo, dī, four.

sa sō la gai^ε, sōn la^ε e, five. 44, 19. (Fig. 140.)

Cf. Hupa, tewō la, five;

aL k'e ta ge, six, again three. 44, 19. (Fig. 141.)

tō ta', ta ye wa tā, seven. 44, 5.

ī lā tā^ε, ī lā xō tā, nine. 43, 19. (Fig. 143.)

hō nūn na, hō ne na, ten. 44, 20. (Fig. 144.)

hō nan na e ī lai ī, eleven.

hō nan na e na ke, twelve.

nō nūn na, twenty.

ta hō nūn na, thirty.

dī hō nūn na, dī hō ne na, forty.

sūs sō la hō nūn na, fifty.

aL k'e ta hō nūn na, sixty.

t'ō t'a hō nūn na, seventy.

aL k'i dī hō nūn na, eighty.

hō nūn na hō nūn na, one hundred, 36, 7.

mīl, one thousand. (French.)

ADVERBS.

Many adverbs appear to be related to demonstratives, while others have stems which have not been found in other parts of speech.

 a yaθ tī ginL tūn, so snow was thick. 43, 12.
 a nīL θa, a nīL θa hī, a nī θa, so far. 45, 11.
 ūn nī θa^ε, that far. 44, 5.
 Cf. Hupa, a Lūk kai, so white.

ASSENT AND NEGATION.

- ā e, yes.
 xē, yes. 39, 8.
 Cf. Hupa, añ, yes, hei yūñ, yes.
 i le^ε, no. 15, 5.

CONJUNCTIONS.

e kū, then.

e kū de, well then. 27, 17.

e yī t'a, for that reason. 32, 10.

ī xa t'a (suffix), because. 38, 21.

ī t'a (suffix), because, in order. 38, 20.

hō ga de, in order. 20, 11.

kō lū, but, although. 12, 21; 40, 7.

POSTPOSITIONS.

A number of enclitic particles are suffixed to pronouns and nouns forming adverbial phrases. It is sometimes difficult to be sure whether a certain particle belongs to the substantive which precedes it or with the verb which follows. As a class the former require an object to immediately precede it while the similar particles used with verbs may have the object understood.

be ya gai, under them. 13, 14.

Cf. Hupa, mī ye, under it; Kato, ō ye', under; Jicarilla, bī ya, under him; Navajo, bī ya dī, under.

naL tceθ ye, in a sack. 21, 7.

Cf. Navajo, bī yī', in; Jicarilla, bī ye', inside;

-nas sī k'ūs ī, on either side.

ye na sin k'es sī', on either side of him. 8, 11.

be na ta ge, without his knowledge. 12, 15; 17, 18.

Cf. Kato, kw na tag ha', without his knowledge.

bīn ka, for him. 24, 14.

Cf. Hupa, mūx xa, after it; Kato, nō kwa, for us; Jicarilla, yī ka, for that; Navajo, ba ka, for.

-la ye, on top.

ceθ la ye, hill top. 20, 2.

Cf. Hupa, mil lai, on top; Kato, ū lai', its top; Jicarilla, bī la ka e, its top; Navajo, bī la ta, on the summit.

-L'a gai, in the absence of.

ne L'a gai, in your absence. 23, 8.

Cf. Jicarilla, yī L'a nan ye, behind them.

-θe^ε, -tθe^ε before, in front of.

θūnθ θe, in front of spears. 30, 7.

dūn ne θe, ahead of people, 26, 10.

-cī, from.

ya θī cī, from the lake. 18, 15.

Cf. Jicarilla.

dūl xa, for blood. 21, 6.

-ba^ε, for.

se ba^ε, for me. 30, 6.

ne ba^ε, for you. 9, 9. (Fig. 244.)

be ba^ε, for her. 10, 8.

-bā, -bā^ε, around, the border of.

kō bā ge, by the fire. 22, 9.

be ba ne, its border. 23, 2.

Cf. Jicarilla, yī bā ye, its edge.

-da tā gai, between.

ye da tā gai, between them. 36, 9.

-dī, without.

ye dī, without him. 20, 1.

he dī, without. 10, 2.

Cf. Hupa, xōn ta ē dīn, house without.

-ta, -ta^ε, near, to, among.

eL ta^ε, together, to each other. 25, 1.

be ta tc'a ze, opposite him. 27, 1.

-teθ, beyond.

Cf. Hupa, xō tis, over him; Kato, ō tūs, beyond it.

-tsĩ', -ts'ĩ, from; the source, or origin of the motion, while -tc'a ze implies separation.

ha bin^L ts'ĩ', from the nets. 23, 1.

-tc'ā, -tc'a ze, from, away from.

e Lai tc'a ze, from each other. 29, 9.

Cf. Hupa, h^wik kya, from me; yĩ ts'ā, from them; Navajo, sī ts'a-jī, away from me.

-ts'ûn, toward, to.

se ts'ûn, to me. (Figs. 209, 212.)

ne ts'ûn, to you. (Fig. 214.)

be ts'ûn, to her. 10, 11.

djeθ ts'ûn', toward hook. 25, 12.

Cf. Hupa, xō tciñ, toward her; Kato, ō tc'ûñ', to him; Jicarilla, bi tc'i, toward him.

-t'a, with, by means of.

ye t'a, with that. 25, 11.

de tcûn t'a, with a stick. 23, 17.

-ga, -ga, at, by, beside.

se ga, by me. 33, 16. (Fig. 146.)

ne ga, by you. 26, 1.

be ga, beside him. 8, 10.

eL xā (eL gā), to each other. 34, 5.

nō xa, for us, 36, 11.

l'ū le ga, about a rope. 10, 10.

Cf. Hupa, xō wûn, to him.

-ga k'ûθ e, beside.

-k'ûz e, on, against; perhaps the last (-k'e) with ze.

dē tcûn k'ûz e, on a tree. 12, 10.

VERBS.

The verbs of Chipewyan, like those of other Athapascan languages, are built up of many elements, each having a fixed place in the verb. Some of these have meanings which are clearly apparent when verb forms containing them are compared with other forms which lack them or have different elements. Only a few of these elements occur in the language except in the verb forms. Since the stem, that is, the element which most clearly defines the act, stands toward the end of the verbal complex, it is convenient to subdivide these elements into prefixes, stems, and suffixes.

The prefixes standing first in order are adverbial ones which indicate the position or direction of the action. For example, ye da nī ya, he went in, has for the first element, ye, which means in. In many verbs, these adverbial prefixes are not required and do not occur. Next in order are modal prefixes the meanings of which are more difficult to determine. Some of them, at least, limit the time of the act, particularly in regard to its inception, continuance, or completion. If a man starts out on foot, te ya, is the verb used; but if he arrives, nī nī ya. In these words te is used for acts which are beginning and nī for acts which are completed.

Following the modal prefixes are the subjective prefixes of the first and second person. The third person is usually without such a prefix, but sometimes a deictic prefix connected with a demonstrative stem is used in the third person, but its position is near the beginning of the verbal complex. Let me stab is, hwūs gwī; you stab, hiñ gwī; let him stab, yū gwī in which the sign of the first person is s, the second person is n, and the third person, y.

Some verbs have modal prefixes following the subjective prefix and immediately preceding the stem. One of these is capable of changing an intransitive verb to a transitive one, or of involving a person other than the subject in the act, while another shows that the act is repeated.

The stems, which in many cases conclude the verbs, beside defining the act often indicate by their forms the class of objects effected. For many verbs an entirely different stem is used when the object is plural, and in a few verbs there are different stems for the singular, dual, and plural. The stems often change their form slightly for the past tense.

Suffixes are more rarely found than are prefixes. They are frequently dissyllabic and some of them appear to be reduced verb forms. They are employed to indicate the source of information and limit the verb modally.

With so many elements entering into the verb there is a mathematical possibility of an enormous number of verb forms. Usage has, however, selected certain combinations which have become adjusted phonetically and these are employed with little consciousness of the meaning of the individual elements.

It is not always easy to be sure whether certain elements are to be considered as a part of the verb or whether they belong to a preceding noun or pronoun. They have been written as a part of the verb in many cases because they are phonetically adjusted to it. In the verb biñ kas kûθ lo saʼ, "I would roll for it," 33, 3, the separation of the phrase biñ ka, "for it," would leave the phonetically incomplete s kûθ lo saʼ. Phrases such as, be gûn, from him, written with the verb, page 28, line 17, be gûn na set-dil nī ta, they had gone away from him, have not been discussed in the following pages, but have been treated on page 122 above.

ADVERBIAL PREFIXES.

a-, ʼa-, ai-, of no known meaning; it is used with verbs which mean to say and to do.

as ʼī, I did it. 20, 16.

ʼa dī, he spoke. 25, 19.

ʼa tʼī, he is. 25, 17.

ai yeL nī, he spoke to. 15, 4.

ai yū le, let him make.

Cf. Hupa, a den ne, he said; Kato, ac tʼe ye, I am.

ʼā-, ʼan-, ai-, back, in the direction from which one came, toward home.

ʼā te dja, he started back, 37, 15; but, te ya, she went, 20, 1.

ā te θī del, we started back, 44, 14; but, te θī del, we went, 43, 17.

ai ye teL tin, she carried him home, 14, 10; but, ye teL tī, she carried him, 17, 2.

an teL tī, they took him home. 38, 16.

ʼa-, an-, away; carries the sense of desertion or abandonment.

ant hwūs nī, I am going to leave him. 19, 19.

a se te dūkʼ, he threw me away. 31, 5.

ʼa ne tūs ne hī le sī, I will not leave you. 40, 15.

e Le-, each other; it has a reciprocal meaning.

e Le tsʼūL del, they came together. 25, 6.

e Let tsʼel gel, when they fought (each other). 24, 19.

Cf. Hupa, Le neL te, let us meet; Kato, Le ges ʼaʼ, it encircled.

e kwa-, the same, in the same manner.

e kwa a dī, he said the same. 12, 2.

e kwa sin le, you do it. 38, 3.

Cf. Hupa, xa a it yau, she did that; Kato, kwac 'i ne, I always do that.

ya-, up, into the air.

yail θet hoi yī, he was falling (up). 7, 15.

ya seL dīl la las dja, he took me up quickly. 30, 17.

Cf. Hupa, ya te xan, he picked up; Kato, ya^e gūL gal, he threw up; Jicarilla, ya na yīL dīL na, he threw them up; Navajo, ya il-t'e^e, it is tossed up.

ye-, ye da-, into; used of a house or similar enclosure.

ye dūn nī ga, come in; but, tī nī gai, go out.

ye da nī ya, he went in, 28, 2; tī nī ya, he went out, 28, 4.

Cf. Hupa, ye wiñ ya, come in; Kato, ye nat ya, he went in; Jicarilla, ye ī ya na, he went in.

na-, down, vertically down.

na ge t'ak', he flew down. 12, 13.

na gī L'i, they fell down. 16, 20.

na ge djau, when he came down. 37, 7.

na gī 'a, sun went down, evening. 19, 5.

Cf. Hupa, nal tsit, it fell down; Kato, na na gūt yai, he came down; Jicarilla, na ga gī na, she carried him down.

na-, across, to move or be in a horizontal position.

na wa sa, I am going across.

nan nī ya, I crossed a stream (on a bridge or log).

Cf. Hupa, na niñ yai, he crossed; Kato, na nūn Lat, jump across; Jicarilla, na nan za, they moved across.

na-, over the surface of the ground or water, back and forth; used of walking or moving without a definite goal.

na ge daL he k'e, he walked along. 12, 18.

Cf. Hupa, na is tsū, he rolled about; Kato, na ca^e, I will go about; Jicarilla, na ga 'ōL na, it floated around.

na-, again; used apparently also of habitual acts.

na ginL tī, he put back, 21, 15; but, ne ginL tī, he put, 21, 7.

na te dja, he went back. 25, 15.

te' nī 'ā, she put in the water, 15, 17; but, te na nī 'āū, when she put in again, 15, 18.

na θī ye teL nī, he ran (again), 22, 17; but, θī ye heL nī, he ran, 22, 3.

na hōL tsī, she made, 17, 11; but, hwōL tsī hū, when she made, 16, 1.

Cf. Hupa, na te lōs, she led back; Kato, nas liñ^ε, it became again; Jicarilla, nan 'ai, carry back.

There are many verbs with a prefix na- of such general meaning that it is nearly or quite impossible to discover a definite meaning. It occurs in such words as: na gin θet', he stayed there, 13, 11; nal ze nī, as he was hunting, 27, 9; na ze t'εθ, he took steps, 45, 15.

na da-, vertical, perpendicular to the earth.

na da θe 'ai, (rock) stood up. 12, 20.

Cf. Hupa, na dū wiñ a, it stood up; Kato, na t gûL 'a^ε, he stood it up.

nī hīL a zū, he got up. 36, 10.

nī na θiz zil ya, they got up. 7, 3.

nī gin nīL tī hwū, when it had taken him. 12, 20.

Cf. Hupa, in na is dûk ka, she got up; Kato, nûn s'ûs tīñ, she took him up.

La-, La ga-, Le ga-, probably a phrase, the whole verb meaning to kill in which it occurs being figurative.

La yī nīL de, she killed. 19, 17.

La nīL de de, if you kill. 9, 8.

La ga nes θī hī t'a, I tried to kill him. 26, 2.

Le ga was de^ε, I will kill them. 13, 11.

Le gûn nīL de, we killed beaver. 44, 7.

θin-, θī-, of uncertain meaning; it occurs with verbs meaning to run.

θin ba ye te di^ε, he ran (toward a person). 10, 12.

θī ye heL nī, he ran away. 22, 3.

Cf. Hupa, tsin tit dil diL, let us run away; Kato, ts'ûn teL del^ε, they ran off.

sa-, se-, of uncertain meaning; used with verb meaning to play.

sa na was θet, I will play. 17, 13.

se na θet, he played. 17, 14.

ce-, of uncertain meaning; used with verbs meaning to eat or drink.

ces tī hī le^ε, I could not eat. 31, 3.

xa-, xai-, up, out of.

xa wa sa, let me go up (Fig. 173).

xa gī nûk', she took out (of hole in the ice). 15, 18.

xai yī gīn, she carried him up (a hill). 17, 3.

Cf. Hupa, xa is yai, he came up; Kato, ka ya' cī', they dug;
Jicarilla, xa nan djai, bring out.

xō-, hō-, possibly has meaning of "there," in space rather unlimited and general.

xō de t'ī, it could be seen. 19, 7.

xō del yaθ, smoke rising. (Fig. 179.)

xō ga hwū, when they put up (a tipi). 26, 19.

hō 'ai, house stood. 37, 2.

xō ka-, up; used of climbing a hill.

xō ka was a, let me go up hill.

xō ka θe yau, when he went up. 39, 9.

be de L'ū, he tied to (a canoe), 7, 1.

Cf. Hupa, me it t'an, he stuck to it; Kato, bes giñ, he carried it up; Jicarilla, be da hes L'ō, they tie on.

da-, used of positions higher than the ground.

daL ge, he climbed (a tree), 33, 17; but, teL ge, he went (on land), da θe lai, was hanging, 35, 10; but, θe la hī k'e, lay there, 11, 11.

da de t'eθ, he stepped on, 7, 14; but, na ze t'eθ, he took steps (on the ground), 45, 15.

Cf. Hupa, da nin sa, sit (on a chair); Kato, da bes ya', he climbed on; Jicarilla, da nes da na, he sat (on limb of tree).

de-, used of motion or position in or into fire.

de nūL t'es, pile up (for a fire). 26, 5.

Cf. Hupa, de de iL kas, he threw into the fire; Kato, de dic tañ,
I will put in the fire; Jicarilla, de nL dje na, she put fire.

ta-, of positions and movements relating to water.

ta θe la, he took out (of water). 25, 15.

ta kī hwū, when he paddled. 23, 1.

Cf. Hupa, ta na is tan, she took it out of the water; Kato, tai 'acbûñ, water will settle back; Jicarilla, ka nai gis na, she was rubbing in water.

te'-, relating to water; undoubtedly connected with the last prefix.
te' nī 'ā, she put in the water. 15, 17.

Cf. Hupa, te tcū wiñ an, he put it in the water; Kato, te' nō nī gī-ne, I put in water.

tī-, out; used of going out of a house or tipi.

tī wa ya sūn na, let go out. 28, 3.

tī nī ya hū, when he went out. 16, 6. (Fig. 181.)

dze de-, dji de, around from place to place; used of taking a walk for exercise or pleasure, or of carrying an object about with one.

dji de gai nī, he was walking. 21, 1.

dje des la, I swam around. 31, 1.

dze de nūs lū, I will lead you. 40, 11.

dze deL tcīθ, she took along. 10, 22.

ts'e-, used of approach to a body of water.

ts'e nī 'as, they two walked. 17, 5.

ts'e he nī 'a zū, they were coming to. 40, 19.

ts'e na nī dīl, we came to. 44, 14.

Cf. Hupa, tee niñ yai, she came down to the beach; Kato, tc'enan la, he jumped out.¹

ka-, kai-, after, in the sense of going after anything.

kai ye nī θen hwū, hunting for. 24, 3.

ka θe ya nī, he went after. 39, 17.

ka dūs dja, I will go for. 21, 19.

ka te kī' nī t'a, they went for in a canoe. 24, 6.

Cf. Hupa, xan te, look for it; Kato, ka ya' ūn-te, they looked for it; Jicarilla, xa na n dai, go for it.

k'e-, off (?); used with verbs of cutting and breaking.

k'e nī t'a θū, when he cut off. 35, 4.

Cf. Hupa, kit te t'ats, he cut them; Kato, k'e tein nac būñ, you must bite off.

OBJECT PREFIXES.

Pronouns in their reduced forms are prefixed to the verb when an object is required. They have their place at the beginning of the verb or after the adverbial prefixes in case they are present. The forms of the pronouns are: first person singular, se, ce, s-; second person singular, ne-, ¹ In Hupa and Kato this prefix is also used with the meaning of tī-, above.

n-; first and second person plural, nō, nō xe; third person singular and plural, be-, ye-.

ce ginL tel, take me. 15, 11.

na sī L'ūn, dress me, 16, 5; but, nai ye L'ōn, she dressed him, 16, 5.

se nē yūL hū sa, they are following me. 19, 8.

ne kel nī^ε nī sī, who kept you. 37, 14.

‘a ne tūs ne hī le sī, I will not leave you, 40, 15; but, a se te dûk, he threw me away, 31, 5.

e kwa a nū xel nī hī le^ε, did not tell us that way. 7, 13.

e deL tsī hwū, when he made himself. 23, 20.

It is evident that in Chipewyan the noun object may be incorporated.

a de ne heL nī, he spoke to the man. 11, 14.

be na hō de ne ge tcūθ, she wrapped the man. 11, 4.

In the two examples given above, the noun de ne, man, occupies the place of the object pronoun. In other cases because there are no prefixes preceding the noun it is not possible to tell whether the noun is to be taken with the verb or not.

FIRST MODAL PREFIXES.

There are a number of modal prefixes having position next after the adverbial prefixes which are weak or reduced in form. The meaning of these elements is obscure.

ne-, nū-,

nū wūs xe, I am going to carry. 19, 21.

nū was ‘ī, I will look. 29, 4.

ne ginL de hwū, she washed. 8, 6.

nī ye nīL tī, she put him down. 15, 13.

nūs da, I will sit. 8, 10.

da ne wūn leL, lean them. 12, 10.

ne tes, they two lay. 8, 11.

Cf. Hupa, xa nū win te, she looked for it; Kato, tc’n nōL yōL, let it blow.

de-, dī-, in some words the meaning of separation is suggested.

de tel nī^ε, he reached. 7, 15.

dī gin ‘at’, she unfastened. 16, 19.

Cf. Hupa, tcit dū wim mite, he pulled off; Kato, na dic tea, let me eat.

te-, is used of acts thought of as beginning.

te wū t'as, we two will go. 16, 20.

te ya, he went. 26, 10.

te θī del, we went. 43, 17.

Cf. Hupa, na tes del, they started back; Kato, te' tes yai, he went.

It is uncertain whether he-, in such verbs as, he θe līn, she became, 10, 17, is a first modal prefix or a deictic prefix with reference to the subject.

DEICTIC PREFIXES.

Many verbs contain a demonstrative element which usually stands after the adverbial and first modal prefixes but before the second modal prefixes. This refers to the object in many cases but may refer to the subject.

y-, ye-, usually confined to the third person of the verb and apparently used when the object is known and has been mentioned.

ye hūnL 'ā, he found (a place). 37, 3.

ye 'ī, he saw it. (Fig. 199.)

ye ne ca', she raised him. 14, 9. (Fig. 217.)

nī ye nīL ke, she tracked him. 16, 9.

Cf. Kato, yī gūn yañ, they ate it; Jicarilla, yī yes xī, he killed it.

b-, used as the last except that it more frequently occurs in the first and second persons.¹

be hwūs aL, I am going to find it.

ts'-, used of the object, and perhaps the subject, when less definitely known and referred to.

ts'el del, they ate them. 7, 4.

ts'e Lū, he was caught. 21, 3.

'a ts'e dī, he addressed. 22, 13.

Cf. Hupa, kin nīn en, he brought it; Kato, tc'ō' sūt, pound.

he-, is used for the dual or plural of verbs in the third person.

ye he 'ī, they two saw him; but, ye 'ī, he saw him.

na he ye ginL tc'il, they (dual or plural) tore it; but, na ye ginL-tc'il, he tore it.

da-, is used for the plural of verbs in the third person.

da ye he 'ī, they (plu.) saw him.

¹ The material for illustrating this difference in use is scanty but by taking into consideration the phrases which precede the verbs it can be demonstrated. On page 36, line 3, be ka θī ya de, if you go for, and line 5, be ka wa sai, I will go for them, but in the same line, ye ka he ya, he started for them

SECOND MODAL PREFIXES.

The second modals seem to relate to the beginning, continuance, or cessation of the act or state. It is not certain that they are unrelated to the first modals which they resemble in form; their position however is different and they are generally confined to the past tenses, in their use.

g-, gin-, is used of acts or states which continue and are viewed as continuing for some time.

na gin ɬet', he stayed there. 13, 11.

gin leL, you carry. 10, 3.

ginL as, they came (approached), 19, 14; but, ye gûn nī nīL as, they came (arrived) to her, 19, 15.

ne ginL de hwū, she washed. 8, 6.

Cf. Hupa, na wiñ yen, he stood; Kato, gûñ eL, you carry.

It is to be presumed that the w- which appears in many futures and presents of the first person is connected with this prefix.

nī wūl ɿ, let us look (Fig. 203).

xa wa sa, let me go up (Fig. 173).

ɬ-, θ-, ɬe-, θe-, is also used of acts and states which are in progress.

na ɬi ya, I went. 17, 1.

θe dai, he sat, 14, 9; but, ne da, she seated herself, 19, 14.

θe la hī k'e, (hair) was lying. 10, 12.

Cf. Hupa, me tsis yen, who stands in; Kato, ka sī del, we came up.

n-, nīn-, is used of acts viewed as completed.

nīn dja, he came (back). 10, 1.

nī gī, he put him down, 21, 10; but, ne te gī, he took on his back, 21, 9.

Cf. Hupa, me nīL xe, he finished it; Kato, nī gī ne, I bring.

d-, is probably also a second modal, although the few cases in which it occurs might be explained as examples of the first modal de-.
dīnL as, they came, 19, 16; but, ginL as, they came, 19, 14; no difference in meaning being apparent.

deL da, she sat. 18, 14.

na de la nī t'a, they were around. 23, 3.

xa da del la, he took out. 18, 2.

h-, he-, seems to be used with no reference to beginning, completion or continuance.

SUBJECTIVE PREFIXES.

s-, first person singular; a reduced form of the first singular personal pronoun se. This prefix is found in the present and future of all verbs and in the past tenses of verbs which have the reiterative prefix, t- or d-.

tūs be, let me swim (Fig. 168.)

hwūs teū. I will take, 34, 15; but, hīnL teū, he took it, 35, 13.

as ʼī, I took it, 20, 16; but, a neL ʼī, did you take it? 20, 15.

nūs da, I will sit, 8, 10; but, ne da, he sat, 39, 11.

ges ī, I see (Fig. 193.)

na θes dja, I went back, 44, 4; but, na θe ya, he went, 27, 11.

na ges da^ε wa lī, I will live (again), 36, 21; but, na gīn da^ε ō wa lī, you will live, 36, 19.

Cf. Hupa, xauw auw, I am going to take out; Kato, tūc ge^ε, I will carry; Jicarilla, na dīc t'ā, I am chief; Navajo, yīc bej, I boil it.

ī-,¹ first person singular, dual, and plural; used in the singular with verbs in the past tense and in the dual and plural when their stems are different from that of the singular.

tī ya, I went, 44, 11; but, te ya, he went, 16, 9.

θī da, I am sitting (Fig. 158.)

xa θī ya, I went up (Fig. 170.)

xa θī dil, we went up (Fig. 175.)

te θī t'as, we two went, 44, 6.

te θī del, we went. 44, 7.

nī nī del, we came. 43, 18.

θeL k'eθ t'a, because I shot. 43, 10.

Cf. Hupa, te se la te, I am going to take them; Kato, sī tī ne, I lay; Jicarilla, da se dā ye, where I had been sitting; Navajo, nī lōz, I led.

¹ There is no discoverable reason in these two examples why h- should be used in one and g- in the other.

t-, first person dual and plural; used when the stem is the same for all three numbers, but it does not appear when there is a third modal L-, following it. The L is in that case rendered sonant l.

e gīt ʕī, we saw it. 43, 9. (Fig. 202.)

te wū deʕ, let us throw them (Fig. 214); but, tūs ne, let me throw (Fig. 211.)¹

te θī dūk', we threw (Fig. 213.)

na hī dʒet, we two stayed (Fig. 207.)

te wū t'as, let us walk (Fig. 188.)

de θīl θ'ī, we are sitting (Fig. 164); but, deL θ'ī, they two are sitting.

ne θīl yā, we raised him (Fig. 218).

hō de θīl k'a, we built a fire. 45, 8.

n-, ne-, (or nasalization of the vowel), second person singular; in some cases there is no evidence that an n was at any time in the verb. The prefix is a reduced form of nen, you.

cin ne t'ī, you drink. (Fig. 169.)

na ne ʒet hwū sa, did you stay? (Fig. 206.)

ne ga, make for me, 16, 2. (Fig. 246.)

tī ne, throw to me (Fig. 209).

nī gīl djet hwū sa, are you afraid (Fig. 221.)

neL t'ūc, take off bark (Fig. 241.)

Cf. Hupa, ye nūn dauw, come in; Kato, tē'ūn yān, you eat; Jicarilla, n dai, go; Navajo, de nī ya, you go.

ō-, second person dual and plural; there are some contractions but evidently the prefix has existed in all cases. The aspiration in some instances renders a stop a continuant and a sonant a surd.

xa θō' 'a, you two went up. (Fig. 176.)

wō' 'as, you two walk (Fig. 183.)

wō' diL, you (plu.) walk (Fig. 184.)

ne waL djet hwū sa, are you afraid? (Fig. 223.)

nī nō le hī, you brought, 11, 18; but, nī nī la, you (sing.) brought.

Cf. Hupa, na nō dīL, you go across; Kato, be cō' lōs, take me up;

Jicarilla, xan da sa' le, take us out; Navajo, di cō aj, you two go.

THIRD MODAL PREFIXES.¹

The modal prefixes which are found between the subjective prefixes and the stems in some instances may by their presence or absence change the meaning of the verb. Certain stems are not used without the third modal L-, while t or d is usually found with the iterative.

L-, has a transitive force in some cases, or is used when an indirect object of a verb of speaking or saying is in mind.

heL nī t'a, he called, addressed him, 13, 18; but, he nī, he said, 13, 16.

nī nīL 'as, the wolves came, 8, 16; but, nī nī 'as, they two (men) came, 7, 6.

nī nīL tʔ, he brought it (a person), 13, 5; but, nī nī tā, he brought it (a long object), 9, 2.

l-, with a few stems is found in all the forms, and at times with stems which are also used without any modal prefix or with L-.

nel djet', he is afraid (Fig. 222.)

na tsel kōs, he jumped. 13, 1.

hūL yīʔ, called. 45, 14.

nīL ge, (dog) came, 45, 9.

gel tī, they put him. 38, 17.

nīL 'as hī leʔ, they do not come. 32, 3.

n-, an n is found in the past tenses of many verbs preceding the stem or the third modal L-, but no meaning is known for it.

nī ginL lal hī k'e, he could not move. 8, 12.

ye yint θiʔ hwū, when they dug. 9, 2.

yī hōnL 'a, she found him. 14, 9.

The relation of these third modals is brought out by the following examples:

na ye ginL tc'il, he tore it; na gail tc'il, it is torn (someone did it);

¹ These prefixes in Hupa are discussed under the caption Classes, p. 34, and for Kato in the section headed Third Modals, pp. 57-9.

na gīn tē'īl, it tore (from ordinary wear). da ye gīn 'ūt, he tore it;
da get 'ūt', it is untied by someone; da get dūk', it came untied by itself.

ō-, ū-, is used in the future only. Since this prefix is used in the same forms with the third modal prefixes and precedes them, it probably is not connected with them in meaning or function.

tūs be, let me swim (Fig. 168).

tū sa, let him walk (Fig. 187).

te wū dīL, let us walk (Fig. 190).

Cf. Hupa, yō loi, let him tie (only found in third person); Kato, tē'ō gac, let him chew it (third person only); Jicarilla, dō ya', let him come; Navajo, a dō nīL, he will do it.

VERBAL STEMS.

The meaning of the verbal stem can sometimes be discovered by accounting for the meaning of all other elements entering into the verb, when it appears that the stem must have the meaning which is required to give the complete verb the sense required to fit the context. For example in line 13 of page nine an tēL az de, is said to mean "if it runs away," and the context requires such a meaning. It has been discovered however, that an means "away," that te means "to begin," that L is used with certain stems and when its meaning is discoverable it has a transitive force, and finally the last syllable gives the conditional force, "if." The stem az carries then the meaning of movement. By examination of the various words which have stems meaning to move it is found that az is only used of animals moving on four feet, and used only with a plural subject.

It is also possible to place side by side a number of verbs which are alike except that the stems differ. Since there is but one variable it is easy to see what the meaning must be to produce the differences in meaning.

nī nī 'as, they came, two on foot.

nī nī del, they came, more than two on foot.

nī nī kī, he came, one or more in a canoe.

nī nī tā, he brought something long.

nī nīL az, they came, wolves or other four-footed animals.

It has not been possible of course to determine the meaning of all the stems in this manner. The meaning placed after the isolated stem is simply a judgment of what it probably means, and the examples are to illustrate this judgment and are not to be considered proofs of its meaning.

-‘a, -‘ai, -‘ā, -‘aL to have position, used particularly of a round object, singular only.

na da θe ‘ai, (a rock) stood up. 12, 20.

na gī ‘a, it was evening (referring to position of the sun). 19, 5.

xō te ‘a hī k’e, (tracks) were in a line. 16, 12.

Used transitively.

nī nī ‘ā, he brought. (Fig. 227.)

nī wūñ ‘aL, bring to me. 14, 12.

-‘a, to send one, to give directions.

aī ye heL ‘a, he sent her back. 37, 15.

nī ya tī nī ‘a, he gave directions. 9, 6.

Cf. Jicarilla, da nL ‘a na, he sent word again.

-‘ā, to be full.

da nel ‘ā hoi yī hī k’e, it was filled with. 39, 11.

na gal ‘ūs θ’e, heard the animals walking. 31, 17.

ginL as, caribou came. 19, 14.

Cf. Hupa, tel atc, pack-train came; Kato, tūl ac būñ, turtles must walk.

-‘as, -‘az, -‘ais, to travel, used of two persons only.

ye dūn ne ‘a zū, when they two went in. 35, 10.

wō’ ‘as, you two walk (Fig. 183.).

se ‘as, they two set out. 7, 5.

xa θī t’as, we two went up (Fig. 178.).

Cf. Hupa, te sē yai, I went away; Kato, te' nūn yai, he came there;

Jicarilla, xō ya', let him come.

e kō des ya, I may know. 37, 21.

kwa des yā, I know. 30, 14.

he kō del ya nī t'a, he knew. 31, 14.

he kō de dja, they knew it. 20, 18.

Cf. Hupa, xō wūt xō wes yūn te, I will watch her; Jicarilla, 'at-da gōs yā', they noticed them.

-yā, to grow, to pass through life.

da nī yā' t'a, (stones) were growing. 20, 20.

Cf. Hupa, dō xoi nes yan, he did not raise it; Kato, nes ya nī-kwa nañ, it had grown.

-ye', -yī', to be named, to be called by name.

hūl ye', he is named. 25, 18.

hūl yī', is called. 45, 14.

Cf. Kato, ōl yī būn dja', shall be called.

-yez, -yūs, to break, transitive, and intransitive.

ge yūs, he broke it. 22, 11.

Cf. Kato, te' gūn yīc, he broke it.

-yū, -yūL, to pursue, to chase.

naī yin te yū, he chased again. 22, 17.

da nē yū, he chased. 44, 12.

se nē yūL hū sa, are following me. 19, 8.

Cf. Hupa, tce min niñ yōt dei, he drove out (a deer); Kato, būn ti-gi yō, they chased it; Jicarilla, na gō n yō, they chased.

-na, -nai, -na^ε, to live, to be alive; but not used of residing.

e deL e giNL nai, with him you are alive. 26, 1.

wō na^ε t'a, he will live. 11, 20.

wūs na hī le^ε sī^ε, I will not live it is. 36, 18.

na ges da^ε wa li,¹ I may live. 36, 21.

Cf. Jicarilla, na xī n da, alive; Navajo, xī na, he is alive.

-na, to beat, to win from one in a contest.

nō neL na, he beat. 33, 8.

hō neL na wa le sī, if he beats him. 33, 12.

-ne, -na, to do, to treat a person in a certain manner.

was ne hwū, (what) shall I do? 23, 11.

ye ga na hī le^ε, he did not do anything. 35, 16.

wō na sūn na, do not bother. 26, 3.

Cf. Hupa, a in nū, he did.

-ne, -nūk', -na, to move something alive.

se ts'ūn tī ne, throw to me. (Fig. 209.)

ne ts'ūn tūs ne, I am going to throw to you. (Fig. 211.)

na te nūk', he threw down (man). 12, 21. (Fig. 210.)

na de nūk, he turned over. 24, 15.

te θī dûk',² we threw. (Fig. 213.)

-ne, -nī, to speak.

ai yeL nī, he said. 15, 4.

e kwaL nī, he told. 25, 5.

seL nī θ'e, I heard her say of me. 31, 8.

he dnī, he said. 23, 10.

hōl nī, he told the story. 30, 15.

de sī^ε, I said.

a dī,³ he spoke. 25, 17.

¹ The stem is changed to -da, by the third modal t- which having caused this change no longer appears.

² The n of the stem is changed to d by the first plural prefix t.

³ The d is due to the prefix d which appears in he dnī and in other languages as is shown in the examples given below.

Cf. Hupa, a den ne, he said; Kato, te'n nī, he said; Jicarilla, 'a-dn nī na, he spoke.

-nī, to flee (?).

θi ye tel nī he dja, he ran. 22, 4.

ant hwūs nī, I am going to leave him. 19, 19.

-la, -le, -La, -Le, to do, to make.

Fig. 221. nī gīl djet hwū sa, are you afraid?

Fig. 224. ne gīl djet', we are afraid.

Fig. 227. nī nī 'ā, he brought.

-ke, -kai, to follow tracks, to trail.

ye teL ke, he tracked them. 9, 18.

na te θil ke, we followed the tracks. 45, 11.

teL kai, they followed. 18, 5.

Cf. Hupa, teit teL xa, he tracked it; Jicarilla, n ke dac nL ka na, they began tracking him; Navajo, neL ka, he is tracking him.

-ke, to sit; used of the dual only.

ū ke, we will sit. 25, 9.

θe ke, they two sat. 27, 2. (Fig. 162.).

Cf. Jicarilla, na' ke, you two sit down; Navajo, sī ke, they two are sitting.

-keθ, to fall.

na seL keθ, he fell. 21, 20.

da θe keθ de', if it sticks in tree. 7, 10.

Cf. Hupa, nō niñ xûts, something fell; Kato, wal kût, it fell through.

-kī, to paddle a canoe, to travel by canoe.

yūL k'eθ ī t'a', he shot them. 43, 3.

θēL k'eθ, I shot. 43, 10.

VERBAL SUFFIXES.

As will appear from the comparative material presented, the greater number of the prefixes and stems are found in languages other than the Chipewyan. The suffixes with one or two exceptions, however, are not found on the Pacific Coast or in the Southwest. It seems probable that they are recent developments in Chipewyan.

-i le^ε, -hī le^ε, renders the preceding statement negative.

a wō le hī le^ε, you will not do to him. 11, 20.

wūs na hī le^ε sī^ε, I will not live it is. 36, 18.

ne tca hī le^ε t'a, because he was not large. 33, 10.

nī dja hī le t'ū, he had not come. 21, 5.

-wa li, -wa le, used in future or conditional statements in which some doubt exists.¹

na ges da^ε wa li sī, I will live. 37, 21.

na gin da^ε wa li, you will live. 36, 2.

hō neL na wa le sī, he beats. 33, 12.

-nī, seems to be used as a relative, making a clause of a verb.²

La gal de^ε nī, which he had killed. 10, 21.

na θe ya nī, when he went again. 27, 15.

ge gaL nī, as he walked. 8, 1.

-nī t'a, used of emphatic statements of observed past facts.

na θet' nī t'a, he lived. 24, 5.

na te diL nī t'a, ducks were flying about. 42, 17.

se ne 'i^ε nī t'a, stole me. 37, 12.

-hī t'a, similar to the last in force but apparently used of present facts.

aL 'in hī t'a, she carried. 10, 9.

θin da hī t'a, (why) do you sit here? 37, 11.

-lō sa^ε, indicates the probability of a future event.

na ne neL ti lō sa^ε, I may carry you back. 23, 11.

Le ga de nī θet' lo sā^ε, suppose you might kill yourself. 33, 4.

² Probably a suffix which means "person" used in some other Athapascan languages to make nouns of verbs.

-θ'e, to discover by hearing.

seL nī θ'e, I heard her say of me. 31, 8.

Cf. Hupa, a den tsū, he heard singing.

-sī^ε, used of emphatic statements to correct a misapprehension or the ignorance of the hearer.

nī nī la sī^ε, I left it. 10, 2; 9, 9.

Le ga nīL θet' sī^ε, I killed. 37, 14.

Le ga wūd θī ī le^ε sī^ε, we will not die. 15, 5.

θes dlī sī, I am cold. 22, 6.

--sūn na, used with imperative giving it the negative force of prohibition.

ye ne wūn θī sūn na, do not think. 12, 11.

tī wa ya sūn na, (do not) let go out. 28, 3.

-he dja, marks a definite stage of the action or development of the verb to which it is suffixed.¹

ye k'e na de he dja, when they fought. 23, 19.

na tset he dja, he became strong. 35, 5.

ne tca he dja, he became large. 33, 19.

na te gwi he dja, (their horns) stuck up. 19, 17.

-hī k'e, -k'e, used to indicate that the act was discovered by traces or other evidence after it transpired.

teL as hī k'e, had gone along. 9, 19.

ne 'ī k'e sī, he is stealing. 36, 11.

nal 'ais hī k'e t'a, were crossing. 20, 3.

na de dlōk' hī k'e t'a, laughed. 23, 5.

a da dī k'e, wolves were talking. 9, 5.

aL ne k'e t'a, he found she spoke of. 36, 6.

-hī k'ul la, -hī k'e la, used with statement of a fact inferred from a succeeding fact or a result.

na teL dja hī k'ul la, he went again. 17, 17.

Lo gūn nīL de hī k'ul la, she saw he had killed. 17, 8.

da nī yā hī k'e la, were grown. 7, 3.

-hoi yī^ε, -hoi yī, used of customary, repeated, or continuous acts.

ye kwat xoi yī^ε, he speared him. 28, 8.
 na θet hoi yī^ε, he lived. 28, 14.
 na tset hoi yin t'a, because he was strong. 35, 18.
 heL tūl hoi yī^ε, it kept breaking. 10, 9.

-hwū, -ū, in most cases seems to subordinate a temporal clause.

yeL nī hwū, when he said. 25, 4.
 ye nes θūn hwū, when I thought. 31, 7.
 ye dūn ne 'a zū, when they went in. 35, 10.
 nī nī yau, when he came. 29, 1.

-hwū sa, -hū sa, -ū sa, interrogative; used with the second person.

ī gī 'ī ūs a, do you see? (Fig. 197.)
 se nē yūL hū sa, are following me? 19, 8.
 na ne θet hwū sa, did you stay? (Fig. 206.)

-xa, used to indicate intention or purpose.

ye geL yī ha, in order to carry it. 19, 19.
 ha nī dē le xa, they would marry. 38, 21.
 be kō de dja xa, she might know it. 20, 11.
 gīn na^ε xa ī le^ε sī, you will not live. 37, 5.

-de^ε, conditional future.

an teL az de, if it runs away. 9, 13.
 hwūnL tas de^ε, if you shoot. 7, 10.
 θīn ya de^ε, if you go. 36, 21.
 ges 'ī de^ε, if I see. 39, 19.

Cf. Hupa, au win neL de, if it happens; Kato, ts'ūs qōt de^ε, if he spears it.

-t'a, in most cases seems to have causal force.

nē tca t'a, he was so big because. 33, 9.
 hīl tc'e t'a, because he was angry. 45, 18.
 ye nī θūn t'a, he thought. 40, 8.
 wō na^ε t'a, he will live. 11, 20.
 na tset t'a, was strong. 38, 6.

TENSES OF VERBS.

Many of the suffixes, either directly or indirectly, fix the time of the verb. The future tense in addition to a peculiar form of the root used in the present and future has a prefix ō- discussed above. The past tense is differentiated from the present and future in other ways not clearly traceable to the presence of definite word parts. The stem of the past sometimes has a glottal stop at the end where the present lacks it or has an aspiration.

ne ʔ, he stole it; ne ʔ, he is about to steal it.

The past has a sonant l where the present has a surd L.

ginL xûl, he struck; ʔi dinL xal, you throw a stick in the fire.

The vowel of the stem is sometimes different.

a yin la, he made; ai yû le, let him make.

as la, I made; a was le, let me make.

The stem sometimes has a stop or a nasal consonant or nasal vowel which does not appear in the present and the vowel may be different in addition.

ʔi gôt, I speared it; wûs ge, let me spear it.

nûʔ ʔi bî, I swam there (Fig. 167); tûs be, let me swim (Fig. 168).

The first person singular of the past lacks the prefix s- as has been explained above; the past also often has the second modals which are not usually employed with the present. Complete conjugation systems would require many pages and would not present material other than that discussed in the preceding pages. They will be found in Father Le Goff's grammar. One example in the present and past follows:

Present.

na was tc'ûL, let me tear it.

na neL tc'ûL, tear it.

naî yûL tc'ûL, let him tear it.

na wûL tc'ûL, let us tear it.

nôL tc'ûL, you (plu.) tear it.

na he yûL tc'ûL, let them tear it.

Past.

na giL tc'il, I tore it.

na ginL tc'il hwû sa, did you tear it?

na ye ginL tc'il, he tore it.

na giL tc'il, we tore it.

na wôL tc'il hwû sa, did you (plu.) tear it?

na he ye ginL tc'il, they tore it.

ADJECTIVES.

The qualifying adjectives of Chipewyan as of other Athapascan languages are conjugated for person and number. The prefixes appear to be the second modal prefixes of verbs and apparently relate to the acquisition, or the permanency of the possession of the quality named in the stem.

de-,

del ba, gray. (Fig. 238.)

dû we laʔ, he is powerful. 26, 17.

ne-,

ne zō^ε, good. 36, 3.

θī-,

θī baθ, round.

θes tûn, I am frozen.

tī-,

tī baθ, round.

tī ginL tûn, thick, deep. 43, 12.

STEMS OF ADJECTIVES.

-baθ, round, circular.

θī baθ ya ze, round small, snowshoes. 16, 3.

tī baθ ya ze, round small, snowshoes. 18, 7.

Cf. Hupa, na wes mats, it was coiled; Navajo, na maz, round.

-dū e, short.

ne dū e, short. (Fig. 233.)

-dlī, cold (used of persons).

θes dlī sī, I am cold. 22, 6.

-tūn, thick.

tī gīnL tūn, it is thick (snow). 43, 12.

Cf. Navajo, dī tā^ε, thick.

-tcai, large.

ne tca, large. (Fig. 228.)

tū ne tcai, big lake. 14, 12.

Cf. Hupa, nūw kya ō, I am large; Kato, gūn teag kwān, it had become large; Jicarilla, n tsa ī, it is large; Navajo, n tsa, large.

-tsūl, wet.

be tsūl, it is wet.

Cf. Kato, naL cūl ūt, because it was wet.

-te'e, -te'ōk', to be cross, ill-tempered.

hīl te'e, he is cross.

INTRODUCTION.

In the spring of 1908 a grant of $300.00 from the Mrs. Esther Herrman fund of the New York Academy of Sciences enabled the present writer to undertake a short trip to the Chipewyan Indians residing on and about Lake Athabaska in what now constitutes the northernmost part of the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. Starting from New York on May 5th, I proceeded to Edmonton and Athabaska Landing, where I took passage in a Hudson's Bay Company scow. Descending the Athabaska River to its mouth, I arrived at Ft. Chipewyan on June 8th. The Indians were just gathering at the Fort in expectation of the Dominion Commissioner, who makes an annual visit for the purpose of paying annuities. Including a several days' excursion to Fond du Lac, Saskatchewan, near the eastern extremity of the Lake, I remained in the Ft. Chipewyan country until July 6th, when I availed myself of the only opportunity to return prior to the fall transports, and ascended the River in a free-trader's boat.

Owing to the practical difficulties of the work, the tales here presented constitute the main part of the ethnological data secured at Ft. Chipewyan. Taken in conjunction with the Chipewyan Texts collected by Dr. Goddard at Cold Lake and Heart Lake, which form part of this Volume, and with the body of folklore published by Petitot in his Traditions indiennes du Canada Nord-Ouest (Paris, 1886), these stories will afford a fair conception of Chipewyan mythology. After some hesitation, I have decided to incorporate in this paper parts of the Wisáketcak cycle which were obtained from Chipewyan Indians or Indians of partly Chipewyan and partly Cree extraction, although I am convinced that these tales are of Cree origin. I include them because I am strongly under the impression that the Wisáketcak myths were becoming part and parcel of Chipewyan folklore. While the Cree name of the hero was the only one used by my informants and was said to have no Chipewyan equivalent, there were indications that Wisáketcak was being brought into close relation with other Chipewyan characters of older standing. Thus, Francis Fortin¹ regarded Wisáketcak as one of three brothers, the others being Crow-head and Spread-wings. While the other two always remained with the Chipewyan, Wisáketcak lived alternately among the Cree and the Chipewyan. However this may be, the Wisáketcak cycle of the Cree was certainly very well known among the Chipewyan and part-Chipewyan at the time of my visit and it seemed somewhat arbitrary to exclude it.

While a profitable discussion of Chipewyan mythology will become possible only with fuller knowledge of the mythology of other Northern Athapascan tribes, it may not be amiss to refer here to a characteristic that appears alike in Petitot's, in Dr. Goddard's, and the present collection,—the practical absence of obscene motives. This trait indicates once more the scientific duty of recording such motives when they do occur. An historian of modern literature would surely lose sight of an important fact if he failed to indicate that themes tabooed in England are treated by French writers with the utmost freedom. Similarly, an ethnologist who should eliminate from his collections of, say, Shoshone literature such tales as seemed offensive from his own point of view would obliterate an important difference between the Shoshone and the Chipewyan, and possibly not a few other tribes.

Soon after Crow-head's birth, his father died. Crow-head knew nothing about him. Once the other Indians were fishing, and there were several medicinemen among them. It was in the evening, and the setting sun presented a bloodshot appearance. One medicineman pointed at it and asked the boy, "Do you see that red sky? That is your father's blood." This made Crow-head suspect that one of the medicinemen had killed his father. He went home, where he was living with his grandmother, and began to cry. "Why are you crying?" "I heard those men talking about my father." "There is no use crying, you will be a man some day." The next day the people were fishing. Crow-head punched a hole in the ice and began angling with a hook. The Indians caught nothing, only Crow-head caught a large trout. He pulled out its soft parts, and hid the bones under his deerskin capote. He started towards the medicineman who had killed his father, pulled out the fish spine, and broke it over him. When the people went home that evening, they missed the medicineman. They did not know what was the matter with him. One man went out and found him lying dead by his fishing rod. This was the first time Crow-head ever killed anyone. By breaking the fish spine, he had broken that of his enemy and thus killed him.

Crow-head was living with a little orphan, whom he called his grandchild. He used to wear a crow-skin cape, which warned him of the approach of enemies and constituted his medicine. Two girls in the camp once made fun of his crow-skin garment. Crow-head was displeased and said to his grandson, "We will make a birchbark canoe and leave." In a coulée they found fine birchbark. Some Indians from the rocks on either side pelted them with snowballs. "Some bad Indians are pelting us with snow," said the orphan. "That's nothing," replied Crow-head. They took the bark for the canoe and returned. In the meantime the bad Indians, who were Cree, had killed all the Chipewyan. Crow-head piled all the corpses together in a heap. He was a great medicineman. He began to make a canoe. Worms began to come to the corpses. Then he took his crow-skin, laid it on the dead bodies, and told the boy not to wake him until the next day at noon. While he was sleeping, worms crawled into his nose, ears, and mouth.

Crow-head woke up and started off in his canoe. In the Barren Grounds he made many small lodges, and with his medicine declared that all the dead should be in those lodges. He left and lay down on the worms. The people all came to life again, and nothing remained in place of their corpses save their rotten garments. The Cree started homewards, but Crow-head, lying on the maggots, caused them by his magic to return to the same place. The little boy cried, thinking his grandfather was dead. He pushed the old man, but Crow-head pretended to be dead. At last, the boy pulled him by his beard, then Crow-head awoke and beheld the Cree. The Cree were surprised to get back to their starting point and, seeing the two survivors, decided to kill them also. Crow-head rose, walked to the river, shaved off the bark of a rotten birch, made peep-holes in the tree, hid the boy in the hollow, and ordered him to watch.

Crow-head was a dwarf. He went to the river with the crow-skin on his back and a blanket over it, pretending to mourn his lost relatives. The Cree, thinking he was but a child, said, "There is no use killing a child like that with a pointed arrow." So they shot at him with blunt points, but all the arrows grazed off. Then they pulled ashore, and Crow-head fled to the brush, pursued by the enemy. When far from the canoes, he threw off his blanket, took a deer horn which he carried for a weapon, and ran among the enemy, breaking each man's right arm and left leg. Then they said, "This is Crow-head." They retreated towards their canoes, but Crow-head smashed every one of them. Then he summoned his grandson from his hiding place. The Cree had spears, and Crow-head told the boy to take them and kill their enemies. The boy did as he was bidden. The Cree said to the boy, "If it were only you, you could not do this to us." And they made a "crooked finger"¹ at him.

Crow-head left his grandson. He was gone for many days. The boy cried, not knowing what was the matter. Up the river he heard waves beating against the bank. Going thither, he found his grandfather washing himself. Crow-head asked the boy, "What are you crying for?" "I thought you were lost." "There is no use crying, all our people are alive again." When through washing, he bade his grandson fix the canoe, then he told him to put the slain enemies' mentulae on the gunwale. They started to join the resuscitated Indians. They heard some one playing ball, laughing and singing. Putting ashore, they heard the noise of crying.

They went into a lodge and asked what the crying was about. "Two friends of ours are lost, they have been killed by the Cree." Then they recognized Crow-head and his grandson.

The two girls who made fun of Crow-head's crow-skin were not restored to life by him.

Late in the fall, when the Chipewyan were going to a lake to fish and it was commencing to freeze, two boys came running and told the people that two giants taller than pine trees had killed all their friends. The Chipewyan were camping on the edge of a big lake. None of them slept that night for fear of the giants. The next morning the giants were seen approaching. Crow-head said, "There is no use in running away, they will kill me first." He put on his crow-skin and went towards them on the ice. The first giant wished to seize him, and with long fingers shaped like bear claws he tore Crow-head's crow feathers. The giants fought for the possession of Crow-head, each wishing to eat him up. Crow-head hit both of them with his deer horn, and killed them. He walked homeward. He was so angry that he could neither speak nor sleep. His eyes were like fire. He went to the lake and, beginning at one point, he commenced to hammer along the edge until he got back to his starting place. There he fell dead, for his heart was under the nail of his little finger and by hammering the ice he had injured it.

Everyone was moving. Two girls were making little birchbark vessels for Crow-head. They were just sewing the edge with roots. One of them said, "This Crow-head knows everything, but he will not know this." And she pulled out one of her pubic hairs and twisted it in with the roots. The two girls were married, but never told Crow-head of their husbands, who were far out on the lake. An Indian in league with them plotted to have Crow-head killed by the husbands, and invited him to run a race to the place where they were. But Crow-head beat his opponent in the race, and killed the women's husbands with his spear.

The Indians were angry and desired to kill Crow-head. They began shooting at him, but he merely took his deer horn from his crow-skin tippet and pointed it at them, so that they hit only the point of his weapon without being able to touch him. At last he said, "If you don't cease, I shall kill all of you." Then they were afraid and let him alone. Nevertheless, many medicinemen tried to make medicine against him in secret. They attempted to throw a beetle (?) at him. Crow-head had left the people and was living by a lake. Once he was thirsty and pulled out the grass growing by the water edge. He began to drink and found a beetle in the water. He killed it. Then he bit his own tongue and spat out the bloody spittle to make his enemies believe they had killed him. They went after him, but when they found the slain beetle they knew their medicine was not strong enough for him. Then they sent a big bear after him. Crow-head had lain down to sleep. In the night the bear caught him, and without hurting him held him by his feet and legs, waiting for the arrival of the Indians. But Crow-head twisted round and round in the bear's grasp until he got free. Then he crawled away between his legs. He turned back and dispatched the bear with bow and spear. He cut up the animal, spread out its flesh and skin, and started off again. The Indians made a big feast when they found the fresh bear meat all ready to be eaten.

Crow-head, by his medicine, restored the two women's husbands to life.

He traveled along as far as a lake. There was no snow, but only clear ice. He looked through the ice and saw a great many people below it. "I will kill all these people," he said. He began pounding the ice with a club. But what he had taken for people were only arrows, and one of them entered his little finger, where his heart was. The Indians following him found him dead.

Crow-head was so called because he made a crow-skin collar that became his medicine.

Once Crow-head left his crow-skin in his lodge and went off. Coming back, he did not find it in the position he had left it. He asked his grandmother why she had allowed any one to abuse it. "Someone has counted every feather on it and has been laughing at it. I will go away and let the Cree kill the people." "What shall I do?" asked his grandmother. "I will take you along." That night the Cree killed all the Chipewyan, but Crow-head and his grandmother escaped.

(f)

Crow-head and Spread-wings¹ started traveling, knowing that no one could kill them. Long ago the Indians did a great deal of fighting. Crow-head and Spread-wings always helped the Indians they stayed with. They were related to everybody. Crow-head the older of the two, knew it was impossible to kill him. Spread-wings could be killed, but had three lives.

Crow-head started off towards the place where the sun is close to the earth, and he will not come back here until the end of the world.

Spread-wings was off on a deer hunt. He went towards the Barren Grounds, leaving his partner with a canoe at the foot of a mountain. A band of Cree began to pursue him. He fled towards the canoe, but was headed off. He had no arrows, but only spears. He ran along the river, the Cree pursuing him. By his medicine he made them stupid, so that they passed by his canoe without noticing it. They may be running even to-day.

Spread-wings called for his partner who was very much scared. They got to a high knoll. Spread-wings said, "I'll get on top and look out for Indians." He told his partner to paddle to a certain point, where Spread-wings would meet him. There was a very steep hill between, but Spread-wings thought, "I'll try to get there before you," and arrived there first. There was an inlet there, but Spread-wing's comrade, for fear of the Cree, did not go ashore, but paddled on. Spread-wings walked; again he had to cross a steep mountain. His partner paddled beyond the next inlet, thinking Spread-wings was ahead. At last, Spread-wings actually got ahead and threw sticks across the next narrows, barring his companion's path. He himself hid in the bushes. When his partner came and found the path barred, he tried to turn back, but a strong current prevented him. Then Spread-wings jumped into the water and pulled him ashore.

Spread-wings caught a large jackfish, which they cooked and ate. Then they started off again and traveled along a great lake until they got back to their own people. Spread-wings told them how timid his partner had been and said henceforth he would travel alone.

The next day he started off by himself. He stopped at a little lake. There he heard a noise behind him. A great frog, as big as a moose, was going to attack him. In fear for his life he tried to work his medicine, and, seizing some rotten pine branches along the shore, he threw them at the frog, hitting it between its eyes and killed it.

He continued traveling with his blankets. When tired he stopped, made a lodge of spruce wood, and lay down to sleep. When rested, he went out without making a fire or arranging his bed. He traveled about all day, killed some deer and cached them. When he returned to his lodge he found a fire burning in it and his bed was arranged. This happened several days in succession. One day he thought he would find out who was doing this.

He came home earlier than usual and saw smoke rising from the lodge. Gently lifting the door flap, he saw a woman sitting there. Two beds were prepared, one for him and one for herself, not side by side, but with only the pillows together. She told him she was sent from heaven, because God pitied him on account of his loneliness. She was, however, not a real person, but a moose. Spread-wings did not know this, but rather suspected it. They lived together until the fall. Then the woman said, "My relations bade me meet them at a certain mountain." They got to the mountain, at the foot of which there was a coulée with willows and birch. Spread-wings knew this was a moose country. Not long after they got there a noise of moose was heard, and the woman said, "My son is coming," and, a little later, "My son-in-law is coming," and, finally, "My husband is coming." She ran off to her husband, turning into a moose before she got to the brush. Before going she told Spread-wings not to return home, but to wait for her there for two nights. She stayed in the brush for two nights, then she turned into a woman again and re-joined Spread-wings.

After a while she again told Spread-wings that her relatives wanted to meet her in another place. They started out. Near that place she bade Spread-wings wait. She heard a moose calling, but several times she did not recognize the voice and did not go. The fourth time she recognized her moose husband's voice. Again she bade Spread-wings wait for her for four days. Spread-wings heard the moose call, and thought to himself, "I am sure my wife is going to turn into a moose now." He traveled after her, but after a while turned back, leaving his blankets hanging. He went to hunt chickens and partridges. Finally, he turned back. He found that the woman had already erected a brush lodge, from which smoke was rising. This time she had arranged the beds next to each other. "Why did you make the beds this way now and not before?" She said that before she had not received her friends' and husband's permission, but now it had been granted. "You can do with me as you choose." The man said that was what he had always wished, but did not care to ask for.

They lived together. About spring the woman fell sick. Her husband did not go hunting. She gave birth to two young moose. On the next day she gave birth to two young boys. She told her husband she should not stay with him any longer, but should return to her own people.

She had been sent for one year to bear him sons, who were to help him. As she was nursing the boys, she had been obliged to neglect the little moose. She made for the brush and called like a moose, then the young ones followed. The man also followed her, but only found her discarded clothes and came home crying. Before going she bade him stay in that place for a month until his boys were big enough to help him.

After a month Spread-wings began traveling with his boys. They came to a pine bluff. The younger one said, "There's a very strong smell here, it smells of people." "Perhaps it is nothing." "Yes, there are people here." They found the tracks of a band of Cree. The younger brother did not want to follow on account of the strong smell, and kept behind his father and brother. After some time they got to the Cree.

The younger brother was in the habit of not obeying his father, but only his elder brother. The elder brother wished to get married, and with his father's consent he married a Cree woman in the fall.

Once the two brothers started on a moose hunt. They came to a little lake. Being thirsty, they wanted to drink. The younger brother said, "Let me drink first." The elder brother consented. The younger drank, then, while the elder was drinking, he ran into a bush and turned into a moose. The elder brother followed him for a distance, then started in another direction, found moose-tracks, shot a moose, cut it up, cached it, and went home. He tried to track his brother, whom he found sleeping with little horns on his head. The horns fell off. The elder brother took his horns, waked the younger one, and took him homeward. The younger brother was very thin when he got there. He found the smell of the Cree too strong for him.

The younger brother did not want to get married. He stayed there all winter, but in the spring he felt like traveling. The smell of people was too strong for him. He traveled away as a moose and lived as one. The elder brother started on a moose hunt, and began tracking until he got a moose. He was going to shoot it, but thought it might be his brother, so he called out, "Brother!" Then the moose really turned into a person again. He took him home, but fell on the way, and then the younger ran away again as a moose. The elder brother ran after him and caught him, and then he turned into a human being again. But when near the camp, he again changed into a moose and escaped. The elder brother cried, "After this, don't let me catch you, or I'll shoot you." But he never could catch him.

One winter no deer were to be found and all the wolves were starving. The wolves started toward the big sea. They saw some large object lying on the shore. It turned out to be a walrus (?). All piled on top of it, and though many were killed they finally succeeded in killing the monster. The wolves had a good feed on the walrus. Two deer were allowed to pass.¹ A herd of deer were coming.

In the Barren Grounds the wolves nearly died of thirst. When they got to the top of a mountain, all began to scratch there, trying to get water from a hole by magic, but they did not succeed. At last they asked Spread-wings, who was a wolf at the time. "If you fail, we shall die." Spread-wings always kept an arrow with which he had once been shot. Beginning to sing, he pointed the arrow towards the sky. Clouds came, rain began to fall, and the hole was filled with water. All the wolves drank of the water. Spread-wings held the arrow upward until all had drunk their fill, then he reversed it, and the water disappeared from the hole.

BETSUNÉ-YENÉCA^N.¹

Many Indians were camping together. One evening they heard a little baby crying in the brush. A number of young girls ran thither, but as they approached the noise ceased. Not long after, the crying was heard again. This occurred three times. The fourth time an old woman went to see what was the matter. Again she heard the sound as if it came from directly in front of her. She found some deer dung. Scratching it up, she found a baby about eight inches long. She picked it up, and it began speaking to her. The old woman had sons who had gone off hunting. When they returned, the baby asked one of them for the front leg of the smallest deer slain by them. It was given to him, and he fed on that. Another time they killed plenty of deer. Betsuné-yenéca^N again requested his grandmother to ask for the leg of the smallest deer, but the men refused, saying they wanted it for their own children, and offered him some other part. When the old woman returned without the leg, Betsuné-yenéca^N was very angry. "Because I am small they insult me, but I will make them starve." The other people heard what he said and were angry. They said, "We'll see whether the little boy can make us starve." They went away. The grandmother stayed with the child.

Betsuné-yenéca^N told the old woman to cut plenty of pine branches, to put the ends in the fireplace of each abandoned lodge, and to let him know as soon as the tips of the sticks were burnt. After a while she called him. In his uncles' lodges the sticks were burnt in deer hoof shape, in the other lodges they were burnt round (?). "This means that my uncles will always have deer, while the other people will starve." He started off with his grandmother, who was afraid of starving. Betsuné-yenéca^N said to her,

"There need be no fear of starvation, just do as I tell you." She carried him on her back. They got to a muddy little lake. "Stop and fish here," he said. "Why, there is nothing here but worms." "Take me down and I'll drop my hooks." Some animal with a white covering came to the hook. It was a gigantic jackfish. Then Betsuné-yenécaⁿ told her to lower the hook, and she caught a black trout. "That's enough," said the boy, "there won't be any more now. Build a brush lodge here, dry the fish, make grease, and we'll camp here." The old woman did as she was bidden. Betsuné-yenécaⁿ went out. She thought he was only playing, but at noon he was not yet back. She saw his snowshoe tracks leading to the brush. Then she began to bemoan his loss and was afraid that all alone she should starve. But in the evening she heard a noise, and he came in covered with ice. "I think, you have fallen into the ice." "No, take off my belt." Inside his coat there were plenty of deer tongue tips. He had killed the deer by biting off the tips of their tongues, and what seemed to be ice on him was only the foam from their mouths. The next morning he said, "Let us go where I have killed the deer. The first one we see you will dry and pound for me; gather the grease but don't eat any yourself." It was a little bit of a deer, which was lying on the lake. Betsuné-yenécaⁿ bade his grandmother build a shelter. She dried the deer meat, of which they had plenty.

Then the boy went to see his uncles. He got to where they were, but concealed himself. By a lake he saw their hooks set for jackfish. He took off his snowshoes, turned himself into a deer, and scratched around near the hooks. Only his two uncles were alive, subsisting on fish and bear meat; the other Indians had perished. They noticed the deer. "It is odd that that little deer is continually scratching around where our hooks are." Then one of them said, "That was a queer boy that our mother found; perhaps he is a medicineman and has turned into a deer to laugh at us. We had better track him." They got to a clump of pines; there the deer tracks ceased, and snowshoe tracks began. The men followed them until they got to a lake, where they saw a spruce tree lodge. They found their mother having plenty of meat and fat. The little fellow was there, so small that he could hardly be seen. After the arrival of her sons, the old woman soon fell sick and died. The boy turned into a deer again and disappeared towards the Barren Grounds. Before leaving he said, "As long as you and your children live, you will always tell a tale about me."

THE MAN IN THE MOON.¹

Once there was a great beaver hunter. Returning from the chase one day, he made a lot of grease and forbade the people to touch it. Nevertheless, one man put his finger in, and tasted of the fat while the hunter was pulling down his leggings. When the beaver hunter noticed what had occurred, he was furious. He went outside, followed by his little dog, and announced to the people, "Henceforth you can look for me in the moon." That is where one can see him, with his leggings down and a little dog sitting on his lap.

THE SUN-CATCHER.²

A man named Ayás was traveling about in the brush. He came to a trail, where he found all the sticks burnt. He lay down to sleep there, and while he was sleeping something passed over him and burnt up his deer-skin coat. He woke up and was very much vexed at the sight of his burnt garment. Unstringing his bow, he cried, "I'll find out what passes this place." He made a snare of the string, setting it in the road. He went home. The next day, there was no sign of the sun's rising. Ayás' sister suspected that her brother was to blame, and said, "You are always after some mischief." He replied, "I set a snare the other day, I'll see whether I have caught anything." He found that he had snared the sun. All the animals tried to release it, but it jumped to and fro, so that it was too hot for them. At last, a small yellow mouse began gnawing at the string until it was gnawed through, but the mouse was burnt to death. The sun started on its path. This is how the skin of one species of mice came to be yellow. If it had not been for the mouse, the sun would have remained a prisoner.

THE CROW.³

A large band of Indians were living along a lake. All kinds of white birds came there. A man called out to them, "I shall paint you with different colors, it does not look well for all of you to look alike!" He left the white wavy as it was, painted the loon black and white, and so gave a different color to each species. At last came the crow, who was quite white. "I'll spot you like the loon," said the man. But the crow protested strongly, saying he did not want his clothes painted at all. But the Indians caught him, and the painter blackened him all over, saying, "You are too conceited, I'll blacken you." All the other birds and the Indians ran away. The crow tried to catch them, but only managed to get hold of the blackbird. The crow said, "You, at least, shall be of the same color as myself," and rubbed his paint all over the blackbird.

¹ In another version the final statement is to the effect that one can see the kettle with beaver grease and the little dog.

The crow continued to be angry. He started first south, then northwards to the Barren Grounds, and built a fence to prevent the deer from coming to the Indians. The painter bade different birds scour the country for deer, but they returned without having found a trace of them. A long time after, the night-owl, perching on a tree, saw the crow coming from the south. The crow was seated on a pine; he wore a necklace of deer's eyeballs. The people said, "The crow is getting deer away from us." The crow laughed, and said, "You made me black, you are looking black from starvation now." The bird-painter bade the night-owl watch the crow's movements. He saw the crow fly first south, then return and go in the opposite direction to the Barren Grounds until he disappeared between two big mountains. All the Indians started after him. They found a big enclosure with two gates between the rocks. Several animals were sent to get through these entrances, but the crow beat them back with a club. The wolves tried first, then the lynx attempted to crawl through, putting in his nose, but the crow dealt him a blow that flattened his nose to its present shape. Then two white foxes were sent. They got through the first door, and the crow, instead of hitting them, only broke his own gate. The foxes got through the second door. Then the deer began to sally forth. The night-owl was watching them and cried out, "They are coming as plentiful as maggots!" There were so many that they trampled down the track so as to become invisible, they could only be heard coming. The crow wept at the loss of his game, but by his medicine he made the skins of the escaping deer so hard that weapons could not pass through them, so the Indians continued to starve. At length, the crow said, "You played me a fine trick, but I played you one also by making you starve. But from tomorrow on you shall be able to chase the deer again, only leave me the liver and the inside fat." The people promised to do so as long as he lived. Then their young hunters went out and got plenty of meat. The Indians still leave the guts and fat for the crows to feed on.

Formerly the Indians would play with caribou, making them stand quiet by patting them. Some silly girls once said, "Let us mark some of them." So they took some string from the back of their hair, tied it around the deer's necks and cut their ears. "We'll know these deer when they come next year." In the fall the deer returned to the Barren Grounds. Next year there were no deer. The people began to starve. One man said, "I'll see whether I can't find them." He kept on traveling until he reached a big body of water. On the sea there was a dead calm. He saw deer swimming, many of them with strings around their necks and with marked ears. These would not let the others return to the Indian country, but drove them back. The hero went to the deer and cut off the strings from their necks. He seized one little deer and led it off towards his people. Its mother followed. Then all the other deer also followed. They got to a big mountain. The Indians were on the other side and perceived Edĕ'khuwè with something beside him. After feeding, he sent the little deer to the Indians, and all the others started in the same direction. Without Edĕ'khuwè no more caribou would have been seen in this country.

THE SNOW-MAN.

Once it continued to be winter for two years. There were no geese in the country, and moose, deer, and caribou had no horns, the people did not know why. The ice never thawed during all this time. The Indians could not dig holes for their nets. They made big fires, heated stones red-hot, and threw them on the ice, but it was too thick to be broken through. The Indians were beginning to starve. Towards springtime there was a little thawing, but then it became winter once more. Many died of starvation. The survivors were crying for fear. One man started off towards Fond du Lac to set snares for partridges. When visiting his snares he met a person on the road. This person was quite white, and behind him came nothing but snow. It was the Snow-Man. The Indian said, "What are you coming here for? The Indians up north are killing all your children." When Snow-Man heard this, he turned right about to the Barren Grounds. Then summer came, the geese returned, and moose and deer had horns once more.

THE TRIP TO THE SKY.¹

Once in the summer, the Indians had neither fish nor game to eat. They had a council and decided to make medicine. One man said, "Let us get some squirrels." They got one squirrel and put it alongside the fire. They worked medicine until the squirrel's hair was singed yellow. The medicine-worker thus found out where good weather and bad weather, rain and snow, as well as all the animals, were kept. He told the people all the animals had gone up to the sky, and advised them to go there also.

The people set out in canoes and kept traveling for a time, then they made a portage to a little lake. They saw a cloud hanging across the sky. All animals were kept in this cloud in different sacks, and the last sack was nearest to the sky-hole. The men paddled up (sic) their canoes until they got to the cloud, and a little fellow told them what kind of animals were contained in each bag, until they got to the last. They asked him several times what was contained in it, but he refused to answer.

At last they seized the sack and ascended to the sky with it, then they dropped it through the sky-hole. The sack contained all the heat, and in falling it burst, so that the heat came out and burnt up the world. They also took the jackfish and threw it down that is why it has such a peaked head now.

There was no earth then, only water was left.² The people sent down birds from the sky to dive for land. They dived down but came back without finding land. At last one bird (pin-tail duck) dived. It did not return for a long time. It came at last, with mud in its mouth and feet. It was sent out again, and brought more mud. It kept flying back and forth, bringing more mud; and thus gradually built up the earth again.

THE ADULTERESS.³

There was a woman who did not care for her husband. Every evening she went out to gather firewood for the night. However, she never got enough to last through the night, so she would leave in the middle of the night under pretext of fetching more. In reality she went to a rotten birch tree as large as a lodge, in which two large ants were dwelling. These would embrace her. At length her husband grew suspicious and followed her one night. He saw her tapping the tree and turning her back towards it. The ants came out and embraced her. When the man saw this, he turned back home and left the country. Not finding him on her return, his wife tracked him, but never found him. Perhaps they are still traveling that way to-day.

² This is unintelligible from the version here presented, but becomes clear from Petitot's tale, in which the expedition to the sky takes place during an exceptionally severe winter for the purpose of getting heat from the upper world. When the sack is opened, the heat spreads rapidly, melting all the snow and thus producing a flood.

³ Compare Petitot, p. 407.

THE GIANTS.

A giant used to hunt beaver along Lake Athabaska, going about half way to Fond du Lac. He was bringing up a little Indian boy, whom he called his grandchild, and whom he kept alive after killing all the other Indians. In hunting beavers he broke the beavers' lodge, and they all escaped. He broke another lodge. One beaver went across the lake, another up the river. The giant looked around for the former, found a little hole and saw the beaver's head popping out. He struck it with a stick, so hard that blood was sprinkled all over, hence the reddish appearance of the rocks there. The beaver that went up the river escaped, that is why there are many beavers there.

The giant cut off the beaver's tail. Seeing the scales he said, "This is not good to eat," and threw the beaver's tail away. The Indian boy picked it up and put it in the fire. The scales fell off, and the inside was found good to eat. This was the first time the giant ever ate a beaver tail. When through eating, he put his grandson in his mitten, and walked off. He found moose tracks, but said, "These are rabbit tracks." His grandson said to him, "These are not rabbit tracks but moose tracks." They got to a moose, and HotcowE, the giant, put it in his belt as one would a rabbit. Then he went to the Barren Grounds, and thence to the sea, where he met another giant, named Djéneta. Djéneta was fishing in the ocean with a hook.

Before reaching Djéneta, HotcowE took his grandson out of his mitten, and bade him approach the fisherman half way and deliver him a challenge to fight. The boy did as he was bidden, and when near enough shouted, "Grandfather!" Djéneta asked, "What do you want?" The boy delivered his message, and ran back, but by that time the giants had already each made a step forward and were already fighting above him. The fisherman was getting the best of the contest, when HotcowE called to his grandchild, who always carried a beaver tooth, to cut the giant's ankle. The boy obeyed, causing the giant to fall down so that HotcowE could easily dispatch him.

The fisherman's head fell on this island ¹ while his feet reached another land. Mud gathered on his corpse, connecting the island and the other country, and then deer for the first time ran from the new land into this country.

THE MAGICAL TREES.

Long ago men and women going off together would sometimes leave their little ones alone at home with a small fire and, by medicine, could send in large trees to feed the fire. But when the medicine got weak, the branches would sometimes hurt the children. Once a woman, returning home, found a baby's belly torn and the tree covered with blood. She was furious, and began beating the tree. Since then the trees can no more be made to come in by themselves.

THE ORIGIN OF A SAND-HILL.

There was once a big beaver that was killed by a giant. It was on this lake. While dying, it kicked about with its legs and thus originated a sand-hill.

MARTEN-AXE.

Marten-axe was a wonderful man. He used to travel among his friends. Whenever he found Cree, he would always kill them. He was in the habit of staying with the Chipewyan. Once he started out to travel, and came to a band of Cree. He knew all languages. So he told the Cree that he was a Cree himself and that the Chipewyan had killed all his friends. He traveled with the Cree to the top of a high mountain, where he lay down. In the night, while the Cree were sleeping, he tied all their legs with a cord, to the same rock. Then he rolled the rock down the mountain, killing all the Cree.

ADVENTURES OF TWO BOYS.²

A band of Indians was staying along a lake. Once two little boys were playing by the lake, while the Cree came and killed all their people. When they returned home, one of them said, "All our people are killed, I don't know what to do." They walked about crying. Towards evening two young unfledged geese came swimming along. The boys caught hold of them. Finding an old canoe by the shore, they tied the geese to it and bade them swim off to their country. The boys fell asleep, while the geese pulled their canoe along. When they woke up, the geese were full-grown. They were hungry and had nothing to eat, so they killed the geese, roasted them, and ate their flesh.

They started off traveling and continued going for a long time. They got to a lodge. There was a giant family living there. The children were outside. The mother came out; she did not know what kind of people the boys came from. She took them in, and they were kept there for a long time. After a while, the giant dreamt that some Indians were coming. He said to the boys, "My grandchildren, I am hungry for fish and beaver. Walk along the shore, and if you see anything white rising, cry out, 'My grandfather would like to eat some beaver and fish!'"

The little fellows started out. They saw something white rising from the water and called out as bidden by the giant. Then a beaver and a trout came out of the water, and they killed both. They carried them to the lodge. The giant cut up and dried the trout. Of its eyes he made pemmican for the little fellows. He made two bows and arrows and gave them to the boys. "If you shoot with this arrow, and it should get stuck anywhere, don't remove it, but leave it in that place. This other arrow will never stick, but will always fall down again." Then he bade them refrain from eating all their meat at once, but ordered them always to leave a remnant. He showed them the way to their own country, and they started out.

They had something to eat when they got hungry, but, remembering the giant's caution, they pushed a part of their meat back into their sack. In the evening they opened the sack, and it contained as much pemmican as before. They ate all but a small piece, which was replaced in the bag. In the morning the meat was still of the same size as originally.

They hunted some chickens perched on a tree. One was killed and fell down, but the arrow stuck. The boys took the chicken and started off again into the bush, but there they found the arrow lying in front of them. They walked on. Again some chickens alighted on a tree, not very far away. They shot at it, and the one arrow got stuck though rather close to the ground. One boy was going to get it. His brother said, "We were told not to go after that arrow." The first boy said it was not high, and insisted on getting it. As he touched it, the arrow ascended higher. "I'll jump up and get hold of it." "No, don't," said the other boy, but his brother disobeyed and jumped. Then the arrow went up with him to the sky.

It was summer when he was traveling on the earth, but in heaven it was winter. The arrow stopped, and the boy began to travel about. It looked like his own country in winter. He saw partridge tracks, and finally he got to people's tracks. Following them for a long time, he got to two lodges, one being large and the other small. He entered the small one, and found an old woman sitting there all alone.

In the large lodge people were heard singing and laughing. The old woman took a lot of coal and blackened the hero's face with it. After a while her two girls came in from the large lodge. Seeing the boy, they called out that their mothers had a fine-looking visitor. They went back to their large lodge and told the other inmates about him. Meanwhile the old woman washed him and dressed him up nicely. When the girls returned, and saw the boy nicely dressed, they no longer laughed at him, but were surprised. They told the people of the lodge what a nice boy was staying with their mother.

Both desired to marry him. In the night the boy slept in the old woman's lodge and the girls came in and lay down on each side of him. He turned to the youngest, et sub vestem manum introduxit, sed aliquid manum prehendit, and he pulled it back. Tunc ad utrius filiae vaginam pedem suum propellit, sed iterum aliquid eum prehendere conatus est. He pulled it back. One woman had mice under her dress, the other one ermines. They all fell asleep. In the morning the boy still slept soundly. He sunk way down into the ground. The old woman and the girls started off with their lodge-poles. The girls in one place smelt a person. They heard some animal calling underground. "One of us had better get ribs to dig up this fellow." They got a rib and began digging, but it broke. Then they got a moose rib, and with it they succeeded in digging up the boy who had turned into a wolf. He recognized the girls, and said, "You pretend to know much, but I know nearly as much as you. Here are two arrows, if a female comes, it shall belong to the Ermine girl, if a male comes, it shall belong to the Mouse girl."

The girls saw the tracks of a male and of a female moose. The wolf said, "If a moose starts running, just shoot your arrows and follow into the bush." They soon came to the female, cut it up and dried its meat. The male was shot and treated in the same way. As the wolf had directed, one girl stayed by one moose, the other by the other, while the wolf remained with the mother. The wolf and the old woman heard wolves howling in the distance. Starting in that direction they found that one girl had been rent to pieces by the wolves and that a lot of ermines were running about there. The wolves had only torn the Mouse-girl's dress and there were a lot of mice running about there. The wolf said, "Your daughters thought they knew lots, but I know more." He started off with the wolves. Then he turned back into a person and married the Mouse-girl. The three then stayed together.

The boy was a great hunter. They had plenty of dried meat. The old woman would make rawhide cordage and when she had made a great deal of cord, she said, "I know a place where there is a hole in the sky, and where we can go down to another world."

They traveled a long time to the sky-hole. She made a moose-skin bag for the boy, passed a line through it, and said, "I'll let you down to your own country. When it stops, you'll open the sack and come out. Pull the line to let me know you have arrived." He descended for a long time, until the sack stopped. He got out, and jerked the rope, whereupon the sack immediately ascended again.

He found himself on an island, and all around it was nothing but foaming rapids. He got to an eagle's nest. Only the young eagle was there. He said, "I am very anxious for you, for my people are wicked. I'll try to save you. Hide under my wing-feathers." So he pushed the boy under his feathers. Then he continued, "My mother will soon come. When she approaches it will be dark like a cloud. When my father comes, it will sound like a big wind." After a while it began to grow dark. "My mother is coming." When the female arrived she said, "My son, I smell some people here." But the eaglet replied, "There is nothing here." She repeated, but he insisted that no one was there. After a while a big storm was heard, and the father bird arrived. "My son, I smell the odor of people here." The boy denied that there were any people there. The father repeated his statement, but the boy persisted in his denial. After a time the old eagles started off again. Then the eaglet said, "Pull out two feathers from each side of my body, and try to fly." He put the feathers on the boy's arms, and said, "Fly around." The boy began to fly but his legs hung down. "Pull two feathers from my tail, and attach them to your legs." The boy did so, and then flew about like an eagle. "Now you can fly to your country, but always stop for the night," said the eaglet. "When you reach your country, stick my feathers on the trees." The boy flew to his country. He arrived there by night, and stuck up his borrowed feathers. He traveled homeward, camping every night, as ordered by the eaglet. One day he was hungry, and began to break a beaver lodge, making a chisel of rib bones and a spear. He watched for the beaver, but though something stirred in the water, no beaver came up. As it grew dark, he camped. Suddenly something caught hold of him from behind. It was one of the big eagles, who flew off with him. They got to a frozen creek, all covered with blood. There the bird threw the boy down, but the latter just put out his chisel, and was not hurt by the fall. Then the bird again seized him, carried him off, and hurled him against a sharp ice-crag. But again he put forward his chisel, so that it stuck in the ice, and he was saved. Then the eagle said, "My children will kill him." So he took him back to the eyrie. The young ones recognized him. The old bird said, "I've brought you a person to kill when you are hungry." The young birds said, "We'll keep him for company, let him stay with us." After much discussion the old eagle finally consented. Then the old eagles flew off. The young eagle again gave feathers to the boy, and he flew off.¹

THE STOLEN WOMEN.

A band of Chipewyan were staying by a lake. While the men were hunting, some Cree stole two of the Chipewyan women, who were sisters. Returning, the Chipewyan wanted to go after the Cree, but there were too few of them. So they stayed where they were, and continued to hunt deer. Each man would skin his deer, put all the deer meat in the hide, and thus drag it to the lodge. The brother of the stolen women was a medicineman. He was very angry and started alone after the Cree. On his way he passed three birds' nests. He had to speak to each before they allowed him to pass, and they gave him information as to the Cree. The fourth animal he met was a flying squirrel. It told him where he might find his sisters. "First, you must pass a snail, and if you lack food, ask the snail for some. Then you will get to an old woman." The man traveled on, until he camped by a creek. He had nothing to eat. When a snail came, he asked it for food. The snail dived into the water, brought up four white fish and gave them to him. But on opening the sack, he found the fish transformed into snails. So he threw them away, and traveled on until he got to a lodge. He entered. There was an old woman there. "Grandmother, I am very hungry." "I have nothing to give you, but go to the bush, and you will be sure to find some chickens. Pluck a chicken on the spot where it falls dead, stir up the feathers with a stick, and blow on them. Then every feather will turn into a chicken." He acted accordingly, and each feather changed into a chicken that flew on the trees.

He started off again. His wife had been tracking him. He had been pulling along his deer hide with meat all the time, not noticing how his load was lightening as pieces of the meat fell out. The increased lightness of his load he attributed to his increasing strength. His wife had fed on these lost scraps of venison. She knew he had only one deer and kept track of the pieces found. She knew after a while that only the head was left. At last she found the head, and then she thought she had better turn back, or she should starve, that being the very last piece.

Her husband continued until he got to an old woman.¹ She was a toad. She said, "You won't travel a day, before you'll arrive at your destination. I can't tell you how you can best rescue your sisters, you'll have to judge yourself when you get there." He walked on, and got to the tracks of the Cree. At sunset he saw smoke far ahead. He saw a lodge without poles, but tied together of sticks, with an opening at one side. He watched in the bushes all night. He heard the people talking Cree, but stayed in the brush all night. Some one had left a moose hide outside.

In the morning he saw two women coming out of the lodge. They were his sisters. He made signs to them, and one of them came to him. The other woman worked at the moose hide. The man said, "This evening I'll try to rescue you from the Cree. Cover yourself with a blanket and tie it with a rotten string, so that when your husband tries to pull you back, the string will break. Tell your sister about it." In the evening the two women ate with their husband. They donned blankets and put sinew around, but the older sister used a kind of strong rag (?). The younger sister went ahead. She told their husband that they were going to fetch wood. The younger one started off. Her husband tried to restrain her, but the string broke, and she escaped. But the string of the older did not break, and so her husband held her back. The Chipewyan and his younger sister escaped. Every night, by their medicine, the Cree transformed the camping place of the fugitives into an island with fierce rapids around it, but in the morning the Chipewyan, by his medicine, conquered that of the Cree. Thus they got away in safety.

THE BEAR AND THE MAN.

Once a man was cutting out the gunwale of his canoe in the brush. He carried it homewards, one end on his shoulder, the other trailing on the ground. From time to time it seemed to get heavier, and he said to himself, "I am sure, a bear is pulling at the wood." He turned around, and saw it was really a bear. The Bear said, "Do you hear the noise of the creek near by?" The man said, "Yes." "There are lots of fish there, let us go thither." They started off. The bear bade him leave his wood behind, and he did so. They walked on and on for many days, and by autumn they had not yet reached the creek. Then the Bear said, "Let us make a house." He dug a hole in the ground, and told his companion to get grass to stop up the entrance. They went inside, and the boy was told to sit farthest from the door. "If you get thirsty," said the Bear,¹ "you may suck me, and if you get hungry, you can do the same. Thus you will be able to live with me all winter."

They lived together in the cave. Towards spring, the Bear said, "Some of your friends are thinking of you and will soon be thinking of me." When the snow began to melt he said, "Perhaps to-morrow your people will be here. Make a mark with your hand outside the cave, so they'll know that you are here and won't shoot inside." Next day they heard a noise above, and snow began to fall down the airhole. The Chipewyan detected the mark of the boy's hand and said, "Surely some person is inside." The Bear said to the boy, "Tell them there is a bear-man here. If they kill me, you may eat my flesh, but not my entrails, though your friends may." The boy went out, and the people shot the bear, made a big fire, roasted him and feasted on him. The boy went on the opposite side of the fire, where it was smoky, and began to cry on account of his friend's death. When they asked him why he cried he said it was on account of the smoke.²

WISÁKETCAK.

Long ago it commenced to rain. It rained incessantly. The Indians fled to higher ground. They gathered on the highest mountain. Wisáketcak, who had expected a flood, built a canoe. When the land was nearly submerged, he embarked. The other Indians were having the water up to their knees. Wisáketcak did not permit anyone to get into his boat. The Indians asked the beaver to punch a hole into the canoe with his teeth. When the beaver got near the boat, Wisáketcak asked, "What are you coming for?" "Just to look at your canoe." "Let me see your teeth, I think they are sharp." Wisáketcak threw a stone down the beaver's throat so that he could not injure his canoe. When the mountains were flooded, all the Indians were drowned. Wisáketcak called a kind of long-tailed duck. "Brother, come here! It has ceased to rain. Dive down, and see whether you can find any mud." It dived for a long time. At length it came up with some mud on its feet. It dived again and again, and every time it rose to the surface it brought up some mud until the earth was entirely rebuilt.

¹ Said to be a male by the narrator.

² In some respects this story resembles an Assiniboine tale collected by myself (this series, Vol. IV, p. 190).

Wisáketcak was traveling about. He got to a deer skull. There were many maggots inside. He addressed them as follows: "Brethren, let me eat with you." They consented. He shoved his head inside; it stuck fast, so that he could not get it out. He turned himself into a deer, and continued to travel along. He got to a river. Not seeing any one near by, he began to swim across. When more than half way across, he caught sight of four birchbark canoes coming down. The people in the canoes were saying, "There's a deer crossing the river ahead of us, let us shoot him." They hurried towards him. The deer got ashore on a rocky bank. Falling down, he struck his head against the rock and broke his skull. He turned into his natural shape, and ran into the brush. The people cried, 'This is Wisáketcak!'

He was traveling alone through the brush when he heard a bear running. "Brother, why are you running away from me? Stop there." The bear stood still. Wisáketcak began to feel about his ribs. "You are very lean, how is that?" "There are no berries around here, that is the reason." Wisáketcak said, "I know a place not very far from here, where there are lots of berries, let us go there." They started out, Wisáketcak leading. They got to the place, and the bear began to eat. When he had eaten his fill, he lay down in the sun, then he ate again. Wisáketcak noticed that the bear was fattening. He felt his ribs again. The bear asked, "What are you doing this for?" "Oh! I always do that to my brother." Wisáketcak began breaking some sticks. "What are you doing this for?" "Oh, I just feel like working." Wisáketcak continued breaking sticks. While the bear was eating, Wisáketcak from time to time felt his ribs, saying this was but an old trick of his. Finally, the bear lay down, and fell asleep. Wisáketcak went up close to him, took a stick and struck him over the head, ears, and stomach until he had killed him. Then he cut him open, and feasted on him. He ate so much fat that he began to have pains in the stomach. Looking around, he caught sight of two juniper trees growing together. "Brethren, spread apart, I have pains in the stomach." They obeyed, and he got between them. The trees closed, and jammed him tight. While he was in this position, some whiskey-jacks came and began to eat of the bear meat. "Little brethren," said Wisáketcak to the trees, "let me go to watch my food." However he could not get out. In the meantime, the birds devoured all the food, leaving nothing but bones. "Brethren," he said again, "separate and let me get out." After a long time, he succeeded in freeing himself. Being angry at the trees, he began to twist them about. Since then junipers have had irregular trunks.

When he got down, he found nothing but the bear bones. Pounding these, he extracted the marrow and put it in a bladder, because it was too hot to be eaten. He got to a creek, sat down, and caught sight of a muskrat swimming there. "My brother, come here, and cool this grease for me in the water." The muskrat replied, "My tail is too big, I can't swim well with it." "Come here, and I will fix it for you." He pulled the muskrat's tail and made it small. The muskrat said, "My brother, I feel quite well now, let me have the bladder now, I will cool it." "Be careful, so that it will not burst." The muskrat dived down. The bladder burst, and the grease began to float down stream. Wisáketcak ran along, dipping it up with his hands.

Wisáketcak traveled along night and day. He found fresh tracks; they were those of a moose-cow and two young moose. "My brethren, why are you running away? Wait for me." They stood still, and he caught up to them. "My brethren, you are foolish to stop like this. The Black-heads (Chipewyan) are following your tracks and will kill you. Keep traveling in a circle, back and forth, turn about, and lie down on the leeward of your path. Then they will not know which tracks to follow, and you will be able to scent them and make your escape." This is what the moose do to-day, because Wisáketcak taught them.

Wisáketcak started off again. He found that his eyes were getting weak. When he came to a big lake, he said, "I will try to get new eyes." He cut out his eyeballs, and went about blind. Whenever he struck a tree, he would ask it, "Brother, what kind of a tree are you?" And the tree would answer, "Poplar" (or whatever other species it belonged to). At last he got to a pine, and the tree answered, "I am a pine, I have plenty of gum." Wisáketcak found the gum, chewed it, rolled it between his palms and put the gum balls into his sockets. Thus he got new eyes.

He traveled on, and got to a big lake, where he found many Cree Indians. The Cree recognized him, and asked him whether he knew of any Chipewyan near by. "I did not come here to tell you about my brethren." He left them, and went towards the Barren Grounds. There he espied a great many lodges in the open country, and encountered a large band of Chipewyan. "My brethren, don't stay here too long, for many Cree are looking for you." He started off again. After a long time, he reached another band of Chipewyan, who were starving. "My brethren, why are you starving? There are plenty of deer not far from here, you ought to go and live there." In those days they had no guns. They started in the direction indicated, and got the deer. They constructed a deer pen and set snares near its opening. Some began to drive deer, and many were dispatched with bows and arrows. At that time the Indians had no clothes.

Wisáketcak said, "It will not be always like this. You will not wear deer raiment forever. Some time you will wear another people's clothes." And this has come true.

Wisáketcak left the Indians. He got to a range of rocky mountains. "My brethren, you are too high, you had better come down into the valley, then I shall walk better." They came down, and he continued his journey. He reached a creek. Being thirsty he stooped to drink. He saw some fish. "Little brethren, what are you doing here?" "We are eating." "Where is your father?" "We don't know, he is just traveling." "If you see any Chipewyan Indians with nets, enter the nets and feed them."

He started off again. He got to two mountains, where there were many birches, all without a single branch. "Brethren, you look too pretty without branches, you can't live long that way." He picked up brushes, threw them on the birches, and thus made numerous holes. That is why birches are striped nowadays, and Indians find it hard to make birchbark canoes.

He went on traveling. He reached a little lake. He saw ducks swimming there. "Brethren, come ashore here." There was a female with young ones. "This little one looks like you," he said. "There are lots of you. If you see any Chipewyans, or Crees, fly around them, so that they may kill you and feast on you."

He went on. He got to a little river, where he slaked his thirst. He saw two otters swimming towards him. "Brethren, what are you doing? You have exceedingly short legs, they are not good for walking on land." "We are meant to live in the water." "Live wherever there are fish. There are plenty of Chipewyan and Cree Indians going around starving. Go, and put fish on top of the ice to help them." The otters consented.

Late in the fall, Wisáketcak reached a little river. He saw two beavers eating. "What are you doing here?" "We are just eating." "Why don't you build a house? Stick birches and poplar branches around, use mud for plastering, and put branches at the bottom. Thus you may live in the winter. Build a dam. If you don't do this you will have no water to swim in." He taught them. Since then they have always built dams. He further told them not to swim about before sunset, or the Indian hunters would kill them.

Wisáketcak continued his journey. He came to a herd of buffalo. Some of them began to run away. "Brethren, don't run away, I have come to see you." Then he asked, "What are you eating?" They said they were eating branches and trees. He told them to eat nothing but grass. "If you see starving Indians, let one of you lag behind so that the Indians can feed on you."

He traveled on. He got to a clump of pines.¹ All the trees looked alike. "You all look alike, I will make one of you different." Addressing one of them, Wisáketcak said, "Brother, be stickier than the rest. You shall have more gum than the others." Thus originated the balsam fir, of which the gum is still used by the Cree.

He started off again. His buttocks were getting blistered. He tore off the scabs and threw them on birch trees. Thus originated touchwood.

Wisáketcak came to a lake. There he saw a flock of geese, some old, some young. "Brothers, come here for a little while. I am making a dance not far away, and I should like you to accompany me." He erected a lodge, and bade the geese enter. He called all kinds of other birds inviting them to join. He bade all shut their eyes. They began to drum. Wisáketcak, as the leader of the dance, sat on one side. They danced around. Whenever a fat bird got near him, Wisáketcak pulled it over, killed it, and threw it aside. At last one young goose opened one eye and saw Wisáketcak pulling its father by the leg. "Wisáketcak is killing us!" it cried. The surviving birds all fled. As the water-hen and the loon were running out, Wisáketcak stepped on their feet. That is why their feet are not fit for walking on land. Wisáketcak cooked the fattest geese, and had a great feast. Of the rest he took out the gizzards and put them aside, then he went in search of a stick to put them on. He forgot all about them, however, and traveled on.

He reached a place where there were plenty of ants. "Little brethren how do you live in the winter? You have a very low dwelling." "That is why birds are killed." (?) He showed them how to build ant-hills.

Wisáketcak was traveling in the spring. He came to a place where a bear had been defecating and saw the excrements covered with fish scales. He laughed at the scales. The bear came, and said, "I heard you laughing about my excrements; I have come to see what you are laughing for." Wisáketcak said, "I was only saying it was a pity there were no bones or berries there instead of scales." They quarreled, and began to fight. Wisáketcak called on the ermine to help him. "My little brother, get into the bear's anus and destroy his guts, or he will kill me." The ermine entered the bear's body, ate his heart, and thus killed him. When the ermine came out, Wisáketcak washed him, holding him by the tail, that is why ermines have white bodies and black tails.

Wisáketcak continued traveling. He got to a rocky mountain, where he found plenty of black objects which cause flatulency. He ate many of them. After a while he began to break wind and was unable to stop. So he heated a stone, and sat on it. His rump became covered with scabs. He was obliged to scratch the itching parts until he tore them off and threw them up on the top of birch trees, where they are still visible.

Wisáketcak set out to travel. He saw a band of geese. "My brethren, come hither." They came down. "Give me half of your feathers, so that I may fly with you to your country." They consented, and he flew along with them. They were obliged to pass through a rocky, mountainous country, where many Indians were living. Nets had been set to catch geese. When the birds approached these snares, they scattered to avoid them, but Wisáketcak's borrowed feathers dropped off and he fell down among the Indians. "This is Wisáketcak again, we will dung on him." They placed him in a pit. "Whoever shall defecate, shall befoul him." In the night an old woman rose to ease herself and went to the pit, but in the meantime Wisáketcak had got out, merely leaving his clothes. The old woman soiled his clothes.

Wisáketcak went traveling again. He saw two moose. "Brethren, wait for me." He overtook them. "Brethren, you had better give me some hair, then I shall be a moose and stay with you." He became a moose and traveled with them. They told him that no Indians were near by. He joined about twelve moose. About the time of the heavy ice crust, Wisáketcak and one of the moose heard a noise. "It seems," said Wisáketcak, "that some one is coming after us. I will travel ahead and let you follow." The Indians came and killed the moose, one by one. Wisáketcak was left alone. When they got close, he tore off the moose-skin, turned into his real form, and ran off, leaving the skin behind. The people said, "That's Wisáketcak again."

Wisáketcak was traveling. He came to a big lake where he saw some swans. "Brethren, come ashore to me." He asked them for some of their feathers, saying that he should like to be a swan. They consented, and he became a swan. One calm evening, one of the swans said to Wisáketcak, "You had better not cry so loud, or the Indians will hear us." It was the swan's molting time. Wisáketcak replied, "There are no Indians near by." However, he caught sight of some canoes going after them. The swans started out on the lake to escape, but got too tired to fly. Most of them were killed. At last, two of them and Wisáketcak were the only ones that remained. The two birds approached the shore and were also killed. Wisáketcak set foot on shore and tore off his skin. The people said, "That's Wisáketcak again."

Wisáketcak got tired. He sat down. "I will not travel any more." He seemed to turn into a stone. For a long time he continued to sink below the ground. Only his hair was still visible on the outside of the rock. That was the end of him.

THE BEAVER INDIANS.

INTRODUCTION.

The material presented in this paper was secured during the summer of 1913, spent on the Peace River. Arriving at Vermilion June 18, a visit was first made to the Slavey on Hay River on the occasion of the payment of the treaty money. The month of July and the first two weeks of August were spent with the Beaver on Paddle River, particular attention being given to the language and the securing of myths and tales in the form of texts. During the latter half of August and September the Beaver of Fort St. John and Dunvegan were visited. About half of this time was consumed in travel; and work with the Indians was difficult because suitable interpreters were not available.

Not much of ethnological interest is directly observable at Vermilion since the outward aspects of life have yielded to the long continued influence of the fur traders. Conditions in that respect appear to be better at Fort St. John, but the Indians had left or were on the point of leaving for the fall hunting. The few ethnological notes here presented were mostly secured incidentally to the linguistic work and the collecting of specimens.

The sounds of Beaver are represented as follows: — a, e, i, o, u, nearly as in father, met, pique, bone, and rule; û as in but; ă, ę, ĭ, ȳ, nasalized; c as sh; x as jota in Spanish; ɭ, a lateral surd spirant; ʔ glottal stop; after a consonant indicates glottalization of the consonant.

ETHNOLOGICAL NOTES.

The Beaver Indians occupy the region of the Peace River from the eastern base of the Rocky Mountains in British Columbia along the Peace River to the falls about forty miles below Vermilion. They now exist in three geographical groups.

Trading at Fort St. John are one hundred and two individuals according to the report of the Canadian Government for 1914. They hunt northward to the headwaters of the Liard River and camp as far down the Peace as the North Pine River where the first trading post for them was established.¹ They are now in three small bands each with a headman. In many respects they are more primitive than either of the other two groups. Mackenzie called this group the Rocky Mountain Indians.² They are known to the Vermilion Beaver as, Tsa't'ū.

About Dunvegan are still one hundred and thirty Beaver, now settled on a reserve about fifteen miles north from the river. Until a generation ago they used to live on both sides of the river under one chief and gathered on the flat by the river at Dunvegan for their semi-annual reunion. They hunted northward to the headwaters of Hay River where they often met Beaver from Vermilion and Fort St. John, but not the Slavey of middle and lower Hay River. They also occupied considerable territory south of Peace River. They say there were no Indians living between themselves and the Fort St. John Indians on North Pine River.

Near Vermilion are one hundred and forty-eight Beaver Indians forming one political unit under a chief recognized by the Canadian Government. They live on a reserve along Paddle River, and hunt and trap westward toward Hay Lake, and north and eastward toward the Caribou Mountains.

There was formerly a considerable band near Peace River Crossing for whom trading posts were established about 1790. It was with this band that Mackenzie spent the winter of 1792-3 before setting out for the Pacific. There are a few individuals of this band still living. John Bourassa, who served as an interpreter, learned the Beaver language here where his father was married to a mixed blood. Between this group and those near Vermilion there are said to have been no early settlements of Beaver.

The Athapascan-speaking neighbors of the Beaver are the Chipewyan of Lake Athabasca to the east; the Slavey to the north on lower Hay River and upper Liard River; and the Sekani (Tsek'ene) of the Rocky Mountains to the west.

There were Cree living on Lesser Slave Lake when Mackenzie first visited Peace River. He speaks of the war road of the Cree from that lake to Peace River Crossing and mentions frequently the conflicts between the Cree and the Beaver. In Mackenzie's general account of the natives of western Canada he expresses his belief that the Cree had moved westward in comparatively recent times.¹ This statement apparently reflects a conclusion reached from the distribution of the tribes as they were then and is not based on any definite information as to the actual movements. A Beaver Indian of Dunvegan said that his grandfather told him that another tribe (meaning an Athapascan-speaking one) used to live on Lesser Slave Lake and that it had died out. After that the Cree occupied the region because of the fish to be had there.²

The antiquity of the Cree occupation is a matter of considerable interest because the Cree of Alberta separate the Beaver from the Assiniboin, Blackfoot, and Sarsi tribes of the Saskatchewan region, all having a Plains culture. The Sarsi furthermore are Athapascan-speaking, and as far as phonetics are concerned the Sarsi language is more nearly akin to Beaver than to any other east of the Rocky Mountains. It has been generally believed and sometimes stated that the Beaver and Sarsi separated only a short time ago. This assumption is based on two mutually contradictory Indian folk narratives. The Sarsi account has to do with the breaking of the ice as the band was marching across the lake. Those caught behind the break remained to become the Beaver; those who had already passed became the Sarsi; and those at the exact spot became the underwater people. The Beaver narrative tells of a battle and the withdrawal of the defeated party. The informant who gave the version which appears upon page 292 believed this to have happened at the beginning of the world when the tribes and languages were first differentiated, a Tower of Babel story.³

It is usual to find transitional tribes on the border of all well-defined culture areas like that of the Plains. The Sarsi and Blackfoot are typical Plains Indians of the northern type. The Beaver are definitely of the northern or Mackenzie culture area. The Cree, however, south of Edmonton, are Plains-like with a sun dance, etc., and north of Edmonton transi-

² I told the chief I had heard Lesser Slave Lake was Beaver country, what did he know about it. He said, "There used to be another tribe there (Beaver) but they died out and the Cree came in on account of the fish. It was the only place they could get fish." I asked how long ago. The chief said, "I did not mean to say I knew it was so but that was what my grandfather told me."

tional toward the north, but with many traits similar to those of the Eastern Cree.

The Beaver Indians on Peace River were not in direct contact with Europeans until about 1786, although they had felt the indirect influence of fur traders for some years before that date. A trading post was established on the Athabasca River about thirty miles south of Lake Athabasca in 1778. Traders of the various companies had visited the Saskatchewan further south since the middle of the eighteenth century. Even before that early date objects of European manufacture had been brought westward from Fort Churchill on Hudson's Bay by the Cree. This indirect influence manifested itself chiefly, as far as can be determined, through the better arms possessed by these Cree neighbors of the Beaver. This fact is referred to in several of the narratives included in this volume. The bows, arrows, and spears could not compete with flintlock muskets. According to Mackenzie, the Beaver first secured arms in 1782. Ten years later, when Mackenzie wintered near Peace River Crossing, bows and arrows were but little used.¹

SHELTER.

The ordinary dwelling of the Beaver was a tipi of the general Northern or Chipewyan type. It has a three-pole foundation but these poles are usually not tied at the place of crossing as is the case in the Plains, since they are either forked or have projecting limbs so that they interlock.² The tops of the remaining poles which make up the foundation rest in the top of this tripod. Suitable poles are easily secured in the north and are not ordinarily moved from place to place but are left standing. Old camp grounds are marked by these poles which in sheltered situations stand for several years.

The cover of the tipi in former days was made of the skins of the caribou or moose. In one story Agait'osdünne wishes for thirteen caribou skins from which a new tipi could be made.³ Mackenzie speaks of tipi covers as mooseskins, which are also said to have been in use in the Fort St. John region until recently. It seems queer that no mention is made of the use of buffalo skins, which were ordinarily used for this purpose in the Plains, since the animals were plentiful in parts of the Beaver territory. The striking difference in appearance between the tipis of the north and those of the Plains is that the cover of the latter fits closely around the crossing of the poles which are so placed as to occupy as little space as possible. The cover of the northern tipi leaves a considerable opening at the top (Figs. 1 and 2).

Temporary camps in summer are made by throwing together trees with the leaves on them so that they rest upon a tripod foundation. Trappers and other travelers overtaken in winter away from tipis build windbreaks of brush which in addition to keeping off the wind reflect back the heat of the fire.

TRANSPORTATION.

Because of the great distances and sparse population of the north, the matter of transportation is an important one. For property this is in a large measure avoided by means of caches. Each family, or larger band, visits the same localities at different seasons each year. In spring the property pertaining to life in winter is stored out of the reach of animals, usually in thick timber, but sometimes on a platform supported by four or more posts. The customs of the country are such that only the most shameless of men will take anything from such a cache. The wolverine gives the greatest trouble, for, according to the testimony of both Indians and whites, that animal will rob a cache as a mere piece of mischief, or if he cannot do that he will defile it from above if possible. The stories mention food stored in caches to which starving bands resorted.¹

In summer, canoes were used for water travel. These were built of birchbark or sprucebark on a frame after the Chipewyan and Cree method. When the spruce was used a single piece of bark was sufficient for a small canoe. It was folded, sewed at each end and provided with a proper frame of wood. No canoes of bark were seen among the Beaver, but their neighbors, the Slavey of Hay River, had both kinds in use and one of birchbark was building. Mackenzie mentions canoes of sprucebark.²

Horses have been introduced rather recently among the Beaver. In summer, goods were transported overland packed on the backs of dogs or carried by the Indians. Mackenzie remarks on the heavy loads carried by the Beaver women.³ The travois seems not to have been used by the Beaver.

² Mackenzie, 207.

³ Mackenzie, 147.

In winter the toboggan is used. This is made of two thin boards bent in a curve at the front and fastened together by crossbars attached to the upper side. Mackenzie mentions that this was drawn by the Indians. The Chipewyan of Cold Lake say that dog traction is recent.¹ It is common at the present time; each household has its dog train which is kept closely tied up during the summer.

Snowshoes of the Chipewyan type are used. They are long and narrow in distinction from the Cree type of nearly circular shoes.²

Food and small objects are stored and transported in large square bags made of skin with the hair left on. These are often made of the legskins of the caribou pieced together (Fig. 4), or of the headskins of the moose. For packing horses large bags of similar shape are made of rawhide in pairs, one for each side of the horse (Fig. 3). They serve much the same purpose as the rectangular parfleche of the Plains.

Food.

The struggle to secure a sufficient supply of food seems to have been especially severe for the Beaver. In many of the stories given below the statement is made that the band in question was starving. They practised no agriculture. The vegetable food was formerly limited to chokecherries, saskatoon, and other berries, and probably a few roots. These berries are dried in the sun and stored for winter use (Fig. 2). The inner bark of certain trees was also eaten.³

³ Mackenzie, 165.

One of the important food supplies is the large hare, or rabbit, as it is commonly called. These are generally snared by placing a slip noose stretched in the runways and attached to a spring pole so that the heedless rabbit pulls it loose and is thrown into the air. The women often tend these snares, and when rabbits are plentiful food of some sort may be had by everyone. But these rabbits die off periodically from some unknown cause. It is probable too that before the carnivorous animals were so generally trapped for fur, the enemies of the hare were more numerous and the hares themselves less plentiful. In summer when there are young rabbits their cries are imitated, either with or without a rabbit call (Fig. 5), and when the mother bounds out she is shot.

Next to rabbits the beaver was probably the most dependable of the game animals. The rainfall is not very great, but the country is flat and the drainage poor; evaporation is also comparatively slight. The beaver appear to have remade much of the country by damming the small streams, forming ponds from which canals extended in some cases many yards to small groves from which the beaver secured their food. The more usual method of taking beaver was to set up a row of poles forming a fence near the entrance to the lodge to prevent their escape. A hole was then chiseled through the top of the beaver house and the animals killed with a spear. In winter the task was a tedious one since the ground was solidly frozen.

When Mackenzie first passed up the Peace River he reported the plains bordering the river covered with numerous herds of buffalo and elk.¹ The buffalo seem to have been hunted solely on a community basis. The story of Agait'osdünne² indicates very grave penalties for anyone who interfered with the community rights. The usual method was that of driving the animals into a pound.

Caribou seem not to have been so generally distributed over the Beaver territory. They are particularly numerous in a range of mountains north of the falls of Peace River, Caribou Mountains, where the Vermilion band often go to hunt them. They are shot, and killed while swimming streams and lakes.³ No reference appears to driving them to frozen lakes and pounds although it is probable that method was also followed.

Bears are particularly numerous along Peace River and were so in Mackenzie's time. The grizzlies are now nearly extinct. According to the stories,¹ black bears found in their dens in winter relieved and often saved starving travelers. They were killed with deadfalls and possibly shot with arrows. They are now killed with guns.

² Pp. 238, 241.

The largest and most generally distributed of the game animals was the moose. Throughout the greater part of the Beaver country there are a great many swamps, to the primitive number and size of which the many beaver have added considerably. There are also large tracts of timber especially along the streams and on the islands. Moose were always living in such places, but not even the best hunter was certain of approaching close enough to kill one. Perhaps in the case of no other animal were the game and the hunter so evenly matched in perceptions and cunning.² In every large band there were always a few Indians who lacked sufficient keenness, patience, and endurance to secure moose. Men of this sort are mentioned in the stories, and such men are still found among the Beaver. In contrast to these, there were a few very skilful hunters whose success was attributed to supernatural power, or to what really amounts to the same thing, a supposed inclination of the moose toward the hunter. With the average men, the majority, the contest was so even that what is known as hunter's luck played a prominent part. When conditions were unfavorable and no moose were secured, in the absence of other food, the situation was desperate. The first day a hunter without food starts out with a fair prospect of being able to kill a moose. He is able to travel twenty or thirty miles and has a good chance of finding the track of a moose, which he may follow to success. The second day the chances are considerably less and by the third or fourth day the exertion and cold without a supply of food has completely worn him out. For this reason the hunters in a time of starvation were the first to die, and the women and children, not having exerted themselves, survived.

During the mating season of the moose their ordinary caution is in abeyance. A skilful hunter imitates the call of one sex and some member of the opposite sex will rush up in answer to the call. A cone-shaped trumpet of birchbark is used in making these calls (Fig. 6). If the bushes be scraped with a dry shoulder blade any bull moose within hearing will answer the challenge. A hunter on snowshoes after a heavy fall of snow also has great advantage over moose.¹

When game failed, bands of Indians went together to fish lakes which according to the stories, were also visited by the Cree, their enemies. These lakes abound south and east of Peace River. There are also many lakes and sloughs in the country north and west of Peace River but not many of them have edible fish. In winter time the fish were taken with a hook and line let down through a hole cut in the ice. In the spring when certain varieties of fish were migrating, walls of stone were built out from each shore of the smaller streams converging in the center where a trap was placed made of poles placed lengthwise of the stream. The water falling through between the poles left the fish helpless (Figs. 7, 8). Fish were also taken in seines stretched in the river where there was an eddy. The bottom of the net was weighted with stones and the top supported with floats. Stakes driven in the river were used for attaching the two ends of the net.

CLOTHING.

Very little information was obtained concerning clothing. Judging from dolls said to be dressed in the old style, it appears that the man's winter garment is a long coat or parka reaching nearly to the knees made of mooseskin with the hair outside. The sleeves were fitted on and the hood sewed to the garment. The coat was held in place by a belt and was probably fastened along the opening in front by tying with strings or with loops and toggles. The summer garment was probably skin, dressed without the hair. The legs were protected by long leggings fastened to an inner belt which also supported the breechcloth. This article of clothing was a broad strip of soft tanned leather passing between the legs and under the belt both before and behind. Moccasins of the soft sole variety are still worn not only by the Beaver and Cree but also by the white men of the North.

These moccasins (Fig. 9) consist of four pieces of soft tanned mooseskin. The main piece has the seam beginning on the lower side about an inch from the tip of the toe, running over the toe and up the median line of the foot about halfway to the ankle. To this piece around the sides and back is sewed a band about five inches wide which wraps around the ankle. This is bound in place by passing both ends of a long string several times around the ankle, cross-lacing. The main portion of this string passes around the moccasin just below the seam which fastens the band to the sole. To keep the string in place it is passed through the mooseskin for a space of one-half inch, once either side of the heel and once in front. On the instep is an inserted piece of mooseskin usually decorated with silk. The decoration consists of three different colored rows of silk closely wrapped around a core of stiff hair. These rows cover the seam, and border the inserted piece. The lower part of this piece is further decorated with flower designs worked in silk. The fourth piece going to make up the moccasin is attached under the decorated insert and comes well up the ankle under the lapping of the upper band. It is of thick mooseskin, usually a piece which has seen previous service, and is inserted to protect the ankle from the pressure of the string. These moccasins are very comfortable and wear well as long as they are kept dry. When used in the water, as when tracking a canoe, they last barely a day.

During the cold weather gloves are worn. Several pairs are in the collection but in pattern they seem to be imitations of gloves of European manufacture. They are generally decorated on the back with silk.

The garments on the doll obtained representing a woman are evidently not cut according to the old style and no exact information as to woman's dress is available.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS.

The former fire-making method among the Beaver was striking together stones.¹ One of the tales is about a man so shiftless he neglected to provide himself with such stones until snow fall. The firedrill seems to be unknown.

The main arts of the men were concerned with the making of weapons, the frames of snowshoes, and toboggans. The bow purchased was a simple one made of willow; the arrows were of birch, with a cylindrical head of moose horn (Fig. 10). Arrow-heads of flint were of course used where great penetration was necessary.

Woodwork of all sorts is now done with the aid of the crooked knife which was introduced on Hudson Bay by the traders and is now used by Indians entirely across the continent. Before iron was in use, knives were made of moose horn which hardens with age. The incisor teeth of beaver in place in the skull were also used in woodwork.

Considerable wood-working skill is required in making canoes and sledges. No such work was observed in progress among the Beaver and therefore no description can be given. Nets (Figs. 11, 12) for fishing were made from the inner bark of an unidentified shrub. These nets were probably made by the men but that was not definitely ascertained.

The women dress the skins after the usual method. The tools (Fig. 13) are of a form different from those found among the Plains Indians. For scraping, instead of the elkhorn handle and blade placed at right angles to it an S-shaped implement is used. The flesher is made of the legbone of a moose. Skins are usually stretched in a frame for dressing instead of pegging them out on the ground. The women make the clothing from these skins, and, in former times, the tipi covers as well. The women lace the snowshoes after the frame has been prepared by the men. They also make the birchbark dishes used for household purposes. These are cut in certain shapes, folded to form the vessels and sewed in place with spruce roots (Fig. 14). They are decorated by incised lines and applied borders cut in certain forms. This and certain silkwork designs on moccasins and gloves are the only remaining decorative arts. Their neighbors, the Slavey, do beautiful porcupine quillwork and it is probable the Beaver once had the art.

SOCIAL ORGANIZATION.

As far as could be determined, the social organization of the Beaver is like that of the Mackenzie culture area generally, meager and loose.

Marriage took place at an early age, "As soon as big enough" the informant said, which probably means soon after puberty. Presents are made to the father of the girl, and to the girl herself at intervals for a year or two before marriage. The determination of the matter is in the hands of the girl's parents, who need not consult the wishes of the young people; but they, in their turn, occasionally marry without anyone's permission. The young man seems invariably to have made his home with the bride's parents. The father-in-law depended in a large measure upon the hunting of the son-in-law for the support of the family. It is said that in earlier times father-in-law and son-in-law addressed each other in the dual, a polite form of language also characteristic of the Athapascans in California and the Southwest. It was not considered proper for them to look at each other directly. Two wives were not uncommon and the informant knew one man who had three wives. The sharing of one woman between two men also existed. Of this there are several illustrations in the stories. The custom of determining the possession of a woman, by wrestling, so often reported from the north, also obtained among the Beaver.

The information obtained as to the descent of the children was unsatisfactory, chiefly because there appears to be nothing concerning which the question might arise. There appear to be no clans or other systems of grouping other than the family or bands of relatives camped together. No inheritable property or ceremonial possessions were discovered which would give a basis for inheritance, in fact, or for the purpose of discussion.

The information, as secured in the words of the interpreter, follows:—

Fig. 14 (50.1-7668). Vessel of Birchbark sewed with Spruce Root.

"They get married as soon as big enough. Sometimes they ask the old folks for the girl and some times the young folks just marry. Sometimes they make them stay together against their will. The boy used to give presents to the father of the girl he wanted. If he did not want the boy, he would send the presents back. Tobacco and pipe to old man; dress piece to girl once in a while, perhaps for two years before they get the girl. It used to be the rule for the man to go ahead and the woman behind; but now since they are married by a priest the woman thinks the man must keep her and now the women are bosses. He is an old man and he never knew a woman to go to the man, the man goes to the woman and stays with her people."

Question: "Does the man always stay with father-in-law?" Answer: "Of course the man is not boss of his son-in-law, but if the father-in-law is good-hearted he can always live on what his son-in-law kills. Now I go everywhere my son-in-law (Louisçon) goes."

Q. "Is there any rule about the way son-in-law talks to father-in-law?" Ans. "He talks to his son-in-law just as to his son, and his son-in-law talks to him that way, but he remembers when a father-in-law used words as if he were talking to two persons instead of one. The son-in-law speaks the same way and so does the daughter-in-law to her mother-in-law."

When asked if they were bashful toward each other he said: "Yes," and then said, "They spoke to them as if they were two not because they were bashful, but because it was the fashion."

"We are bashful about looking our son-in-law straight in the face. We talk to them all right, but it is the rule not to look them in the face. This applies to the daughter-in-law too."

Q. "How many wives?" Ans. "His uncle had three wives. He often knew of two wives but three is the most he ever heard of. He has heard of a woman having two husbands but he never knew a case."

Q. "Do the children belong to the mother or the father's folks?" Ans. "They follow the father."

When clans were explained he said there was nothing of the kind there.

BURIAL CUSTOMS.

There is evidence that the Beaver formerly disposed of the dead by placing them in trees or on platforms. The bodies were sometimes, perhaps always, rolled up in birchbark before being disposed of in this way. It is said that sometimes instead of putting them above the ground they were placed on it and small log houses built over them. At Fort St. John, two rather recent child burials in the air were seen. In both cases the body was suspended in a sling of cloth supported by a board placed horizontally between two trees (Figs. 15, 16). At the present time the adults at Fort St. John and those of all ages at Vermilion are buried underground and a small house erected over the grave (Fig. 18).

One informant at Vermilion said that it used to be the custom to put a piece of white poplar limb on a grave when passing. "Just like shaking hands," was the comment in regard to the purpose of this custom.

Figs. 15 and 16. Infant Aërial Burials. A board is placed horizontally between two trees and the body suspended in a sling of canvas.

The mourning customs were similar to those of the Plains Indians. The woman cut off finger joints and cut their hair. The men slashed their nipples and stuck knives or arrows through their arms or legs. The family impoverished itself and the men were in a reckless mood.

The information secured from Ike at Vermilion follows:—

Q. "How did they used to show they were sorry for their wives and husbands when they lost them?" Ans. "The man used to cut off the forefinger, a joint or two, or slash the nipple. Woman does same for husband or cuts all her hair off."

Q. "Did they used to be afraid of a new widow?" Ans. "They are not afraid. The prophet at Hay River is telling the Slavey to keep away from such people. The Slavey at Hay River are still pitching off by themselves when they lose a relative. Now when they [the Beaver] see a person is getting low they keep him clean, wash him all over, and change his clothes often. We all come together and watch him until his last breath. Then we [all the people in that camp] put him in his coffin and watch him a night or two, and then we all go with him and bury him. We are not a bit afraid now, but he has heard that long ago they used to be afraid.

"He does not remember when they did not bury in the ground but he has heard that they used to put the bodies on a platform, or roll them up in birchbark and hang them up in the bush. Sometimes they used to build a little house of logs and put the body in that on top of the ground." Cardinal, the interpreter, said he remembers hearing his aunt say she saw Beaver put on platforms.

The direct observations of Mackenzie are more to the point.

When death overtakes any of them, their property, as I have before observed, is sacrificed and destroyed; nor is there any failure of lamentation or mourning on such occasion: they who are more nearly related to the departed person, black their faces, and sometimes cut off their hair; they also pierce their arms with knives and arrows. The grief of the females is carried to a still greater excess; they not only cut their hair, and cry and howl, but they will sometimes, with the utmost deliberation, employ some sharp instrument to separate the nail from the finger, and then force back the flesh beyond the first joint, which they immediately amputate. But this extraordinary mark of affliction is only displayed on the death of a favorite son, a husband, or a father. Many of the old women have so often repeated this ceremony, that they have not a complete finger remaining on either hand. The women renew their lamentations at the graves of their departed relatives for a long succession of years.¹

There was a lodge of Indians here, who were absolutely starving with cold and hunger. They had lately lost a near relation, and had, according to custom, thrown away every thing belonging to them, and even exchanged the few articles of raiment which they possessed, in order, as I presume, to get rid of everything that may bring the deceased to their remembrance. They also destroy everything belonging to any deceased person, except what they consign to the grave with the late owner of them. We had some difficulty to make them comprehend that the debts of a man who dies should be discharged, if he left any furs behind him; but those who understand this principle of justice, and profess to adhere to it, never fail to prevent the appearance of any skins beyond such as may be necessary to satisfy the debts of their dead relation.

RELIGION.

As compared with the Northwest, the Plains, and the Southwest, the North is strikingly lacking in religious ceremonials. Those now discoverable from the Beaver seem to accord generally with what has been reported previously from the Chipewyan and other tribes of this region.

It appears that those at least who had ambitions as hunters or warriors, and they probably included all the young men, sought supernatural helpers. It is only specified in this regard that such young men did not drink out of vessels but through a quill so that the water would not touch their lips, and that they did not eat the meat or marrow from the leg bones of game, or the eggs of any bird.² That the supernatural helper appeared in dreams is indicated by one account given below.³ The character of some of these helpers appears also in the stories. In the combat between Wonyoni and Sastunazutde,⁴ the former had beaver skins and the latter a buffalo hide. In another account an eagle skin is mentioned as used in war.⁵ Mackenzie speaks of the use of a feather headdress for war. In the story of Wonyoni's revenge mentioned above, the father asks the son what is the nature of his power. The boy replies that it has to do with freshly fallen and unpacked snow, but he is not specific about it. In the account of the overcoming of the Cree by a Beaver single-handed it was inferred by the narrator that wind must have been the helper.⁶

For hunting there is the mention of the image of a small moose, said to be the gift of a mother moose who appeared to him in a dream. Since a request for the dream itself resulted in the narrator's giving it with a definite locality, there is reason to suppose it was an authentic account,

² When asked to volunteer old customs, Ike said: "When a young man wanted to be a good runner he did not drink out of a kettle or cup but sucked the water up through the quill of a feather from a large bird like a goose so the water would not touch the lips. They would not eat the meat of the legs of any animal or the marrow from the bone of the leg. They would not eat eggs of any bird. Then when they went hunting and saw a moose or buffalo they could get up close and shoot him with a bow and arrows. Not everybody did that, but only those who were likely to be good runners or hunters. The drinking through a quill was only when on a hunt."

probably derived from a relative of the narrator. The appended comment shows the attitude of the Beaver toward such supernatural help.

"That was the way they used to live. The animals used to be as wild as they are now. With nothing but bow and arrow they could not live. But in each band there were one or two men like this with medicine who could kill them. The people came to them when they got hungry."

When asked what a man had to do to get it, he said: "They do not do anything. If there was anything they could do, they would all have it. It comes suddenly on a man. Suppose some animal takes pity on him or likes him and gives him power. I do not know what used to give men that, whether it was God or the animals themselves."¹

Even in regard to these ordinary and personal helpers it appears that there is an element of caprice. It is not everyone who can come into the possession of such power, those who were more especially favored became a class whose power was a community asset. The work of shamans in warfare is mentioned several times. In the first place they were expected to foresee the location of the enemy and in some cases the outcome of the engagement. When the war party arrives the shaman is expected by songs to put the enemy to sleep.² Similar shamans dealt with sickness by blowing, sucking, and singing.

The following comments and illustrations of the work of shamans was given by James Heber, a Beaver who is married to a Cree:—

The Cree doctor themselves with roots they get out of the ground. The Beaver do not know that. Beaver used to have their own doctors but have quit. The Slavey still do it. An old man sang, drummed, and danced to see through the winter. His wife said the next day the old man looked through the winter. He says we shall lose a child. They did. A Slavey woman died, was not breathing anyway. Her son came and put his lips to her neck, blew and sucked hard. The woman's abdomen went up high several times and she got her breath. The informant's father, an old man, got last fall so he did not pass his urine for two or three days. They gave him up. A Slavey came to visit his relatives. They asked him to go over to him. He held up a cup of water and talked. I do not know what he said. The man drank it and immediately went out and passed his water all right. The doctor says I see you through the white strip as far as the black strip. When you get there keep the cup for your own use, do not let anyone drink out of it.

A very old man, Bourassa once saw, used to be leader for war. He had a cap with eagle feathers on it and pelican's skin under his throat. They were the animals that helped him. He did not kill people himself for that would spoil his medicine. He would come close to the camp and sing. That would blind the enemy. This old man was alive when the white people first built the fort.

He said an old blind war leader thought he became blind because he killed two men who were getting away.

He explained without questioning that the white strip meant winter and the black strip summer. The old man is still living.

The competitions between shamans and the performing of spectacles seem also to have been a feature. The development of prophecy in the north is unusual for America. Beside the accounts from Indians, the half-breeds, and even the white traders have stories of the foretelling of events or the description of contemporaneous events at a considerable distance.

It appears that in addition to the fortunate individual who had personal supernatural aids and the shamans possessing unusual power there is generally in each band one man of predominating power who directs the religious activities of the tribe. These are generally called prophets. The office at Vermilion was vacant but had not long been so. Among the Slavey at Hay River there was an active prophet, and also one at Dunvegan. Such men seem to have considerable liberty in initiating new movements in religion. In theory they may follow completely the revelations made to them as individuals; but in practice, there is reason to believe they followed tradition rather closely.

The objective side of religion appears in the use of fetishes such as the image of the moose worn by the hunter, and the skins of the animals concerned. The shamans made use of the jugglers' lodge described below. These were in use in Hearne's day east of the Mackenzie. Dedicated poles with offerings attached were probably commonly used. Several were seen among the Slavey and the making of one and the result obtained is given in a narrative below.¹ Several poles, in the form of crosses and upright shafts were seen among the Fort St. John Beaver (Fig. 19), but no proper opportunity of finding out about them presented itself. Their purpose was commented on by a Vermilion informant.²

The one community ceremony of striking interest is the semi-annual gathering when offerings of food are placed in the fire. These ceremonies seem sometimes at least to have been under the control of the prophet. A large dance ground is fenced and a central fire prepared. The officiating individual puts in the fire pieces of the flesh of the game animals and prays that the tribe may be fed with similar food in the future. They also asked for snow and rain since animals are more easily taken when they can be tracked. This religious observance is followed by dancing throughout the

² When asked about the medicine pole Ike said, "It is called enateŋgedi (leave something ready for somebody coming along there) as if one had agreed to leave something for somebody and then puts it up until the person came along. The medicine pole is left for the one who helps him in dreams.

When asked if the Beaver still made medicine poles he said, they never made them so far as he has heard. The Cree and Slavey do that.

night by the men and women who circle the fire clockwise. The actual information as obtained may be of interest.

James Heber said in reply to a question:

"The Beaver do not have the sun dance." He did not know what it was. "They have a tea dance. They have had it eight or ten years. A man here dreamed about it, a prophet. He saw people in his vision who sang for him and he taught songs to his people.

"People say if he says 'A male or female moose is given you, you better go and kill it,' then they go and kill it. He does not know if it is true or not. The Cree do not have it. They begin seriously with prayer and give thanks; at the end it is play. The women and men dance around the fire to the beating of a drum. They eat first."

From an elderly Beaver, named Ike, the following was secured:—

"He used to have an uncle; we used to get everything he asked for. In the fall when they made medicine he used to ask for snow and you [white] people had good crops and we made fur. He used to ask for a lot of muskrats etc., and we always got them. We had good luck, and you had luck with your crops. Now he is dead we have had luck.

"They make a circular enclosure of willows about four feet high fifteen or twenty feet across. The one road [into it] is called kuetûnne; it does not matter which way it points. They have it in spring when the leaves begin to get big, and in the fall. In the spring they ask for food to last through the summer, and again in the fall, before it gets cold, they ask for food during the winter."

Q. Who is the boss for it? Ans. There is none; they have all died off.

Q. How did his uncle come to be boss? Ans. He knew things ahead. He made a dance and then we found out he knew things ahead. He never heard of anyone but his uncle making it.

Q. How many days doing it? Ans. One night. He had a good many songs. He heard someone sing up in the air. He goes by that. Those were the songs he sang.

Q. To whom are the things placed in the fire given? Ans. We are just following an old fashion. It is the only way to give food to the folks who have died and gone to heaven (he pointed up and said ya') and ask them to give us more of what we have put in the fire.

He says he has heard they used to talk to the sun and to a moose as if they were persons.

The Chipewyan of Cold Lake spoke of a similar ceremony held each spring which they referred to as "feeding the fire."¹ This seems to have been the one important ceremony of the north.

The total impression of the culture of the Beaver is that of efficient simplicity. The arts are the necessary ones involved in providing food, clothing, and shelter. The social organization is the simple one of a flexible family, and a small hunting band, probably chiefly consisting of relatives, led by a chief. The religious feeling is strong and mostly direct, the individuals receiving their power immediately from some supernatural being unaided by tradition or extended ritual. The conditions of the north perhaps tend neither to develop anything superfluous, or to tolerate non-essentials even if they were introduced from without.

MYTHS AND TALES.

TUMAXALE, A CULTURE HERO.¹

There were once two brothers who were traveling together. When they came to a large lake they decided to separate, one going along the shore in one direction and one in the other.

One of them, Tumaxale, had not gone far before he came to a trail which had been used by people. He followed this trail between two mountains until it came out again on the large lake. He passed along where sky and water were seen on either side, and walked across on an old beaver dam. He saw a pretty girl sitting nearby, whom he addressed as sister, asking her why she was there. The girl, as soon as she saw someone approach, began to cry. "Why do you cry, sister?" the young man asked. "A large beaver² lives here that can only be pacified by giving him a human being. I have been given to him," she replied. "He said he would come to get me this evening when the sun is half way down that big mountain." Saying that he would watch for the beaver, he left the girl on the top of the mountain where he told her to wait for him. The girl told him that the beaver came out just at the edge of the water where the beaver dam made a bend. The young man sat there watching for the beaver and keeping track of the sun, and said to himself, "My sister said he will come out when the sun reaches that point."

The water began to move. Although the lake was a large one it was all set in motion. The beaver himself looking like a mountain came out at the turn of the dam. When the young man saw the beaver he said to himself that he was too big; but he also remembered how bad he was, and shot him, the arrow striking just behind the ear. He then ran away, Oh how he ran. He came up where the girl was sitting and the rising water came right up toward them. The water receded, and they followed it back until they came to the beaver dam. Because the beaver was so large he cut it up in little pieces and threw them all over the country. "You will be only so large," he said. The pieces were as large as a man's little finger and there became as many beaver as there were pieces which were scattered over the world.³

They two started after the people who were living on ahead. "I will sit here and wait for you, sister," he said. "Go to your relatives." As soon as they saw her coming they all started to cry, thinking they would not live. "My brother killed it," she told them. "Where is your brother?" they asked. "He is sitting right there," she said. "And what is your brother's name?" they asked her. "His name is Tumaxale (he goes along the shore)," she told them. They were all glad he had done that, and did not want to let him go away. Each one of them asked him to be a son-in-law. He stayed there a short time, but concluded he would not remain in one place. He told them he was going out. They warned him there were bad people there. He went up to them and clubbed them all to death, leaving not one of them alive.

He walked along the road until he came to a large place where he slept. There was a narrow place between two hills where it was the custom to set snares. He set a snare there and went to bed. It was very dark and daylight did not return. He kept climbing up the hill to look for the dawn, but there was not a sign of it. The darkness had lasted so long his wood was all gone. Although it was still night he went back where he had set the snare. He found it was the sun that had been caught, but it was so hot he could not go near it. "Let all the animals come here quickly," he said to himself. They all came running there, but could do nothing. The very last, a mouse, came running back all burned. He had gnawed the rope off. The young man ran back along his own road to the place where the sun had been caught and took his snare again.¹

He went on the way he had been going. Winter came on him again. As he was walking along, he came to a place where someone had drawn a sleigh along. Tumaxale had slept there and hung up a lynx. Some one had eaten some of the lynx in his absence. He started to follow him. He saw he had gone along there that day. He was again carrying a big lynx. When they saw him coming they prepared a tipi for him. He asked them to roast the lynx he was carrying. "My grandchild, did you ever eat this?" someone asked. "I only make use of its fat," he replied. She gave it to him. "I live on this kind only," he said. He drank only the soup of it.

Then they lay down for the night. That one was not a proper man. He looked carefully at the man's feet as he lay there. His moccasins were hanging up at his feet. He put the other man's moccasins in the place of his own. Then the man with whom he was staying thought he would take down his guest's moccasins, but he really took down all his own, put them in the fire and lay down again. In the morning he got up before the other man and quickly took down his own moccasins. "Here, grandchild, those are my moccasins," the guest called to him. He passed them to him and began to cry. He sat there without any moccasins. Tumaxale only had two pair of moccasins but they did not wear out. He went entirely around the edge of the sky without wearing them out. He gave him one of the two pair of his own moccasins.¹ He was pleased, and gave him one of his own arrows. He too was pleased. "When you are about to lie down tonight we will shoot at the end of a stump," he said.

Then he went on the way he had been going. He dropped the lynx which he had been carrying for food. Suddenly he came to a trail that had been used by people. There he shot at a stump. The arrows were pointing up. "Do not get it," he was told. He thought it was quite close and stepped up toward it. The arrow went further and further up until he followed it clear to the sky. Then he went on after it until he came where some people were living. The people to whom he came lived on nothing but caribou. He thought it was on this world.²

After he had remained there a short time he thought he would go to his own country. Then the old woman made a line of caribou skin for him. She made a large amount of the line and then she made a hole for him through the ground. She put him in a skin and gave him a knife. "When you think you are on the earth cut through the skin," she told him. Finally, he thought he must be on the earth. He tried to swing himself but he did not move. He cut through the skin to find himself on a big bird's nest. He said, "Grandmother your line," as he had been told to do; and she drew the line up.

Then he started to go far away. He was on a large bird's nest. Three young birds were sitting in it. He came up to them and began to ask questions. The two larger ones said they did not like this man who had been given them. For that reason he knocked them down with a club. One of them told him what he asked. "You are not going to live," he warned the man. "When does your father come back?" he asked the bird. "There is hail and a big wind when he comes back," the young bird said. "And your mother, when does she get back?" he asked again. "She comes when there is rain and a big wind," was the reply.

The man made ready for them. There was hail and the father returned. "I smell an animal here," he said. "Well, what have you been leaving here?" the young one replied. "I certainly smell something alive," he said and went around the edge of his nest looking for it. He knocked him down with a club.¹

Again, the mother was coming back. Again, "I smell something alive," she said. Again, she started around the edge of the nest. Again, he knocked her down. He took the small one and it went about with him. "You will be just this small," he told it. He traveled around with it until it was just large enough to fly. They came to a river and the man put the bird on the bank. "Do you see a fish swimming about at the bottom of the river?" he asked the bird. "Yes," he replied. "Well, jump on it," he told the bird. He jumped on the fish, caught it, and took it out of the water. "Why don't you eat it?" he asked the bird. "Is it good?" he asked again. "Yes," was the reply. "As long as the world exists you shall eat them. You shall live on them," the man said.

Again he started on the way he was going. Suddenly, he came where there was a road used by people. He traveled along on this road, camping on it until he came where an old woman was living. When he came to her she said, "Grandchild, how have you been traveling? Grandchild, these people are bad. You will not live. My three daughters have all kinds of bad things living in their bodies with which they kill people." He killed all the things that lived in them. That is why the old man was very angry.²

Then the young man said, "I will make arrows." "Well, let him go for them," the old man said. "Grandmother, what does he mean?" he asked. "Grandchild, he means a bad place. It is there he is in the habit of going," she replied. "What kind of a place is it?" he asked. "At a place where saskatoons grow there are large snakes. It is there he goes. That is the place he means," she said. Then he went there. He made himself stone leggings and went among the saskatoons with them. The snakes all rushed at him and caught him by the legs. He clubbed the snakes, took the arrow-shafts, and went back.

"Get the polishing stone from your father for me," he said. "Let him get the polishing stones where I usually get them," the old man said. He went to his grandmother to ask about it. "Grandchild, it is a difficult place. There is an elk there who is a person. He walks back and forth on the top of a cutbank. He has something that chases people and barks after them like a dog. You can't get up to him without his knowing it," she told him. He got up to him and was ready for him. "I saw you first," he said. "You go down the bank first." The man refused, but nevertheless was forced to run down the bank and he kicked at him. "Why didn't you run straight along the road?" he asked. They ran along again and he kicked at him but did not hit him. He threw him down and he fell down the bank. The elk's wife down below killed him. She thought it was a stranger she was killing but it was her own husband. The woman came up to him from below, and began running about. He knocked her down and killed her with his club. He took the polishing stone and went home with it.¹

The young man put his arrows in the fire, "I will put feathers on them," he said to himself. "Go to your father and get feathers for me," he said. "Let him get feathers where I always get them," the old man replied. Again he went to his grandmother, "Grandchild, he means a hard place. Big eagles live there," she told him. That they might not get his scent he approached them from the windward. He killed all the birds with his club, took the feathers, and went home with them.

Again he said, "Get sinew for me from your father." "Let him get it where I always get it," said the old man. Again, he went to his grandmother, "Grandmother, where does he mean?" he asked. "Grandchild, it is a difficult place. There is a big buffalo living on a large prairie. One cannot get to him without his knowledge. Snipes which make a noise when he does not see a person sit on the ends of his horns. As soon as he came where the buffalo lay the birds saw him and flew up. He made them go down again. They flew up again without cause. "Why do you mislead me?" he asked. "We were deceived by the leaves," they replied. He lay down again. The man transformed himself into a rodent and made himself a road to the buffalo. He made roads in many directions. Then he gnawed the hair off well below the animal's shoulder and stabbed him there. He ran away along his own road. He killed him, took sinew for himself, and went home with it.²

"Go to your father and get pitch for me," he said. "Let him get pitch where I always get it," the old man replied. Then he went to his grandmother. "Grandmother, what does he mean?" "Grandchild, there are trees which are like animals. These large trees are growing together and it is only in between them that pitch is to be had. That is what he means." Then he made mittens of stone for himself and put them on. When he came there he threw in a stick. The trees struck against each other. He pulled his hand out leaving only his mitten. After that he took the pitch he wanted.

Now he had killed all the things the old man used to dream about. This caused him to be very angry.³

Then he told his three daughters that they should go for berries and they went off for them. "My son-in-law, some grizzly bears used to live over there. Let us go after them," the old man said. They two started to go there and went on until they came to a large prairie on a point of land. "This is where they used to be," he said. They went down to the river. There were three bears standing together on the prairie. "You watch for them here," the old man said. The young man lay in wait for them while the old man scared them down there. The three bears ran toward him and as they came up he put an arrow into each one as it passed. Then he called for his wife, and told her that the young man had killed all their children.¹

Tumaxale then chased him entirely around the world. As he was about to kill the old man, he jumped into the water. He called for a pelican and one lighted there and drank up all the water. They looked for him everywhere on the lake bottom and could not find him. He called for small diving birds. When they came he instructed them to go to the pelican. When they lighted by him he said, "You seem to like my belly. I myself was looking for the skull of the black water beetles." They all stabbed the pelican right in his mouth and flew away. The mean old man was completely drowned.

After that he started on in the direction he had been going. Not far from there he met an old man whose head was gray. He was a pitiful looking man. "Who is he?" he said to himself. It was his younger brother. They were boys when they separated. When they saw each other, the other one also said to himself, "Who is that?" They began to tell each other what they had been doing, and then they realized they were brothers. .

AGAIT'OSDÛNNE, THE HAIR SCRAPINGS MAN.² — First Version.

One time when many people were camping about they heard a child cry where they had been dressing hides. All the women ran to the place. When they did not find the child they took up the hairs of the scrapings one at a time and put them to one side. There was nothing there. Then an old woman went there and found a child crawling among the scrapings. She took the child up and put it in her mitten.

She took care of it after that and it became large very quickly and was soon walking about. He became a person from the buffalo. "Grandmother bring me only grass," he said to her. She brought him grass for a bed. During the night it all disappeared. "He is always doing such things," she said to herself. When she lay down again she watched him through a hole in her blanket. She saw him get up and shake himself and immediately become a buffalo. "Why did I do this?" she said to herself and lay down again under her blanket. "So this is what you are doing," she thought. After that she took good care of him.

Once the Indians were all chiseling out beaver. "I will watch them," the boy thought and went where they were eating the beaver meat. When he saw the meat, he reached to take some a man was offering him. The man pulled it back again, fooling the boy. He was very angry. One old man gave him something to eat. After the Indians had gone he picked up a beaver leg and swallowed it, saying, "You will not kill beaver until I pass this bone."

After that his grandmother traveled alone with the children behind the main band who were starving. Her nephews were starving; they were having a hard time. "Grandmother, I will fish with a hook and line. There are fish here in this old beaver pond," he said. She cut a hole in the ice for him. "I will fish here," he said. She went over where he was fishing. He took out a large beaver. He pushed a stick into the water and caught four beaver which he killed with a club. "Grandmother, there are four fish down there which I have killed," he said to her. His grandmother went there and found he had killed four large beaver. She carried them back and put them by the fireplace. They ate beaver meat. "Grandmother, give me the mesentric membrane," he said. She did as he requested.

Then his grandmother took him on her back and carried him after the other Indians. When the advance party saw the mesentric membrane he had in his hand they acted like crazy people about it. They threw down the children they were carrying to run after him. They got hold of the membrane and pulled it from side to side. This made him angry.

His uncle had set snares for beaver. He was sitting there by them and started to cry. "What is the matter?" he asked. "Kill it for me," he said. Then he passed the leg bone of a beaver. Then all who were there, all his uncles, took out beaver.

Then they moved on ahead. Again they were starving, when someone reported having seen buffalo that did not know people were about. After the others had gone to bed he took arrows from each man and went to the buffalo. When he came near them he transformed himself into a buffalo and started to play with them. He killed them all and started back. They had a big fire ready for him and were sitting there, waiting. His grandmother was sitting on the pile of wood, crying. "Grandmother, why are you crying?" he asked. He took an arrow and held it on his bow. "One buffalo was caught in the willows. Who said this about me? Who said of me that, 'he went along the people's trail carrying arrows?'" he inquired. No one spoke and for that reason he did not shoot. He held two arrows by their heads, broke them, and threw them into the fire. "What did I do to your animals?" he asked them. They thought the buffalo were all ahead of them.

They started away, but one old man sat there after the others had gone. Agait'osdûnne had put some buffalo fat in the fold of his blanket. He pulled that out for his grandfather. "Grandfather, the wolves killed a young buffalo. I thought I would put its fat in my pocket." He passed it to him. "It is not young buffalo's fat," the old man said to himself. Then he told his grandfather that each man who knew his own arrows would know which buffalo belonged to him. His grandfather went away along the road after the others. They thought the buffalo were lying there alive and they were sitting over them ready to shoot. "Why are you sitting there?" he asked. They thought the buffalo were still alive and they would take them all in snares. When he came to them he said, "Take the ones your arrows are sticking in." He thought he and his grandmother would have an animal and he had left an old arrow lying on it. They stepped over that buffalo.

Agait'osdûnne was very poor. The large band that camped ahead had a certain man for chief. He had a daughter no one liked. She went out one time and looking at Agait'osdûnne said, "I do not like your eyes." He was very angry because of that and after she had gone he went there and urinated.

She was very soon pregnant and gave birth to a child. "Make a medicine lodge," the chief said. They made a medicine lodge. "The child will urinate on the man who is its father," the chief said. They all came there where the medicine lodge stood. He disappeared now and then and then he was not about at all.¹ They did not know who could be its father. Agait'osdûnne was the only one who did not go there. "Well, let everyone of the men come here," the chief said. His grandmother was sorry for the child and liked it and for that reason went there. As soon as she took it, the child urinated. All the women then stripped the clothes from Agait'osdûnne and put out his fire, but his grandmother put some fire in sinew and put it inside a pillow. They drove him away from his grandmother. "I hope when they get up they will take out the sinew," she said. The next morning when they arose there was nothing they could do anything with. "Look inside grandmother's pillow," he said. She went there and found fire under the sinew where it had been left and built a fire with it.

"I wish you would make some arrows for me," he told the woman. She made arrows for him from some poor willows. "I wish three wolves would come along here to us," he said. Before long three wolves came there and he killed them all. The women went to them. They took hold of the wolves by their noses, rubbed them, and pulled the entire body out of the skins. Then they put on the skins with the hair still on them. "I wish thirteen caribou would come along here," he said. They came very soon and he killed them all. They made a tipi cover of their skins. He wished again for three moose and they came. He killed them and they had the leather they needed.

He wished the others might die of starvation. For his grandmother, however, he used to drop fat along behind. "Because they did not care whether he starved or not, let them be very hungry and die of starvation," he was thinking about them. "Well, let them come here," he thought. They came there. He told them that before he had resolved not to get meat for them. He went away from them but before leaving, he told them that if many moose went by they were not to shoot the leader but only those following behind. Then owl, who was a person then, shot the moose that was in front. His wife took a skin and ran after him. She ran far away to him. "You are alive. You will not die quickly," she said to him. "Roll up in the skin," she told him. Then they beat owl with a club and that is why his head is large.

AGAIT'OSDÛNNE, THE HAIR SCRAPINGS MAN.—Second Version.

A child was heard to cry from a buffalo skin. An old woman went toward it and found a child sitting among the hairs which had been scraped from the buffalo skins. She took up the child and because she felt sorry for it, took care of it and raised it, although the others tried to dissuade her.

It grew quickly. "Put nothing but grass under me, grandmother," he said. She put some grass under him but in the night she saw it was gone; there was nothing but bare ground under him. "What are you doing, grandchild?" she said to herself. She watched him through her ragged blanket one night and saw him stand up, a large buffalo. He ate up the grass he was lying on. "My grandson is a buffalo," she thought.

A famine was killing the people when someone saw a herd of buffalo. There were many people camping there who decided to go together and kill the buffalo. The boy saw the buffalo and at night, while the people were asleep, took an arrow from each man's supply. He went to the buffalo during the night and shot them all because they were not afraid of him. "The buffalo will belong to the man whose arrow is on it," he said to himself, and distributed the arrows on the dead buffalo. "We will make meat of this one for my grandmother," he said, and placed two of his arrows on one of the animals.

He went back to the camp to find someone had built a big fire. His grandmother was sitting on the wood, crying. "What is the matter, grandmother?" he asked. "You went for the people's animals and they say they will burn you." "Who says that about me?" he asked. "They all say it of you. They are not pleased." "None of your animals ran away. They are still where they were last night. Go to them," he said.

An old man was sitting there after the others had left. He took a seat by this old man and said, "I saw the wolves kill a young buffalo, grandfather." They two followed along the way the others had gone. They found some of the Indians lying in front of the dead buffalo while others were trying to surround them. When they came up to the buffalo they found they had all been killed and the arrows were lying on the bodies. The people were all very much pleased.

ATCECQ KILLS BUFFALO.

One time when a band of Indians were without food, someone saw some buffalo. They did not have guns and since the buffalo were in an open place without cover they did not know how they could get them. They decided to wait until the next day when they could make a fence and drive them into a corral. A boy, named Atcecoq, started after the buffalo by himself, and the people were all angry. "Let us kill him," they were saying. They went after him. They prepared a large fire for him and sat down by it waiting for him. As he was coming back he found his grandmother who had raised him, sitting behind the fire crying. "Why are you crying, grandmother?" he asked. "These people say they are going to kill you," she replied. "Show me which one of them says that of me," he asked of his grandmother. They were afraid of him.

Then they started after the buffalo and found them still where they had been seen. "Be careful, they might see us," they said. The boy followed along after the others. They also told him to take care the buffalo did not see him. This boy had killed all the buffalo. From a man who had many children he had taken two of his arrows, but if there was only one child he took only one arrow. With these arrows he had killed all the buffalo, allotting them one or two animals according to the number of children. They were all saved from starving.

ATCECQ KILLS A BAD MAN.

One time when they were starving they started to move toward a lake where they knew there were fish. A bad old man was known to live there but they thought he was away from home. When they came to the place they found he was still living there. Then that small boy said he would visit his grandfather, meaning the old man. His friends advised him against it, but he replied that since he was starving and suffering much he would visit him nevertheless. The others tried hard to stop him but he set out to pay the visit.

When he arrived the old man asked why he came. "I came to you, grandfather, because I am starving," the boy replied. "Well, you will not live long," the old man said, "go back or I will kill you." "You do not talk as other people do, grandfather," the boy said. "Well, cook him some fish," he told his wife. The boy ate the fish when it was set before him. "What kind of a person are you who eat the fish I give you and still live? You are Atcecoq," the old man said. "Why do you say that? I ate what you gave me and I am happy," the boy replied.

"Cook for him again," he said, and his wife did so. "No person ever did this way with me before, but let us use supernatural power on each other," the old man said. "What am I to do, that you speak that way?" the boy asked. "You have eaten much of my food," the old man replied. "You do something to me first, grandfather," the boy said. The old man made a large frog sit on his palm and told the boy to take it. "Now you do something to me," the old man said. "Yes, grandfather, but what do I know, that you should say that to me?" the boy asked. "You swallowed a small frog and how is it that it did not bother you?" the old man asked. "What sort of a person am I that you should say that?" the boy asked again. The old man swallowed it and he could hardly breathe.

When Atcecoq started back the old man said that since he had done that to him, he would know how to cure him. He sent his wife to bring the boy back that he might cure him. When the boy saw the sorrowful looking old woman coming after him he told her that he was not yet old enough to marry and that her husband might keep her. He turned back and came to the old man who was still breathing. When the boy began to sing over him the frog closed the old man's mouth and he died.

The boy then ran back to his friends who asked how it happened he was still alive. "My grandfather was very kind. He is not a mean man. He fed me well and I ate what he gave me," the boy replied. They knew the old man was mean and they were afraid of him.

Atceq killed him and the people were very much pleased. They moved camp to the place where the fish were and many people were saved from starving.

The old man had many wives for he had taken the wives of the men he had killed. They took these women away. Many people were glad because of what Atceq had done.

AGAÏT'OSDÛNNE MARRIES THE CHIEF'S DAUGHTER.

They did not know what kind of a man Agait'osdûnne was. He was a miserable man and miserable beyond that; and they had no respect for him since he had never killed anything. There was another man who was highly respected, the chief. He had a daughter of whom he took great care to guard her from evil. All at once it appeared from her shape that she was pregnant. Her father was determined to find out by whom she was in that condition. He was a man who had very great supernatural power, and had some young thunderbirds that he was keeping in a cage. He thought he would find out what he wanted to know through the help of these birds. He brought the men all together and asked each of them who did it. They all denied knowing who had done it. Then he made them go in where the birds were. If the man who was guilty went in the birds would ruffle up their feathers. He was going to find out about it in this way. They went in one by one but the feathers of the birds did not move.

"Are these all the men?" he asked. "There is one man who is not here," they told him. Then Agait'osdûnne came in and the feathers of the birds stood out immediately. "Her child is from that man," he concluded. He sent his child away in very pitiful condition. "Let them die," he said. He cast them off, leaving them no clothes to wear. They were in pitiful condition and there was nothing they could do. Agait'osdûnne was determined they should live. With his supernatural power he caused a moose to come there and killed it. From its skin he made two good garments. He was that kind of a being. If he said something should happen that thing happened.

By means of that power they lived all winter without suffering hardships. Those from whom they had moved were starving to death. Because they had cast him off to die, he would give them nothing but the blood, and he gave them much of that. "Let them live on the blood of the animals that are killed," he said. When he went after animals he told his wife that the one which came first should be spared. There was one mean man who shot it and killed all the animals that they lived on. When she saw her husband was not around she thought something might have befallen him. She took a mooseskin garment and went to him. When she came up to him he was still alive. She put a skin over his head and made him well again. Agait'osdûnne was from an animal. Nothing was difficult for him.

THE ORPHAN BOY KILLS BEAVER.

There was a young girl and her younger brother whose father and mother had died. The girl raised her brother. Once when the people were dying of starvation they came where there was a beaver lake as they were moving about. The boy's sister was carrying a load on her back.¹ The boy asked his sister to cut a hole through the ice for him so he might fish there. He also asked her to make him some arrows of a willow, saying he would try to get some fish. She was also to build a fire on the shore. To all this she gave her assent. They went to the bank and sat by a fire for a time. Then he started again to the lake where he stuck his arrows into the water and speared many beaver which he pulled out and killed with a club. He went back to his sister and asked her to bring the beaver for him. She went for them and brought them to the fire where she singed them. Then she started out after the other people carrying the singed beaver and her brother. The boy sat on his sister's back working at the beaver. As she was carrying him along there someone saw him. They ran up to him. His sister put him down. The people took all the beaver tails from him.

After that they were again dying of starvation. The boy was angry. He ate the leg of a beaver because he was angry. Starvation was killing them and they sent for him. He defecated and again he killed many beaver. They lived all right after that.

THE MOOSE THAT HAD BEEN A MAN.

A large band of Indians were moving about when one old man said that he would hunt the next morning along the mountains. There were two moose together who heard the old man say that. "That old man has great supernatural power; he is coming after us and we will not be able to get away from him. We will travel very slyly," the moose said. They had heard the old man talking and therefore traveled about with great caution.

When the old man came along he did not follow the tracks of the moose, but went around another way and shot one of them with arrows. He did not stop to cut up the moose he had killed, but, saying to himself that there had been two of them and that one was missing, he went after it. The moose ran very fast and lay down quietly at the end of the path. The old man went directly to the place where the moose was lying, following a direction at right angles to that taken by the moose. The moose got up. The old man had feathers on his bow (arrow) which showed the way he should go. When these feathers moved the moose heard it. He saw the man. "What shall I do now, he has me killed long ago?" the moose said to himself. He looked about to see where the trees were thick and ran there. The man ran along beside him so that the moose could not escape. Seeing a small open place, the moose said to himself, "Let him kill me there." Seeing that there was nothing more that he could do, he ran to the open place, jumped to the spot, and fell.

It seems that the moose was a person. This old man had had a younger brother who had disappeared into a herd of moose.¹ That was the moose he was following. "I am that one," the moose said, "what do you want?" "It is better for you to go to some larger country," said the man. He did not kill the moose for he knew it was his younger brother. Then he left him and became a man again.

WONYONI AVENGES THE DEATH OF HIS SONS.

A man named Wonyoni had always camped by himself and raised his family apart from others. One of his sons once inquired if they were the only existing people. His father told him that an uncle lived not far away by a fish lake, but because this uncle was a mean man he had raised his family by themselves. The boy replied that they would visit the uncle anyway. "Well, my boy, you are to be pitied, for you will not live long if you do that," the father warned him. "Never mind that, we will visit him," the boy said. "I have hindered your going many times, now do as you like," the father conceded.

Before the three boys set out to make the visit the father told the youngest boy not to go into the tipi even if the two older boys did so. He renewed the boy's shoe strings because the old ones were dry and brittle. He also advised him to leave his snowshoes along the trail, one pair behind the other because the track upon the snow was not strong. The boy did as his father advised.

When they came to the uncle's home the two older boys went in but the youngest played outside, although they called to him to come in. The uncle had killed all who had visited him previously and had rendered their fat. He directed his wife to cook for the guests. When they had been fed he took two spears and conducted the boys to the base of the tipi where he placed them. "This is the way your aunt and I used to do when we found a she-bear and her young ones. When we came upon them we would scare them out, and one standing on either side, we would spear them as they ran out. "This is the lard we made of them." Then as an illustration of the way it was done he drove the spears through both boys at the same time. The remaining boy ran back down the road. The uncle chased him but because the road was not firm enough to hold the older man, the boy outran him and escaped. When he returned, his father inquired about his brothers. "My uncle killed them," the boy replied.

To this Wonyoni paid no attention but lay by the fire as if nothing had happened. His wife cried and tried to throw herself into the fire. When daylight was appearing the next morning, the man went to his son and said, "Come, let us go to your uncle." They went where he had lived but found the tipi had been moved away. He had killed the two boys without any reason and burned everything over. "My brother is laughing at us ahead there. Your uncle never knows what he ought to do," the father said.

They followed to the other side of the lake where the tipi had been placed on a large flat. Wonyoni was angry. When they came near they saw the uncle walking outside watching for them. He came up to them and met them. He was a large man. When he came up close to them Wonyoni ran back from him. "I guess you ran off because your feelings are hurt," the large man said to him. Then Wonyoni ran up to him again saying, "You intend doing again as you did to the boys. Well, you make the first move," he said, showing his lack of respect. Wonyoni then aimed a blow at the man's head, but struck below and broke his legs. The large man fell and Wonyoni came up to him and killed him with his club.

The father and son then went up the bank where the camp stood. No one was stronger than that old man. "Where did you put him?" the large man's wife asked. She had a flat stone in her bag which she took out and threw at the man. Stepping to one side he dodged it and jumped on the woman, knocking her down. Wonyoni then killed all the people at the camp of the uncle whose name had been Bear-stands-in-the-water. Wonyoni, having killed many people, returned to his own camp. The people were all glad.

THE REVENGE OF WONYONI.

There was an old man who raised his children by themselves. When the boys were grown up one of them said, "Father, do you know of any people living close by?" The father replied, "No, my son, I do not know of any people living close by except your uncle who lives near, but he has always been a bad man." "We will visit him," the boys said. "Do not do it; you will not live if you do," said the father. "We will visit our uncle any way; it is hard for us to live by ourselves," the boys replied. "Well, go then," the father said. Addressing the youngest boy he asked him what supernatural help he had. "My dream was of newly fallen snow that does not pack," the youngest replied. When the two older boys started the youngest one told his father that he too would go. "Well," replied his father, "your uncle is bad. If your brothers go into the house, you stay outside and play."

The boys started to make the visit. The two older ones came to their uncle who recognized them. "They are my nephews. Quick, give them something to eat," he said. His wife gave them some bear grease by means of which he killed them.¹ He killed the two boys but the youngest ran away. He came where he had left his snowshoes, put them on, and made his escape.

When he came to his father he said, "Father, he killed my two brothers." The father was little disturbed and slept as usual. The old man was undersized and his name was Wonyoni which means "smart." "I will pay my brother-in-law a visit tomorrow morning," he said.

He went where the camp had been but found his brother-in-law had moved away. The bodies of his sons were lying there. The camp had been moved across the lake. Wonyoni started to cross on the ice and saw his brother-in-law walking by the lake. "Do not come this way," the brother-in-law called, "you are in pitiful condition."²

They say he was a large man. "Brother-in-law, why do you speak as any other man might? Do I visit you for nothing that you say that." Wonyoni said. "Don't you come here, nevertheless; you are pitiful," he replied, but the old man paid no attention to him. He walked on until he came near him. "You are coming to me because I killed your children. You begin the fight," he said to Wonyoni, who replied, "I am in pitiful condition as you say. What am I able to do to you?" "You begin the fight anyway," he said again. "Fix yourself," Wonyoni said.

² This remark probably refers to the usual seclusion of those who have recently suffered the loss of near relatives, which the murderer was trying to enforce.

The large man had a buffalo rawhide and Wonyoni had beaver skins of the same sort. The latter had a jawbone for a weapon and the former the backbone of a buffalo.¹ Wonyoni made a feint at the head of the other man who thinking he was to be hit in the head raised his buffalo hide. Wonyoni striking under this, broke his legs and killed him. Although he was a small man he was a formidable one they say.

WONYONI ESCAPES FROM THE CREE.

The old man, Wonyoni, was hunting moose with a dog when he became aware of Cree in the neighborhood. "What shall I do?" he said to himself and began to study the situation. He started off making tracks away from the place where his camp was situated. He came to an open place, looking back now and then. He was looking for the Cree, when suddenly he saw a man. He was traveling toward a large river and when he came there, he found a large stone and carried it with him up the hill where he was going to lie down for the night. He was on the watch there when suddenly the Cree were all around him. "How shall I get away from here?" he said to himself. Still considering this he went to bed. The Cree were all around him. When they made a rush at him to kill him he kicked the large stone he had brought up the hill so that it rolled down, breaking the trees as it went. The Cree thinking it was Wonyoni running away, chased after it. The old man immediately started back to his camp. The Cree were sitting there waiting for daylight so they could catch him. They did not kill him and he got back to his camp without being discovered because he was smart.

A YOUNG MAN IS TAKEN TO ANOTHER WORLD BY FLEDGLING GEESSE.²

A man was hunting in a canoe when he saw some young yellow geese. He paddled up to them and caught them. He thought they were too small to kill. Tying them to the canoe, he told them to tow him to their mother's country. He lay down in his canoe and fell asleep. He slept very soundly

¹ The buffalo skins and the beaver skins were to give supernatural help as well as real protection.

² Lowie, (a), 189; Goddard, (b), 46, where this incident precedes that of following an arrow to the sky as related on p. 234 above.

and a long time passed before he woke up, and then the geese were nearly large enough to fly.

It was not this earth on which he stood when he woke up, but he thought he was still in his own country. It was a large lake. He waded ashore and walked along by the lake, thinking intently. Suddenly in the distance he saw a wolf running along. The wolf was looking toward the man. The wolf ran down until he came to the water which he entered. As he walked through the water he kept looking back toward the man who began to follow the wolf. They continued this way, the wolf running ahead and the man following until after they had gone a long distance when land appeared. He went ashore and walked along by the water.

He came where a man was living who had many children. This man gave the stranger a daughter in marriage. The man who lived there went hunting by himself and killed a moose. The other man killed nothing. The first man thought much about it. "He is my son-in-law and a relative, let him hunt with me once anyway. Let him hunt with my snowshoes." He loaned him a pair of his own snowshoes and he went hunting. He had not gone very far when he killed a female with young. When he came back to the camp he saw many tracks. They thought they were the tracks of a good many people but they were really their own tracks. He returned the snowshoes to his father-in-law. "Go back to your relatives," the old man told his son-in-law. He went hunting, paddling in his canoe. In the distance something was moving. When he crossed to them he found they were his relatives.

THE WOMAN WHO DISCOVERED COPPER.¹

One time a man's wife who had been left alone was stolen by the people who live beyond the ocean (the Eskimo) and taken away to their country where she was held as a captive. The life was hard on her and she went away alone and came to the shore of the ocean. While she was there, unable to cross, a wolf came walking through the water toward her. He told her the passage was a good one and that she had better cross by means of it. She went up from the shore with the intention of abandoning her one child which had a large belly as a result of his greed. She killed a caribou and boiled the blood in the second stomach of the animal. She deserted the boy whose attention had thus been diverted.

There by the shore of the ocean metal was lying under the ground. The woman was passing by there and saw some of it. She took a load of it and carried it to her relatives. They came to know the metal in this manner. The men all went for the metal and had a hard time bringing their loads home. They used it for arrow points; it was of great value to them for it was all they had to use. It was metal but not very strong for it was copper.

They went for it again and when they came there, there were many men and only one woman. All the men had intercourse with the woman who sat down on the copper and it disappeared so that it could not be secured.

They went for it again after that, but it was not to be seen, and they could not secure it. The woman had sunk into the ground until it came halfway up her body. Those men who had kept her jointly were unable to secure any metal. They went for it again after that and found only the woman's head projecting above the ground which now came up around her neck. She was seen again after two years and she was still alive. That was the last time they saw her. After that they left her alone.

Once, as winter was coming on, the people were dying of famine for the game animals had all disappeared from that region. Crow was not generally about with the remainder of the people but when he did visit them he appeared to be well fed and happy. The others agreed that they would watch him when he went home but when they tried it, one after the other was forced to give it up because it grew dark where Crow was going along. Telocye, nighthawk, was the last one who could still see him. When he too was about to lose sight of Crow he asked to have dust thrown in front of his eyes. When this was done the nighthawk could still see.² "He disappears into the ground twice and beyond that I cannot see him," Nighthawk reported. When asked if he could follow him he said he thought he could, so they all set out to find where Crow lived.

When they came there they found Crow had driven all the animals into the earth and had shut them up. That was the reason no animals had been seen. They attacked Crow but he fought back with a club and it was not an easy victory. The door behind which the animals were confined was made of fat. They were trying to tear it down so the animals might come out. Crow tried in vain to club the people back for one of them finally succeeded in breaking down the door. The animals all came out. "They are smart animals," he said to himself. The animals all came out, but Crow found a way to make it difficult to kill them. He threw among them bones from which all the meat had been scraped. Again they were in trouble, for the animals were covered all over with bone and the only way they could be killed was to beat them on the nose until the blood vessels burst and they bled to death. The people were still dying of famine, and Crow himself was hungry. Then he made ribs and threw them among the animals. Because he did that the animals now have ribs.

This story belongs to the time when the world was being established.

A MAN IS CARRIED AWAY BY A GIANT BIRD.¹

A man was walking one time at night when suddenly something caught him and took him up toward the sky. The man wondered what had happened. He was carried to a large nest which was resting in a tree. The bird in the nest took good care of him and did not kill him. After the bird which had brought him had gone away and when it was nearly daylight another bird came back. "How does it happen you smell of a man?" this bird said to the young one in the nest. "I should smell of a man when one was brought here for me to eat," the young one replied. He hid the man so well from his father that he could not find him. The birds slept during the daytime and the man came safely down to the ground. He gathered a great quantity of knots and dry wood which he placed at the foot of the tree. He set this pile on fire and the tree caught fire high up where the birds were sitting. Their wings were all burned and they fell down. After that they walked around on the ground. Before that they were the things that frighten people.

THE UNDERWATER PEOPLE.

While the people were sitting by the camp they suddenly saw a young man passing along carrying a blanket on his back. "Where are you going and what are you going to do?" one of them asked him. "I am going to become a young man again," he replied. "How will you do that? We will go with you," they said to him. "Do as you please," the stranger replied.

The young man who had spoken and two of his brothers-in-law went with him. They walked along until they came to a lake. Suddenly this man who had been walking ahead said "Xwui" and went through the ice to the bottom of the lake where he had a wife. "You do as I do," he told his companions. There were many skin tipis standing there and many people walking about. They went toward one of the tipis which was very large. The stranger walked ahead and the others did as he did according to the directions he had given them. Suddenly, someone jumped on the foot of the man who had suggested accompanying the stranger. It was a frog that did it, but he thought it was a man. The man who had gone ahead as the leader had a wife there and he used to go there to visit.

It seemed to them they had been there but a short time, when the head man of the underwater people said to them, "I do not like it that the minds of your relatives are so intent on us." They started back in a canoe the head man made for them. "Take care how you use my canoe, for it is not very good," he warned them as they started away. They came nearly to the shore in it when it melted as the owner of it had told them it would. Two of the men came ashore, but two of them were missing, one of the young men and his brother-in-law. The two who got ashore believed the others were dead, but as they were sitting on the bank they saw the head of a man appear and reappear. The man swam ashore and stood up. The other one was seen swimming as a jackfish. He turned into a man so that finally all of them came ashore and returned to their camp.

THE BEAVER WHO WENT HOME WITH A CREE.¹ — First Version.

There was a powerful man all of whose young men had been killed by the Cree. He himself, a Beaver, was the only one alive. There was a Cree too, all of whose followers had been killed. Just the two men were alive, and they tried in vain to get the best of each other. Then the Cree went to his camp accompanied by the Beaver. There was another Cree at the camp who was a powerful man. When these men approached and the people saw them, the Cree was asked what he had done with his band and how it happened that he was accompanied by one of the enemy. The head man of the camp directed that a fire be made to burn the stranger. They got a lot of wood and set fire to it. Then they brought the man up to the fire which was burning fiercely. It happened that the man they were going to roast carried a wooden spoon. He held this up between himself and the fire, but it kept catching fire.

He began to study the situation intently. "I wish otters would run among the people," he said to himself. Then otters rushed among the people who were standing at a distance. "Otters are running among us," one of them said. They rushed away from there and where there had been many people there were now none. He sat there by himself while the otters rushed out on the ice. His former companion, alone, was running near them. Then the Beaver man himself ran with them. At one place where the otters were running the Beaver ran in front of them and caught two of them. He threw them at his former companion who caught them both and threw them back. The Beaver caught them again. Just as he caught them the other Cree said, "Do it to me." He threw them at him. They really knocked him down because the Beaver was stronger than he. They started to kill him and just the otters were coming out of the snow covered with blood. The man himself was under the snow and the otters only were to be seen. Then the Cree who had been the companion of the Beaver caught the otters, held them together, and killed them. He was a powerful man. "This man was with me and alive and yet you spoke as you did," he said to the other Cree.

He gave one of his wives to his companion and made a relative of him. The Beaver lived with him and had some children. After this, his younger brother, a boy, started after him accompanied by some others. He saw his brother's tracks and followed him. He came back and reported that the man they were to attack was powerful, but that now they had started they would not turn back. "If we do not succeed we will all be killed," he told them. "We will attack them tomorrow morning." He came back and worked against them with his mind, using supernatural power. He appeared to kill them.

When the Beaver heard his younger brothers attacking them, he immediately ran to his former partner and began to kill him. "Now I can do nothing," the Cree said, and after that was killed. Some of the younger brothers were killed, but they killed all of the Cree.

THE BEAVER WHO WENT HOME WITH A CREE.—Second Version.¹

The Cree living to the east were the first to come in contact with white people and consequently had guns before the Beaver did. The Cree used to fight with the Beaver and by the use of their flintlock guns killed a good many of them. Among the Beaver were some good medicinemen who had flint for medicine and were able therefore to keep the flints on the guns from acting on the powder.

There was a battle one time in which there was a Beaver who was a powerful medicineman and on the other side a Cree who was equally strong. All the Cree in the band were killed except this Cree medicineman and all the Beaver save their medicinemen. These two being left were so evenly matched in supernatural powers neither could prevail over the other. The Beaver went home with the Cree and became a second husband of the Cree's wife, living in the same tipi with him.

The Beaver was bad and used to go about killing Cree whenever he could find one by himself. He was so powerful as a medicineman the Cree could not kill him. One day as he was returning from a hunt he fell in with a Cree who had killed two swans and was taking them home. The Beaver killed the Cree and took the swans. When the swans were cooked, he left a portion for this Cree he had killed, thinking to hide his guilt.

One day as he was hunting he met his Beaver friends. He planned with them an attack upon the Cree promising them the aid of his supernatural help. He spent the night making medicine to weaken the Cree, but told the Cree the medicine was to make them irresistible. The Beaver had agreed to join the attacking party some distance from the camp to protect them by his medicine, but fearing they would not be able to kill the powerful Cree medicineman he rushed into his tipi and said, "I am coming to kill you." The Cree, baring his breast said, "Stab me here." The Beaver did so and killed him. Then the Beaver killed all the Cree.¹

A MAN MARRIES THE DAUGHTER OF A BIRD.

There was a man who was traveling around alone. At first he did not come where there were any people, but after a time he came where there was a small man living by himself who had two daughters. He was given one of these for a wife and lived there with them.

¹ The interpreter omitted the two following incidents which the narrator included in the story.

At the first fight the Cree sent two otters against the Beaver which the Beaver medicineman caught and taking one in each hand knocked them together killing them.

When the Beaver man met his friends he went to their camp. One of his moccasins was torn and his sister-in-law mended it for him using a piece of mooseskin which had been used to tie up vermilion paint. When he returned, his Cree wife noticed this mended place, but said nothing and did not warn the Cree.

The man's name in Chipewyan was said by Fournier to be Satselle'; compare pp. 54, 55 above.

"There are some moose that live over here," the small man said to his son-in-law one day, "let us go over there." They went over there. He was living on birds only. "You stand here and watch that big tree and I will drive the game to you," the father-in-law said. The Beaver was watching there supposing it was moose that was meant. Not long after, some birds flew by, but he paid no attention to them. After that his father-in-law ran up and asked where they were. "I did not see any moose, only some birds flew by," the man replied. Those birds are called tsebise and stay here all winter. "You say only birds passed. Those are the ones. They are moose," the father-in-law said.

Then the young man was angry and went back into the woods. Two owls had lighted there, and he went to them and killed them both. He was angry. He brought them to the old man and threw them at him. The head of one of the owls fell in the fork of a stick. The old man tried in vain to lift it out and when he could not, he cut it up where it lay. He told the son-in-law to go home and tell his mother-in-law to come after the meat quickly. When he came home he told them, "Go after the meat quickly, he tells you." They went there and brought the meat back. They made a soup of the owl's head. The old man said to his son, "Go and tell your brother-in-law to come here and eat the head soup." When he told his brother-in-law that, he replied that he hated the water of owls' eyes. "I will not go there," he said. The old man was angry about it.

The next morning the large man went hunting and killed two real moose. They went out for the meat and the old man went out behind them. The moose had not yet been cut up, and when he saw the moose he was afraid and ran away. "It is the large animal that eats people he means," the old man said and then he ran away from it. Those are the birds one sees around here which stay all winter. They say those birds were men at first.

A MAN TURNS INTO A SQUIRREL AND ESCAPES FROM A BEAR.

A man lay down for the night by a river where there was a trail with the prints of animals' feet. He heard a big noise made by a large bear. He ran to it and then he ran away from it. There was nothing he could do and he could not get away from the bear. He climbed a tree and the bear jumped up and climbed until he was not far below him. The bear was so big and fat he could not climb higher and he would not go away. The man was worn out for sleep and he could not go down for he was afraid of the bear which was watching him. "What can I do?" he said to himself. He turned himself into a squirrel and jumped far over to another tree which was standing there. He ran to the trunk of that tree and went down without the bear which was sitting high up in the tree knowing it. The man gathered many knots and brought them on his back to the foot of the tree and set them on fire. The fire shot high up the tree and set it on fire. The bear was big and could not do anything. He began to burn and fell down. He became a man again and ran off. That is the way he avoided being killed.

Once a man who had all kinds of birds for his brothers was traveling. He came along where there were very many birds about. When they saw this man carrying something on his back one of them asked, "Brother, what are you carrying?" "They are my songs," he replied. "Sing them for us, brother; and we will dance," said the bird. "Those who dance to my songs must keep their eyes shut," the man said. "We will do as you say," the birds agreed. "Wait, I will build a dancing camp for you," the man said. When he had the camp ready he said, "Now, come on and dance." The man was drumming for the birds who were dancing with closed eyes. He was wringing the necks of the birds without the other birds discovering it. There were many of them and he killed them all. That man was not afraid of anything because all the animals were his brothers.

THE EARTH RECOVERED BY DIVING.²

At first there was no land and no people, nothing but birds living on the water. They were the only living things. They came together at a certain place and one of them said, "I wonder where the land is?" They were looking for land without success. One of them tried to find land at the bottom of the water, but did not succeed. They all tried, but were not able to find it.

One of them, named Xak'ale, also dived into the water saying he would look for land. He went down disappearing from sight. He was gone a long time and when he came up, he was on his back vainly trying to breathe. He breathed a little and said, "Look here under my finger nails." They looked under his nails and found some earth there which they took out. Xak'ale who brought the land up was small.

² In reply to questions it was learned that the earth is believed to have disappeared during a deluge from which certain people saved themselves by turning into waterbirds. The deluge was caused by the melting of the snow which accumulated during four summerless years. This myth in a more complete form is given from the Chipewyan by Petitot, pp. 373-378, although the Biblical Noah seems to appear in that version. The incident of diving for the earth is very widespread in North America.

Trees grew again on the land which was taken from the water and the earth was made again. They say birds did this and the one who succeeded was named Xak'ale.

THE GIANT BEAVER AND MUSKRAT.

At first they say there was a large man who chiseled for a large beaver. He worked in vain for he could not kill it. He could not find its track anywhere nearby. He went out on the large frozen lake and saw the beaver walking along under the ice. He tapped on the ice and drove the beaver back into its house where he killed it.

She had young ones in her and because of that the ice would not remain quiet. He cut the mother open, took out the young ones, and put them in the water. The ice then became quiet. That was why he did it. They say both the man and the beaver were giants. The beaver house is still standing.¹

Out to the east where there are no trees, away from the country in which beaver are found, there used to be a muskrat. If a canoe passed by, the muskrat would hear it. They say one did not speak when he paddled by the place. It is not long since someone in passing there felt the water move. He is not there now and since he is gone they do not feel the water move.

THE REDEEMING OF A DOOMED MAN.

One time the people were having a bad quarrel and because of it one man tried to injure another through his supernatural power. "There is no one stronger than I and because of that you will go no further than that patch of white soil," he said of the man he wished to injure.

The man went hunting and came to a white patch of soil.² An old man sitting there said to the man as he came near him, "Quick, go back and get your personal property." The man started back for his property. "Hurry," he called after him. The man came back to his camp and was tying up his things, when his father-in-law asked what he was going to do with his property. "A man who was sitting in front of me told me to come back to him quickly and I am doing it," replied the son-in-law. "You did not used to be afraid of a man's mind. Pay no attention to what he said. Sit here and I will go to him," the father-in-law said.

¹ Said to have happened on Great Slave Lake. Stories of giants in the north are common (Petitot, 132-141, 168; Lowie, (a), 188, 189 above); the particular incident explains a local hill as is indicated in the last sentence.

He took an otterskin and started away to the place where the man was sitting. When he came to the white spot, and the man sitting there saw him, he called out, "Am I nobody that I call a man and you come instead?" "Well, let him alone anyway," he said. He made a trade with him for the otterskin and left him.

They say the old man did that. He bought off his son-in-law who was about to be killed. That man was an underground person. They say the old man saved his son-in-law's life by his supernatural power.

THE EQUALLY MATCHED MAGICIANS.

The people were jealous of each other and because of that one man had camped alone. A party of Indians started to go to this man's camp, but when they came within sight of it the man who was jealous of him said he would go to the camp alone. He started toward it changing himself into a bear when he came near. The people saw him as he was running along and warned the man for whom he was coming that his enemy was approaching. When the man heard what was said he turned himself into a buffalo and jumped out. They met each other; the one a buffalo and the other a bear. Neither could get the advantage over the other because they were afraid of each other. Then the man who was a buffalo spoke to the man who was a bear saying, "Your food is so short you are saying to yourself, 'What can I do?' and that way you run toward me." The bear too, said to the buffalo, "You, too, because your teeth are short you are saying to yourself, 'What can I do?' That is the matter with you." They were both alike in power and immediately made friends.

A MAGICIAN CUTS HIS THROAT WITH IMPUNITY.

There was a man who had great supernatural power. The man with whom he shared a wife said to himself, "I, too, am just the same sort." Thinking they would test their power they decided to cut off each other's heads. The first man had his head cut off but he did not die. Then his companion cut his throat. He tried in vain to fix it again. He drew his hand across his throat twice but it made no difference. He was unable to restore himself. He went to his companion and said, "I thought I was the same kind as you but I am not." Then his partner called him to him and put his hand on his throat. After that he got well. They lived all right. They were only testing themselves.

At first before there were any white people, the Indians were powerful men. They secured their livings by means of supernatural power. That was when they used to wear leather.

A MAGICIAN SPENDS A WINTER IN A LAKE.

A man was put in a sack which was then lowered into a lake through a hole which had been cut in the ice. The man to whom it was done had said, "Do that to me." He thought he had supernatural power to endure that. The others kept watch while he sat in the water all winter until the snow was nearly melted. They saw he was still alive and took him out.

Some who tried to do that died and others lived. Those who were not very powerful supernaturally, died. Many who did such things to each other died. Before white people came there was no sickness. At first they died only when they were using supernatural power on each other.

A MAGICIAN ESCAPES THE CREE BY TURNING INTO A BUFFALO.

There were many people living together. Among them was an old man who was going to make new teeth for himself. While the Beaver were camped there for him the Cree came and attacked them. The other people all ran away but that old man did not get up. He was singing his medicine songs and did not know the Cree had come there. They went off after the Beaver but did not kill them. When the Cree came back they heard a man singing. They went to him. The old man was in a lodge. He pushed the poles up high so that he could be seen. There was no man there only a buffalo which was about to attack them. They were afraid of him. The buffalo was the old man.

He had one child. "I will make my teeth come again," he said. That is why they had made a camp for him. He had said he would make himself a young man again. They say that is the way they used to do. When old age was going to kill them they used to rejuvenate themselves in a lodge.

FOURNIER'S GRANDFATHER'S SUPERNATURAL POWER.¹

The informant's father's father was a great medicineman. A party of Beaver were traveling in midwinter beyond Hay River toward the Rocky Mountains. A band had been separated from the main party and through bad luck in hunting the men had all starved. The surviving women and children came to the grandfather's camp. The old man, displeased because some of his relatives in this band had died, said he would make medicine so that none of his relatives would have trouble in killing all the game they wanted to eat.

He made a medicine pole, painted it, and set it up. He had a man stand beside the pole and made it as high as the man. He then began to sing, and although it was the middle of the winter it thundered and began to snow. The snow fell until it was as high as the top of the pole. Then they could kill all the game they needed. Just the heads of the moose were sticking out of the snow and they could be killed with spears. When the snow melted the water was so high that the beaver gnawed the tops of the tallest cottonwood trees along Hay River.²

THUNDERBIRDS.

They breed where there is a high hill. They destroy all the timber where they make their nest. They live on every high mountain. The places where they live are dangerous. Only men with strong supernatural power can see them. Those are the only ones who know where they live. As soon as a person who has nothing of that kind (supernatural power) comes near, they attack him. The people who do not see them are afraid of them. They say they can kill a man because they are strong. "Earth's roots" are the only things which are stronger than they are. They tear twisted trees to pieces.³

THE BOY WHO WAS CARED FOR BY THE WOLF.⁴

One time there was a man who with many children was living by himself. In the middle of the winter his wife died, and he went to join the other

² The informant was in his grandfather's camp and remembers this incident well.

⁴ This story was affirmed to be true by the narrator, John Bourassa, one of the most intelligent of the mixed-bloods in the vicinity of Vermillion. Lowie has a story of a bear who gave suck to a grown man, p. 195, above.

people. He had been taking care of an orphan child, but now could do nothing for him, so he deserted him, leaving him alone in the camp.

When he passed by the next spring, he found the child was still alive and took him along, "How did you get through the winter without freezing?" he asked the child. "A wolf took care of me. He slept with me and made a fire for me. That is why I did not freeze to death. He also fed me with meat," the boy said.

The boy lived long after this, until he was of middle age and finally died of some ailment.

THE LOANED HUNTING DOG.

An old man had a hunting dog which was very good for moose. That was because it was not an ordinary dog but a wolf. A young man saw a moose track, but did not succeed in killing the moose. He came to the old man and said, "Grandfather, I saw a moose track, lend me your dog and I will go after it." "My dog is mean," the old man replied, "you must promise to treat the dog exactly as I tell you." The young man agreed to do so. "If you kill a moose the first thing you must do is to give the dog the end of the tongue. He is only pleased when I do that. You must do the same. Do not fail to do as I do, my grandson."

The young man went hunting with the dog and killed a moose. Instead of doing as the old man had told him he cut off the liver and threw it to the dog. The dog was angry and did not eat the liver but went off and left it there. The young man cut up the moose and started home. Being thirsty he went to get a drink. The dog which was lying there jumped on the man as he drank and disemboweled him, killing him. He ate all the man's ribs.

Neither the man nor the dog returned. The Indians at the camp were going to bed, but the old man said, "There must be some reason my dog is not here. He has been howling and he does not do that without some reason. I told the young man repeatedly not to treat the dog in any way differently from the way I treat him. I loaned him the dog because he asked me for him so many times. The dog has probably killed him. I fear he is not living. Look for him and see if you can find out what has happened."

They went out to look for him and came upon his tracks where he had been approaching the camp. They saw his body lying there in front of them. The dog had killed him. The dog was not there and they did not know where he had gone.

The old man who had been living by the dog's aid said, "How shall I live? The dog with which I got my living has left me alone." He was much displeased. He called the dog and the next morning it came back to him.

He lived with the help of the dog again. The dog did not kill the old man who was able to live on good meat again. They say that was a very good dog.

They tell this story about the time the world was beginning.

THE HUNTING FETISH.

A man was starving and it seemed he could not live. He was dying of hunger because the moose detected his presence before he could get up to them. They knew he was a powerful man. He was so weak he could not walk very far. He came where there were some moose but before he could shoot them they rushed off. He had a little moose, an image, that used to sit on him. He pulled that out and waved it in front of the moose, but they took no notice of it and continued to run off. He put the little moose under the snow and himself died immediately.

The little moose was the same as his own flesh. They say he was using it to hunt with at the time when people were hunting with arrows.

Because a moose liked the man it took out its own little one and put it in the man's body and that gave him good luck. He must have angered the moose and because of that he died of hunger. They say that was the way it happened.¹

THE MAN WHO TALKED TO THE BUFFALO.

One time there was a man who used to talk to the buffalo, and they would do what he told them to do. He would tell them to go to a certain place, to go into the water, and to give him food. Then they would go into the water backwards, and the Indians would kill them with a spear. The calves would say, "unnai" (mother) just as plainly as people do. They took hold of them and killed them. There was one bull they did not kill. He always ran through between the people.² Then they would take the dead buffalo ashore and eat them.³

¹ The last paragraph was obtained in response to a question as to the meaning of the story.

² The narrator in conversation afterward referred to the well-known story of the man who married a buffalo. The bull, which invariably escaped, was the result of this union. "There was a young man who disappeared. They supposed he went among the buffalo. After that they used to see a bull with hair just like a man's. The buffalo understands what people say because a man used to live among them."

THE POTENCY OF WAR SONGS.¹

Once when breechcloths of skin were still worn, a party of Indians went to war. They failed to find the enemy they were after and therefore could not accomplish their purpose. They began to sing for the Cree and then they saw them. They started for the place where the Cree were, but when they came near, decided to postpone the attack until the next morning. While they were waiting they tried their power by lifting out large stones.² The prints of their hands can still be seen where they took hold of the rock. They made the attack and killed them all, leaving not one of them living.

THE CURING OF A WOMAN WITH A MEDICINE LODGE.

This too is a man's story. His wife was very sick and it seemed she could not live long. A medicine lodge was put up near her, and they were wondering who would use it. "I will be the one to use it," a certain man said. They paid him well to do this. He sang his songs. The woman did not move and they thought she was nearly dead, but he caused her to live again. There were many men sitting there when he did that. He cured her and she lived happily.

This story belongs to the time of the world's end.

THE MEDICINE LODGE.

One pole is stood up over which a cover is stretched by means of ropes which are attached to pegs driven in the ground. The lodge does not stand firmly until the man enters, but when he goes in and begins to sing the cover stretches tight as if a wind were blowing inside of it. It is called cūns.

¹ This was told in response to a question about a stone that used to be by the ford at Haliska, west of Vermilion. It is the common belief that if this stone is moved from its place it returns of itself. The informant said a half-breed once threw it into the creek, but when he next passed it was back in its place. When the informant was asked where it is now, he said it was near Peace River where a half-breed had carried it. He gave as his opinion that the stone had been so long unused that no life was now in it.

² Two stones were pulled out of the ground by the competing men. The stronger (in magic) pulled out the larger.

THE MAN WHO ENTERED A FISH.

I started out, I was not going far. I paddled away in a canoe I had made. I was just paddling about on the river when I was inside something and suddenly became an old man. Then I paddled out and found I had been inside a large fish. I had become an old man.

THE MAN WHO WINTERED WITHOUT FOOD.

Two men, each of whom had been living by himself, met one day. One of them was extremely emaciated but the other still had a little flesh on his bones. The latter asked the former how long ago he last ate meat. "I had something to eat," he replied, "when the moon before this one was new." "You eat a good deal," said the one who still had some flesh. "You had a meal last month and you are already beginning to starve; I ate last when the first snow came last fall." They two passed the winter thus.

I think the early people did not eat much.¹

THE ORIGIN OF MOSQUITOES.

Once there was a mean woman who always scolded her husband. She used to beat him all the time too, and was always angry. Afterwards she died, and they just threw her body away without burying it. Sometime after, when they passed by there, the bones were lying about. The husband kicked the skull, saying, "This used to be a mean woman." He kicked it until he smashed it, and from it flew out a flock of mosquitoes. Since then there have been mosquitoes in the world.

THE KILLING OF THE LARGE HUMAN MOSQUITOES.²

Long ago there used to be large mosquitoes which killed people. Once when a company of people was traveling along, a dog lost the load off his back. As a woman was looking for the lost bag she suddenly saw a canoe with someone in it paddling around a point. The woman thought immediately as she saw him that he must be one of the kind who were accustomed to kill people and that he would kill her. She climbed a tree to escape him. As he was coming up the tree after her she called to him, "Do not come up the tree for your moose," meaning himself. "The tree leans over the river and your moose will fall in the river and be lost if you kill me here. Wait, and I will come down and then you can kill me." Agreeing to this, he went a little way from the tree while the woman came down.

She started to run and cross the point around which the river made a long bend. The mosquito jumped into his canoe and paddled around the point. When the woman saw him coming she climbed another tree which leaned over the river. He was about to pass under the tree when the woman let fall some urine on him. He wondered where water could be coming from for the sun was shining. Looking up he said, "Oh, my moose is sitting on the tree." He started to climb the tree after her, holding his spear in his hand. When he was close the woman told him to give her his spear while he climbed up. "I will give it back to you when you get up here and you may stab me with it," she said. He gave her the spear and she went further up the tree with it. When he came up close to her she speared him on the crown of his head. The man fell down. Holding the spear up as it was still sticking in his head he started home, crying, "The moose is killing me; the moose is killing me."

He came back to the camp still holding the spear which he was unable to pull out. When he came near the camp the mosquitoes all ran out saying, "Oh, the moose killed a man." When they had tried in vain to get the spear out they sent for a smart man to see if he could do it. This man advised driving the spear down through as the easiest way to remove it. They did this, driving the spear down through so it came out under his chin. The man died.

The mosquitoes then decided to follow the woman's track since she could not be far from the camp. When the mosquitoes were near the camp of the people a medicineman advised that mooseskins should be hung all around where the mosquitoes were camped, so that the larger ones at least would not be able to come through. They did this and only the small mosquitoes, those of the present size, were able to come through the holes in the skins. All the big ones were killed with the aid of the medicineman.

THE SHIFTLESS HUSBAND.

A man who was camping by himself ran out of food and went with his wife to a lake to get some fish. He went out on the lake and sat by his hook but came home at night without any fish. His wife wondered what was the matter, for fish had always been taken in that lake. She told her husband that she herself would go fishing the next day. Her husband assented to this. The woman got some fish very quickly. She found her husband had not even cut a hole entirely through the ice, and that was why he had not taken any fish. The woman got a good many.

The man himself had gone to set snares for rabbits but came home without any. The wife wondered why he hadn't caught any, for rabbits were plentiful. "I will go to look after your snares tomorrow," she told him. "All right," he said, "you look after my snares." She found he had merely cleared away the snow on the top of the mountain and sat there all day. He had set two of the snares and thrown the remainder down in the snow. She gathered them up and set them. She caught many rabbits which she took home with her. The man had spent the day fishing but had not caught any fish, for he had not gotten the hook into the water.

Now the woman suspected what sort he was. If it had not been for his wife he would have starved. They lived through the winter because of the woman's effort. He was not a manlike fellow and had concluded he could not live anyway.¹

A YOUNG MAN CARRIES ABOUT FIRE ALL WINTER.²

There was a young man who went around alone one winter. He had neglected to provide himself with the proper stones for making fire before the snow came and covered them up. He was therefore obliged to carry fire with him wherever he went. He was without food and starving one night when he killed a partridge. He scraped away the snow, built a fire, and cooked the partridge. He ate the bird and when he had finished dropped the feet in the snow behind him.

The next day he went on and wandered about for many days without being able to kill anything. Finally, he came back to the same place and cleared away the snow for a fire. As the fire melted the snow away he saw the discarded partridge feet. He then recognized his former camping place. He picked up the feet and ate them. That night a partridge came to him in his sleep and said, "You were proud. You were too proud to eat my feet as other people do, but now you want to have them. You are miserable and about to die, but from now on you will be all right. By tomorrow night you will have plenty to eat. The next day he went about thinking all day long he would find some game as had been promised. Night came without his having had a chance to kill anything. He moved the snow away and built his fire against a drift that the heat might be reflected toward him. He sat there wondering that an animal should deceive him by making a promise that had not been fulfilled. As the fire grew hot he heard a sound like the frying of grease. He kept pushing the fire together and as he did so the sound was heard again. He finally noticed the drift of snow covered a moose which had been killed in the fall when it was fat. The fire had been built near the hips of the moose and the choicest parts were ready cooked. He had the whole moose to himself and was all right after that.

A man who had just come home was scolded by his wife and went out again. The wife thought that he had gone out without any particular intention, but asked her son to look for his father. The boy wondered what was the matter and replied that his father was still standing there.

The man had run off. The woman looked after him and then set out to follow him. He had just come back from killing a caribou and he took along the head, dragging it behind him. His wife followed the mark left by the dragged head and by the bones which lay along the way. After a time she turned back, but the man kept on. Finally, he came to the trail of some strange people and followed it until he overtook them. He thought they were people but they were really partridges. They gave him some of their food. He went on again and found another trail which he followed. They were porcupines this time. They gave him some of their food, pitch, which seemed to him to be meat.

This man's two sisters had been taken by a people who lived at a great distance and he was going to get them back. After a time he saw their trail and followed it until he overtook them. He found they were both married to the same man. When he told his sisters that he had come for them, they told him their husband was such a powerful man it was no use, he could do nothing to help them. The young man declared that having come so far for them he would not go back without them.

His brother-in-law had killed a moose and told his wives to bring the meat before it spoiled. "This is our chance," the young man said, "now we will start back." They traveled toward their homes day and night without stopping to sleep. Finally sleep was overpowering them and they lay down. When they got up in the morning their way was barred by a sheer cliff no man could climb. The girls began to cry but their brother said they would lie down and sleep again. When they got up the next time the cliff had disappeared.

They went on again toward their homes until sleep again forced them to lie down. When they awoke, a lake which they could not cross lay in front of them. The brother told them to lie down again. When they got up the next time a narrow neck of land ran across the lake on which they were able to pass to the other side.

When they came back to their home they found their father so old he could not get up. The man's wife had been in the prime of life when he left and now her hair was white. The man who had made the journey was a young man when he set out. It had been a long time since he left but it did not seem so to him. He thought it was only a short time before. That was a powerful man who by supernatural power made a long journey, although it did not seem long to him.

A STOLEN WIFE IS RECOVERED FROM BEYOND THE SEA.¹

A man left a large camp in which he had many brothers and camped alone with his wife. As they moved about they came to a large lake that one could not see across and camped by it. One day while he was away, hunting, someone stole his wife. He could see where she had been taken along, for as she resisted being pulled along she pulled out herbs and tore off brush which she dropped by the way. The husband followed until he came to a place where he could see across the sea. When the man who had captured the woman came there with her she had asked him to shoot some partridges which were in sight for her. The man shot them and gave them to her. They got into the canoe to cross the sea on the further shore of which the man lived. The canoe was still in sight when the husband came to the shore. He called to him, "Agia, my partner, bring my wife back." The man in the canoe shot several arrows at the husband saying, "These are all you will get." They went on until they were out of sight. The husband resolved to do something about it; he was not going to lose his wife without an effort to recover her.

He had with him some beaver teeth which he always carried, for according to his dream, he could do anything he wished with them. He put them by the water's edge and said, "I want these to turn into a good canoe tonight." Then he went back to the large camp where his brothers-in-law were and told them someone had stolen his wife. He asked them to go with him and help him fight to get her back. They went with him and when they came to the shore of the lake a fine canoe was floating there, where he had left the beaver teeth. They paddled out on the lake in it. The woman knowing her husband would come after her, had strewed the partridge feathers along the way they had gone. Where they stopped for the night she put the wing feathers. This she did until they were across. The men who were coming behind them followed the trail of the feathers stopping for the night where the long feathers were found. When they came near the shore they saw many canoes drawn up on the beach. There was no camp there, only a small shelter of poles from which smoke was coming out. The pursuers went in and found an old man there and an old woman. There were fish hanging there which the hosts roasted for their guests. After they had eaten they asked the old woman if a stranger had brought a woman there. "Oh yes," the old woman replied, "a man named 'Rabbit-tail' (gatce) brought a fine woman from the other side of the lake. This morning the camp was moved a little way over where there is plenty of wood." Hoping to deceive the old woman who did not know them, they asked if this man's tipi was different in any way from the others. "Yes," she said, "an otterskin is always hanging at the top of it. When you see that you will know it is his tipi." Seeing a number of fine spears behind the old woman's lodge they asked her about them. She replied that they belonged to Rabbit-tail who used them to kill people. The strangers asked to be allowed to examine them and the old woman passed them over. Having examined them they killed the old man and old woman with them.

They went to the new camp where they found the tipis already up but the women were still cutting wood. The husband hid near his wife and called her to him. She said the chief would be hard to kill for he had horns on his head. The husband said they would remain there that night. He told her to get her captor to sharpen her knife which was dull. When they went to bed she was advised to play with her husband for a long time so that he would sleep soundly. Just at daybreak they would rush the camp and when she heard them coming she was to cut the man's throat with the knife he would have newly sharpened for her. Then she was to rush out before Rabbit-tail's mother, a medicine woman, sleeping on the other side of the fire, could do anything. Just as day was breaking the next morning they rushed the camp and the stolen wife cut the man's throat and ran out.

The old woman asked what dog was lapping up blood. It was the blood gurgling from her son's throat she heard. The attacking party killed the old woman and everyone else in the camp, using the spears they had taken.

The man started back with his wife. When they came to the lake they broke all the canoes they found there before they recrossed.¹

THE TREACHEROUS WIFE.

There was a man whose tipi stood by itself. His wife was carried off by the Cree during his absence. He looked for her in vain; it seemed she was completely lost. His brother-in-law helped him look for her for a time and then gave it up. The husband started out alone thinking she had been stolen by people from a distance. He finally saw his wife as she was coming for water. "You are still alive," he said to her. "I am in distress from a lack of moccasins." The woman did not speak to him. She had not believed he would follow her.

He sat there waiting for her at the shore end of a sharp point of land that ran out into the lake. The woman went up to the camp and reported that there was a stranger sitting down below. As soon as she said it the men who were sitting about the camp rushed down after him. They caught him and built a platform on which they put him with a big fire underneath to roast him alive. The man was screaming as he slowly roasted.

There was an old man living a short distance away all of whose children, except one daughter, had been killed. He heard a man screaming over at the camp and said to his daughter, "Go and see what my son is saying." The girl went over there and sure enough the man who was screaming was just like her older brother whom they believed had been killed. She looked at him and went back to her father saying, "Father, the one who is making that noise is just like my brother." The old man put on his war outfit and went over there. When he came where the man was being cooked he said to them, "What is this you are doing? You are cooking a man that looks like my son." They took him down from the platform and carried him home to the old man's camp. There the father made him well again with his supernatural power.

There were many people living there who were not like human beings. They had killed the old man's children. The old man did not hunt and ¹ It was explained that since the horns were on the sides of the man's head he had to sleep on his back and it was easy to cut his throat.

They crossed the lake in three days traveling fast with supernatural power.

they did that for that reason, and because they were too many for him to resist.

At another time they agreed to have a footrace. The old man said to the young man who had been roasted, "My son they say they are going to have a footrace tomorrow. I am going to bet your sister who is all we have." He was planning that the man's wife should be killed. The old man sang, beating the tipi poles. As he was drumming on them a live bird fell out. He took this bird, fixed it properly, and placed it in his sack. They had the footrace, but the young man paid no attention to it. The father joined in the race having the eagle. Because he was old and not strong they placed him ahead. The old man ran with his legs behind the others. The young man who was over there out of sight went into the bird and ran after them. Before long he passed the others and ran ahead of them. He came back to the camp first of all and took down the meat. The woman who had been his wife was laughing at him. Another woman asked her why she was laughing. That woman had many relatives among the people from whom she had come. Then the man who had married the woman came back and was looking for the meat, but it was gone. "Who has taken it?" he asked. "The man over there took it. He came back first." "There was no one ahead of me as far as I knew. He did that to me because I bet you. Go to the man who has won you," the man said. He sent her to the man whose wife she had been before. When she came to the door she said, "Let us two go over there close to the camp." The man did not say anything to her but to his father said, "I hate her mouth. Do anything you please with her." His father killed her.

A WOMAN AGREES TO BETRAY HER SONS TO THE CREE.¹

There was a woman whose husband died leaving her with three small boys. She supported herself and her sons by killing rabbits and other small game. When the boys were grown up and were away one day hunting, a band of Cree came to their camp. They told the woman that they were coming the next morning to kill her sons. They were going to kill her right then unless she promised not to tell the sons. If she did not tell them they would let her live and she might have her choice of the whole band for a husband. She promised on this condition.

The sons came home late and went to bed. The youngest woke up early in the morning and saw his mother looking through a hole in the tipi. She was saying to herself, "I wish day would come quickly so I may have a husband and be rid of these boys." When the son heard this he pushed a stick through a birchbark dish, lighted it in the fire for a torch, and ran outside. There he found the strangers' tracks. When he told his brothers what he had heard and seen they agreed that they had better go to the larger camp. As they went out the door one of them shot the mother in the throat saying, "You will not have a husband." When the Cree came they found the woman dead.

A MAN AVENGES HIS SON-IN-LAW.

A party of Indians went on a war expedition. The strange people for whom they went were not found, and the party turned back. When they came out on a lake there was a black spot in the distance. They thought wolves might have killed a caribou, and ran to it saying they would eat the marrow. One man outran the others and came to it. It was a man's head. The Cree had killed a man, one of their friends. They went up to the shore to a camp where many people were sitting. One of them was the chief who had a son-in-law living there. They counted the people and found the son-in-law was missing. "He has run away. He had no moccasins with him and has frozen to death somewhere. Look around the edge of the camp," his father-in-law said. They found he had left the camp at a certain point and they followed after him. They found his body lying not very far away. His father-in-law just looked at him and since there was nothing he could do he left him.

They followed those Cree and came up to them where they had returned to their tipis which were grouped in two camps. There were many tipis. The father-in-law, indicating the place where the tipis were most numerous, said he would go there alone. He went there by himself and killed them all; not one was left alive. Then he cried. Because he was angry the entire party went to the other camp and killed them all.

They went home and came down to the lake again. The Cree were there again. That too was a war party. They were sitting there by their hooks and did not know anyone was about. One of them was not getting any fish. "I wonder what is the matter?" he said to himself. "I guess it is because the water is too shallow. I will make a hole in the ice further out." He went out to another place where a man was sitting by his hook. The Beaver coming up to him thought it was one of his own people, but it was really a Cree. It was snowing hard when he came up to him. "My brother-in-law you will soon kill fish," he said to him. There was a spear lying beside the Cree who took it up, thinking it was not a relative. He too had been carrying an ice chisel and killed the Cree with it. He ran away without telling his relatives who were all killed by the Cree. He was the only one to escape to his home alive.

AN OLD MAN ESCAPES A PLOT ONLY TO BE KILLED IN REVENGE.

There was one old man who camped by himself, living on rabbits which he was taking in snares. He had a wife who was a young girl. A young man who was living with some strange Indians was out hunting and came to the woman. He told her that he would kill the old man when he was out looking after his snares. "If I kill him I will marry you," he told her. When the old man went out to look after his snares the young man went in the same direction. He watched for him behind some willows which were covered with snow. A rabbit had been snared and was hanging high up on the spring pole. When the old man stretched up to pull it down with a wooden hook he carried, the young man shot him. The old man jumped up and the arrow went under him. The old man jumped after the young man who tried in vain to run away. He caught him and killed him.

Because the young man had many relatives the old man ran off. He came to some people who were living far away whom he did not know. They were the relatives of the young man he had killed. He was telling them his experiences when they broke in on him saying, "You are telling us about our youngest brother whom you have killed. We were wondering who killed him and it turns out to be you." They killed the old man, although he was very pitiful.

A MAN WINS HIS FAITHLESS WIVES BY WRESTLING.

There was an old man who was highly respected and the chief of his band. He had two wives. They were starving, for although he was trying to secure beaver he did not succeed in killing any. He thought the women were starving but wondered at the way they were treating him. Occasionally he killed a small beaver. He would give it to the women and ask them to cook it for him. "Take it up away from the water," he would tell them. They would leave only the shoulder of the beaver for him. The old man ate only that. "I think they are trying to starve me," he said to himself. Wondering what they were planning to do, he went to bed. In the morning the two women got up. "Get up," they told the old man, "what is the matter? You never acted this way before." The two women went off and left him. The old man pretended he was trying hard to get up. "They are alive all right I guess but mean," he said to himself.

He remained there all winter alone. When the snow was all melted he started off in the direction the women had gone. They had both married the same man. The man they had married was also a strong man. "I will go and see my wives' other husband," the old man said.

His rival was not far away. He came to him and they began to wrestle. The man who had taken the women away was thrown down for the other man was the stronger. They say the first man was called, "Strong Man." The other one was strong. He left the man saying, "You wanted them; marry them." He went off and began to chisel for beaver with a moose horn. This happened before there were any white people.

THE RIVAL HUSBANDS.

Once there was a man who, although poor was strong. There was a married man, camped by himself who was not so strong. Having lost his wife to the stronger man, he said to himself, "Why is it he does not kill anything? They will kill my children." He continued living with them in the same camp. The man who had taken the wife away hunted a good deal but did not kill anything. Although the children were about to die of starvation he paid no attention to them. The other man who had always been poor hunted but did not kill anything. Finally, the grandmother of the children said to her son-in-law, "It seems as if your children will starve. Why do you not do something about it?" "Well, get my arrows out," he replied to his mother-in-law.

He hunted along one side of the road until he came to a band of caribou. He killed them all and carried a large quantity of the meat back with him for the children. The poor man who shared the camp with him had said he would move the camp to a considerable distance. The father went back to the road which he followed. He had already passed the new camp. They had not gone further than he had in hunting. Suddenly, he saw the tent standing in front of him. He put the load down outside and went in without it. "Mother-in-law, you will find some partridge dung over there from which you can make some soup for the children," he said. "I brought it for that purpose; bring it inside." His partner spoke up, "I saw it lying there and left it. Do not get it, for my children will choke on it." The old woman brought the load in, and when the other man saw it was meat he was much pleased. They went for the remainder of the meat.

The other man went away hunting the next morning and came home in the evening. His leggings were covered with frozen blood. He did not bring back meat but said they would go for it in the morning. When they came where he claimed to have killed the animals it was apparent the caribou had run away from him. The blood on his leggings was from his nose. He had broken pine brush and covered it with snow thinking it would be mistaken for caribou carcasses. "What is the matter; it is nothing but pine brush. He said it was caribou meat," the father of the children said when he saw it.

They went back and the man who had taken the wife away gave her back, for he concluded he was not capable enough around the camp to have the responsibility of a wife. They say he was that kind of a man.

This happened when they were wearing breechcloths of skin.

A YOUNG MAN TRIES TO ESCAPE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF PARENTHOOD.

The people were very hungry. It seemed as if they would not live. They had made a cache and were going to that. When they were not yet in sight of it, the son of an old man suggested they camp about alone. "We cannot do that," his father said, "we shall die." The young man insisted that they camp by themselves. "Are you able to keep the fire pushed together if we do as you say?" the father asked his son. "Yes, I will keep the fire pushed together," the son promised. "Well, start off in the direction you want to go," the father said. The young man started off and left a big pile of wood as a sign of the place where they were to camp. "Why do not you look after things? You said you would keep the fire pushed together. What is the matter?" his father said. "You said you would push the fire together. You do not act like a man. My children would be fed at the cache and now, because you talked that way, I fear they will die," the old man said. The young man took the snares and set two for moose. Before long the snares made a noise and two moose had been caught. The old man moved the camp to them. "Father, I am going ahead where the other people are," the young man said. "Do not go," his father said, but the boy insisted he would go there.

He started off and came where the other people were. They scolded him because of a woman. Soon after that he went back to his father's camp. The old man was on ahead. A woman had given birth to a child of which he was the father. "My grandchild," the woman said, "I wonder whose it is?" "I guess it is that young man's child," someone said. The old man's wife asked if it was a boy. "Yes, it is a boy," they told her. "Go after him quickly," the old woman said. "I will raise it. I have one child and this one will be his partner and they will hunt together."

TORTURING THE ENEMY.

A man was walking by himself. A Cree, too, was walking from the opposite direction. When they met they sat down by each other and the Cree said, "Brother-in-law, how far away is your camp? My camp is close by." "My camp is a long distance away," the Beaver replied. "While you are waiting for me, break open this beaver house. We will come to you tomorrow morning," the Cree said. While the Beaver was waiting for him he made a fence and beat down the snow, making a trail. Then while he was making the fence several Cree came there.

The old man, the Beaver, was sitting by the others cutting a pole in two. He tried in vain. "Brother-in-law, break it for me," he said. Just as soon as he broke it he stabbed him and killed him. Among those who were coming up was the father of the young man who was stabbed. As soon as he heard his son scream they all began to rush forward. As they were rushing along the Beaver shot them with arrows. He killed them all not leaving a single one alive. The mother of the Cree was coming along. "I killed your sons here," he said. "You are not coming here for nothing." He made a slave of her causing her to suffer terribly. He used to burn her skin. He killed that old woman too. Afterward he took [as slaves] those who had lived with them.

The old man asked if they knew of any people living close by. He was told there were two old blind men who had enough young men to make a war party. "We will go after them," the old man said. When they came there they saw the winter trail in the snow. "Wait for me here and be making camp while I go there," the leader said.

He went to the two blind Cree men, took them by the hair and burned their faces in the fire. "I shall stay here in this condition until my young men get back," one of the old men said. The other old man said the same thing, "I, too, shall remain in the same condition." Then one of the young men was coming home and the Beaver man ran after him and killed him. He really killed them all. There were very many men but he himself alone killed them all. They say that Beaver was a powerful man.

TWO BROTHERS ESCAPE THE ENEMY BY FLIGHT.

Once there were two brothers who were camping together. They were not having good dreams. "We better not do as we are doing," one of them said. "We are doing all right here," the other replied. "We will roast the beaver and eat it, and remain here until the snow melts." The older brother looked around and then said to his younger brother, "You say we are in a good place. What is that over there?" He looked and saw there were Cree in the direction they were going. "What shall we do?" asked the older brother. "I will carry the beaver," he said. "We will run away," said the older one. "Never mind the beaver, throw it away," the younger one said. "Well, if we get out of this alive it will be hard for us to get along without meat. I will carry it over there," the older brother said.

They ran off and the Cree chased them. They could not get away from the Cree who came up to them and were about to kill them. The younger brother was usually able to run very fast but he could not run like that now. "He will be killed; he is clumsy with fright," the older brother said to himself. His legs were pounding together with fear. Then he ran like a moose and got some distance from the Cree. "You carry this beaver," the older brother said. "Never mind it, we will throw it away," the younger brother replied. "Do not do that. Carry it," he insisted. Then he consented to carry it and they ran away from the Cree nevertheless.

After they had been running three nights they made a camp and slept. They roasted the beaver and ate it. After that they lived happily again. They were very tired but after they had eaten they were all right again.

A MAN AND HIS WIFE ARE SAVED BY LIGHTNING.

Some people came by who were not known. They took a fancy to a young married man and invited him to accompany them. He refused emphatically but when they insisted he went away with them. They were people who lived a long way off and he went with them a great distance to their country.

When they got there the young man began to starve. There was nothing he could do. He became weak. There was no meat and they gave him nothing to eat. He got so weak he walked with difficulty. "Well, never mind," they said, "he will die. We will cross the large lake. The wind is very strong and cold against a man's face. Let the cold kill him." "We will take his wife," they were saying to themselves. "Do not stay here," they told her, "Go away. Do not wait for him. If you wait for him, you too will die." They gave the man a piece of wood about four inches long. He did not take it but gave it to his wife. "If something happens suddenly do not let go of it," he said to her. The woman moved her tipi.

The people could still be seen on the lake when the lightning struck among them. Not a flake of snow was left. There were many of the people and of them not one dark spot was left. The lightning had killed them all. There was just one dark speck out on the ice. The young man hurried out to see what it was. It was his wife and she was breathing a little. He took her back to his camp. There seemed to be no hope of their living, for their country was far away. "Although things are as they are, we will start back and go as far as we can before we die," he said. They started back with nothing but their bare hands. With nothing to live on they were helpless. They were beginning to die of starvation when they suddenly came to an old beaver house. "I will set a net in the water for beaver," he said to himself. "Make a fire and wait some place nearby for me," he told his wife. He caught two beaver. They started back and traveled far with this food they had secured. When the beaver meat was gone and they were starving again they came where a large bear was lying. With that for food they came back until they reached their own land where there were small birds which served for food until they got back home. It was hard for them but they lived through it. Those people were like human beings but their only food was the flesh of foxes.¹ The others were not accustomed to foxes and the flesh was tough for them.

A BEAVER KILLS AN ENTIRE BAND OF CREE.²

There was a large camp of Indians at Hay Lake where they were spending the winter living on fish. A young married man, not caring for fish, was camping by himself at some distance, living on rabbit. Fearing an attack, he took the precaution of keeping a trail broken between his camp and the large camp on the lake. He did this by going over it with his snowshoes once a month.

One morning while he was visiting his snares as usual his wife was sitting in the tipi lacing a pair of snowshoes. Her little boy who was just beginning to talk was playing beside her. The child looked into the dish of water in which the hide for lacing the snowshoes was being dampened, and said to the mother, "Whose face is that in the water?" The mother looked in the vessel and saw the reflection of the face of an enemy looking in over the door. Feeling sure there would be no attack in the daytime, the woman made no sign and went on rapidly with her work. The spy withdrew.

When her husband came home she asked him why he had peeked in over the door. Is not this your own tipi?" she asked him. The husband asked her if she was sure someone had done that. "Yes," she said, "even the child noticed him. His track must be outside." "I have been expecting this," the man replied. "That is why I kept the trail to the large camp open. That is why I made the snowshoes, I wanted them to fight with. Hurry and finish lacing them by night, if you can. When it is dark so they cannot see you, you must take the child and go to the main camp. I will stay here and fight them alone. If we all go together to the big camp the enemy will follow and kill a good many."

By hurrying, the woman finished lacing the snowshoes by dusk and, taking the child, went to the large camp, leaving her husband alone. Near morning, before the usual time of attacking, the man built a good fire and went out of the tipi taking his snowshoes and weapons. He sat down in the brush nearby to watch. At daybreak, a large party of the enemy attacked with much shouting. They surrounded the tipi and stabbed it through and through. Not hearing anyone, a man went in and called to those on the outside, "There is no one here." "Yes there is," the man called from his hiding place. He started to run on his large snowshoes which kept him on the surface of the snow. Making use of his medicine, he called for a south wind. It came and the party pursuing him began to sweat and drop off their clothes. When he had led them a long ways from their clothes he called for a north wind. It came, and the sweating enemy turned to go back for their abandoned clothing. On their way back they huddled around fires trying to keep warm. The man now turned on them and speared them, half frozen by their fires and killed them all.

He traveled all day to reach the large camp, fearing for the safety of his wife and child. As he approached the camp he heard the head man wailing for his supposed death. "No," the man said, "I am not dead this time. I killed them all."

A MAN SAVES HIS PARENTS-IN-LAW FROM STARVING.

One time the people were starving and were traveling where there was a cache. One old woman was so hungry she sat down. Her son-in-law on ahead knew that his mother-in-law had sat down. His brother was far away. "Sit here and wait for me," he said to her. "If I go in the timber, and if you hear something do not pay any attention to it." Her son-in-law made a noise by breaking a stick, but she did not go to him. She could almost see her son-in-law, who was making a noise with his bowstring. He had killed two cow moose.

His father-in-law had been sitting over there with his wife. The son-in-law went again to bring the meat. His father-in-law who had killed a bear, had also gone for the meat. They met each other there and traveled on happily.

Because the other people had deserted them, they did not follow after them. They lived happily where they were, using the meat of the animals which they had killed for food. Some time after, they followed the remainder of the band, and came to the cache. The meat was gone. These first comers moved away again, but they did not succeed in killing anything and they nearly died of starvation. Those who came last had meat, but they did not share with those who came first to the cache.

A MAN, FRIGHTENED BY HIS WIFE, KILLS SWIMMING CARIBOU.

A man and his wife were sitting where the caribou cross the lake. It looked as if they would starve to death. There were no caribou. Then suddenly there were two caribou swimming across. He had a canoe there into which he went and started to paddle toward the caribou. He did not paddle long and did not kill them, but turned around and started to paddle back. "What is the matter?" his wife said to herself. She was very hungry. He was paddling close to her. "What is the matter? We were about to die before; now we cannot live," the woman was thinking. The deer were swimming over there in the middle of the lake. The man was paddling close and she spread her legs toward him. He was afraid and paddled away from her. He really left her and killed the caribou, and they blew ashore where the woman was sitting. The woman sat there, but the man was gone; he was far away. "I think he deserted me," she said to herself. She did not know where the people were and feared she would die. Then he came back to her.

AN ENTIRE BAND IS KILLED BY THE CREE.

A band of Indians were traveling in a starving condition. They were hastening frantically towards a fish lake. "We shall get there tomorrow," they were saying. They came to the lake the next evening only to find the Cree there. When they came to an open place each party saw the other. There was nothing they could do so they began to kill each other. There were many of the Cree and they were stronger than the Beaver. The Beaver were not able to kill a single one of the Cree but were themselves killed to a man. Then the women and children came along behind and the Cree killed them all. They were slaughtered to the last one.

A CREE, CAUGHT ALONE, IS KILLED BY THE BEAVER.

Some young men were out in the caribou country camping and snaring game. They visited their snares frequently. Four young men were out in the morning to look after the snares. When they were coming back they saw one man had passed along wearing round snowshoes. "This must be a Cree and we will kill him," they said. They hurried after him. He was going toward their camp. He came out on a lake and was walking along ahead. The young men ran after him and caught hold of him. "Tell us what you are going after. Did you ever kill people?" they asked him. "Yes, I have killed people but they weren't like people. They were bad people. Those are the only ones I have killed," he replied. He meant the friends of these young men. They stabbed him through the body and put the body in the water. Those young men killed him.

A MAN SCARES OFF THE CREE WITH A GUN.

They were living there when one of them felt there was something wrong. He asked the people to keep good watch. The next morning the Cree attacked them. This old man had one gun and four bullets. His tipi was the last one in the row. When the Cree were coming there he fired the gun. He had planned what he would do. He killed the Cree who was running ahead and the others ran back. The Cree thought he had a gun and were afraid. That was a tough old man. They say he wintered on his flesh.

The old man had found the gun with four bullets lying beside it at a place where some people had been killed. He had kept it without firing it and now he killed a man with it. Then they say the old man had the use of it.

THE BEAVER, THEIR ARROWS HAVING BEEN USED ON BUFFALO, ARE KILLED BY THE CREE.

The man went out after buffalo and killed them all. A woman told them she had seen some Cree. The men told her she was lying. They had expended all their arrows on the buffalo and had only their bare hands to fight with. The Cree came upon them and killed many of them. The Beaver killed only five of the Cree.

A MAN AND HIS WIFE ALONE ESCAPE THE CREE.

At first the people were starving. One man was nearly starved. They were hurrying to the lake for fish. "We will get to the fish by tomorrow," they said. When they came down to the lake the Cree were there and killed them all except the miserable man. He was the only one that survived. He had started back after his wife and met her when she was nearly to the lake. He called to her to come to him. She went there and they cleared away the snow and lay down and slept four days without a fire. When the sun rose they got up and the man started over to the lake. Out on it was a black spot which proved to be the bodies of the people who had been killed. Not one of the Beaver was alive.

A WOMAN HIDES BEAR MEAT FROM HER STARVING HUSBAND.

Once a band of Indians were traveling about starving. There was one man who was a poor hunter and no one fed him. Then the man's wife found a bear and hid it from the others. The man did not know about it either. He had been some distance ahead and returned to find his wife gone. He wondered what was the matter and turned back to look for her. When he came back close he stood listening, for he feared the Cree were about. He heard his children asking for fat. "Why do the children say that?" he said to himself. When he came home nothing but bear fat was to be seen. He was frightened. The woman was hiding it. "Since you have hidden it for a short time, you must continue to hide well," he said. They were with the people and had eaten up a bear without their knowing it. They had not secured fish and the children were about to die of starvation, yet she had hidden the bear. The woman was not feeding that man. They had been many places for fish, but they had not killed any when suddenly they began to kill fish. He lived well with the people. They all lived until the snow melted.

STARVING BEAVER VISIT THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.¹

Many Beaver Indians were traveling together. It was winter and the snow was deep. They had no knives, axes, or guns. They made snowshoes with stones and beaver teeth for tools. They were having a hard time and dying of starvation. They kept dying until only three men were alive who set out to find other people. They were traveling along and were in a bad way for food when they killed a porcupine. Having eaten that, they slept, and one of them dreamed of the place where people were living. The next morning they started in that direction, and continued until they came to the Rocky Mountains which they climbed. They were traveling there with great difficulty, when suddenly they saw a fire. They came to the people who had the fire, and found them well supplied with meat. Those three men were saved. Then when summer came again, they came back in this direction to their own country.

FOURNIER'S FAMILY ESCAPE STARVATION.¹

After that I was married and had children. The oldest one was beginning to kill moose when I moved my camp to a distant place, where there proved to be no moose. The lack of food was very pressing, and for a month there was not even a porcupine. When the people had become weak, I suddenly killed a moose, but it was quickly eaten up. Then I moved where there used to be fish. Again, I was so weak I could not walk, when my son killed a young moose. With that for food I went on again and camped where the fish were. The band killed many fish and were saved.

THE ESCAPE OF THE BROTHERS FROM THE BEAVER LODGE.

There were two young brothers who went in under a beaver lodge. They were waiting there listening to detect the beaver. While they were there, a party of Cree came and killed the people at the camp. The young men did not find it out, but the Cree saw them and came to the hole which they had cut in the beaver lodge and brought a quantity of dry wood which they pushed in and set on fire. The men inside were in great distress, and could hardly breathe on account of smoke. They were about to die and there was nothing they could do to help themselves. They plunged into the water, for they knew that down stream there was a hole which had been cut through the ice. The older brother succeeded in reaching the hole and came out. I suppose he did not do it without some reason.² His younger brother was behind him, for the older brother had said, "Keep right behind me." He felt for his brother and caught him by the foot just as he was passing the opening. They both got out safely and went away and hid. The clothes they had on, being wet, froze. They were nearly frozen to death, but escaped.

² Interpolated by the narrator to explain that the man had supernatural help in escaping.

There were no white people here at that time. They had a hard time because of the Cree who were always killing them. This happened when they had breechcloths of skin.

THE KILLING OF THE CHILDREN AVENGED.

The men were away after buffalo and their wives were moving the camp along after them. There was one woman living with them. "When you were named Wind-crossing-each-other, you used to say they (the Cree) are coming after us." "Yes," she said.

This woman (?) who was coming along behind them turned off on another road. She made a road far from that place, not stopping to sleep until it was daylight. When one could see, the young buffaloes were coming from way over there. They drank up all the water. All the children were saying, "Mother, father, here is mother's camp." Now strange people had killed all the children. All the children had followed her along the upper road. She had put them in a hole there.

An old woman ran from there to where the men were killing the buffalo and said, "Come, our children have all been killed. The men started running on the snow without their moccasins. They were crying because their children were all killed. There was one boy, the old woman's son, who did not care. "Do as you please," he told them. "I will come in the morning." He did not care, he simply pulled the meat out of his mouth. When it was nearly daylight he started. The others were lying on the ground with cramps. He went after the others. They were crying because their children had been killed. He cut off the ears of some of them and let them suffer still living. He made them like the rest of his relatives. "Let them suffer," he said and so he had revenge.¹

THE KILLING OF THE WOMEN AVENGED.

The men were away after buffalo; only the women were sitting around the camp when the Cree came and killed them all. There were no men ¹ Both the text and the interpretation were so poorly done that the narrative is hardly intelligible.

there. One old woman went where the men were and told them. The men went back where the women were, but the Cree were gone. The men started after them, and when they overtook them, they killed them all. They did not leave one alive because they had killed their wives.

A MAN FINDS BEAVER IN SMALL PLACES.

One man went to get beaver. "I should be able to kill beaver even in very small places," he said to himself. He went back and asked someone to go with him after beaver and muskrats. He said they could go behind and drive the muskrats ahead so they might kill them in a small beaver place and eat them all up. They went there and started after them and the muskrats ran off ahead of them. When he came back there again the men were sitting at the small beaver place. "We will eat it all up," he said. "We will make a hole under his food and go in there. Far up there they came to the end. They looked for him there but he was not to be found. Then one man went into a minkskin and looked for him. Then he found him and started after him. There at the end he pushed the wood out. He went home again.

PUTTING THE ENEMY TO SLEEP BY MAGIC.

Two men started out to kill people. As they were going along the road they saw a large number of people sitting down. The two men were not themselves seen. "Well, let us get away from them," said the elder brother, and they turned back. "Let us shoot them anyway," said the younger brother. "There are too many people, we will get caught," the older one insisted. "Let us shoot them anyway," the younger brother repeated and pointed his gun at them again. "We will get caught, there are too many of them," the older said again. "Well, turn back, if you are afraid," the younger one said, and they turned back. "I will fool them," one of them said. They put their weapons on the ground and went where the people from a distant country were sitting. When these people saw them they asked the young men what they were looking for. They replied that they were not out on a foolish errand but belonged to a large party who were traveling over by the river. They had gone off by themselves because they had been scolded. They proposed that four young men should return with them.

With these four men they came down to a very large river. After sunset they went to bed. One of the two young men tried to make them sleep by use of supernatural power. "One of them must be a powerful medicineman," he said to himself. After considerable time he caused them all to sleep. "Now," he said to his companion, and they killed them all with their knives.

A BLIND MAN'S ATTEMPT AT DEFENCE.

Once a party went to war. After they had been traveling some time they came where people were living. Thinking they had found the people they were seeking, they went into the tipi to visit them. An old man¹ sitting there asked them where they were going. They replied that they were just camping about. The old man, suspecting they were not telling the truth, asked a boy if there were children in the party. The boy told his grandfather, "No." "That is what I thought," the old man replied. "If they were camping about there would be children along."

Then those who were visiting him said, "Grandfather, what did you say? You talk a foreign language all the time." The old man sat with one foot on a knife with which he was intending to kill them. He was blind and did not know the knife was partly in sight. He reached behind his back and found some choice pieces of meat which he took out and roasted. He ate it by himself thinking that it was his last meal. He did not offer food to his guests.

Just then his son-in-law came back and entered the tipi. "I want a drink," he said to his wife. "I think the water is all gone." "You are not an old man, get it yourself," the old man said. He took up the vessel and went for the water. He had left his snowshoes and bow and arrows at some distance from the camp because he did not recognize the visitors and suspected they were only pretending to pay a visit. Instead of getting the water he went back where he had left his things, and taking them, started to run away. When the strangers saw him, they called to him, "What are you doing, my friend? You are running away and we are paying you a visit." The young man ran on until he was out of sight.

The old man was holding his foot on the knife so that the knife was projecting a little. "He will do something," the guests said in Cree. They folded up a blanket and put it between themselves and him, saying he would mistake it for a man. The old man did as they thought he would. He stabbed the blanket thinking it was a man. The men then ran out and began to shoot at him from a distance. They killed him. He too was shooting at the strangers and nearly killed a man although he could not see them. "If he had not been blind we would not have succeeded in killing him," they said to each other.

They killed all his wives. They were hunting for that man for his band was bad and had been annoying the Indians.

A BATTLE ON AN ISLAND.—First Version.

A large war party set out and traveled a long way looking for the enemy. They did not find them but came down to a large river. "We shall not find them," they said, among themselves. Someone sang some songs to locate them and said that the enemy were living not far downstream. The party went on and came where they could see them. The enemy were camped on an island with strong rapids surrounding it and they were difficult to attack. They had killed some people and were protecting themselves in this manner.

Toward evening one of the attacking party sang a song and caused all the enemy to sleep but one man who did not yield. Another of the party said he would try and sang a song against him, making him fall asleep. They attempted to cross to the island but the water was strong and they were being carried downstream with only their heads projecting above the water. One of the men then told the others to take hold of him and not to let go. Forming a chain, they succeeded in swimming across to the island. When they were ready to go to the enemy for the attack they saw some geese sitting there. One of the geese was about to make an outcry when one of the men told the goose not to do it. The goose obeyed. They rushed upon the enemy and killed them. There was one man who did not die although they stabbed him all over. He jumped in the water and disappeared. They did not find his body. It was difficult, but they succeeded in killing them all.

The people who were killed were not Cree but a people called Tsat'u.¹ They say those people had never seen white men.

A BATTLE ON AN ISLAND.—Second Version.¹

Once long ago there was a band of Indians who kept killing people. It was not known who they were or to what tribe they belonged. Finally there was a medicineman² who after being importuned for a long time said he knew where this band was to be found. A large company of young men agreed to go with this man and make war on the Indians. He led them toward the mountains across from Dunvegan. When the party came to the mountains, the medicineman said the people they sought were not far away and that they might see them tomorrow.

After they had slept he told them that the enemy were nearby. He said that soon a deer driven by the flies would run right into the party. They were to kill the deer and take only a little of the meat. A little beyond that they would come to an open place which they should not cross. Perhaps from there something could be seen. As had been foretold they met with the deer and then came to the bank of a river. They saw the camp on the opposite side with many canoes drawn up on the shore. There were many men in sight. The medicineman directed them to wait until morning to make the attack. One of the party made medicine to cause the enemy to sleep soundly. Early in the morning, they crossed the river. A flock of geese were about to make an outcry when the medicineman made a motion toward the ground and told them to keep still which they did. As they approached the camp, a dog started to bark and ran toward the camp. They all rushed forward thinking the camp would be alarmed by the dog. They ran so fast one of the young men overtook the dog and killed it with a knife. The medicine-making had been so effective no one was awakened by the barking of the dog. They killed them all but one man who ran and jumped in the river. As he jumped, one of the attacking party disemboweled him. Neither he nor his body was seen again.

A DOG-RIB KILLS SOME MEN.

One time a Dog-Rib who was making a camp ready for those who were coming said to some Beaver, "There are fox holes where you are." He said it because he thought he might kill them. The Beaver went in and began to shoot. They killed many of the Beaver but a few got away. They killed them as they ran. It was his younger brother who did this.

² Fournier, who was sitting by, said this man was his mother's grandfather.

It was on account of the Cree. They were very miserable on account of them. Before white people came they were hunting each other. The Cree were trying to kill the Beaver. Now they have made friends with each other and nothing happens now.

THE KILLING OF THE TRADER AT FORT ST. JOHN.—First Version.

A white man gave the young man orders but notwithstanding, he went back to his people. The trader was angry and killed the boy with medicine (poison). His friends knew this had happened and went to the post¹ and killed the trader. The young men attached to the post had gone for wood in a boat. The Beaver were lying in wait for them. When they returned and the white men stepped ashore they shot them and killed them all. The steersman jumped into the water. He came to the surface far out in the stream. They shot at him and killed him. They took the goods from the store and lived many years on them. When they were gone they lived with their bows and arrows. They remained in the woods and did not visit a white man's house because they were afraid. From that time they increased, living with their bows and arrows, not having gunpowder.

THE KILLING OF THE TRADER AT FORT ST. JOHN.—Second Version.

It seems that the white traders first had a trading post at Pine River. The Beaver Indians killed the man in charge of the post, and all his servants. After that these Indians kept away from white people, and were afraid to go near them thinking they would be killed. Some time after they built another post which has remained until the present time.

CHILDBIRTH CUSTOMS.

When a woman is going to have a baby, she goes outside to some out-of-the-way place and gives birth to a baby by a brush-sheltered fire. It makes no difference whether the weather be warm or cold. After the child is born she stays by herself a month without coming into the camp. She must not travel on the winter trail, but makes one for herself along one side of it.

¹ This refers to the trading post at Fort St. John, called by the Beaver gûtkwe, "Spruce House." The first post stood on the east side of North Pine River, near where it enters the Peace.

She is not permitted to cross a man's trail. She does not eat any part of the head of a moose. After one month has passed she goes back to her own tipi.

A DESCRIPTION OF PRIMITIVE LIFE.

Formerly, before white people were known, they were living in a miserable way. They were making their living with snares and bows and arrows. They used a piece of horn to chisel for beaver, and it was a very miserable way. There was no iron at that time, and the beaver chisels were made of moose horn. That they might see the beaver under the ice, they made shovels of wood to remove the snow. When they had no iron, they used beaver teeth¹. The one who made this world told us it would be that way. They made fire by rubbing two stones together with dry grass rubbed fine for tinder. They made their houses and firewood with their hands. They made knives by rubbing stones sharp, with which they cut the meat they ate.

They say that living that way the people were near starvation. They were close to dead people, living that way. When they had no meat in their bellies, they used to put pine brush under their belts. There was nothing inside of them, and the brush enabled them to breathe without bending.

When, at first, they were living with snares, they used to put trees in a row, leaving a passageway between. When the moose passed along there, they were caught in the snares. When they had no combs they made combs of pine-brush.

HUNTING EXPERIENCES.—Dunvegan Dialect.

I had been hunting all day without seeing a track when toward sunset I started toward some distant pines. Just at dusk I came near a bluff and there I saw a moose track. A strong wind was blowing. "I wish I had seen your track in the day time," I said to myself.

I started after the moose and when I was about to pass behind the pines I looked ahead and saw a moose standing by a tree. I came up to it, raised my gun and aimed it. I could not see the sights of the gun. My father had told me to put snow on the end of the gun when shooting at night. I did this and aimed low when I saw nothing and then high, gradually lowering the gun until it seemed to me right when I shot. The moose ran along one side of me. I looked for it again toward the west and again saw it standing. I reloaded the gun and again put snow on the end of the barrel. I raised the gun again until I thought it was aimed right and fired. The moose ran in the same direction again.

As I went after the moose again I saw something dark on the snow. "What is it?" I thought to myself and taking some of it up I put it in my mouth. It was blood and I thought I had killed the moose. I went where there was something dark under a tree. I took up a stick and stabbed it under its head. I had killed it.

II

We were making a road and carrying some traps we were going to set. My brother-in-law and my elder brother went on ahead while I set a trap. I came where my brother-in-law was sitting by a little creek. He was killing himself with laughter. I asked him why he was laughing and he told me to look. A marten and a weasel were fighting. Although the weasel is small, he is smart. We sat there watching them. Just as we decided to shoot and kill the marten they started to fight again. "Fight hard," my brother-in-law told them and they ran off. We killed nothing after all.

III

It happened once when I was a boy that I was after a bear. The bear chased me and when he came up to me my gun would not go off. I threw it away and fled empty handed. I pulled out my knife and ran under a leaning tree and jumped back over it. The bear did the same and we jumped toward each other. The bear struck out with his foreleg and I disemboweled him with the knife which was two-edged.

IV

I had a single-barreled gun when two dogs were barking in front of a grizzly's den. The bear ran out after the dogs but my gun would not go off. The cap came off. The bear chased me all about until I bit the cap together and then the gun went off. The bullet broke the bear's backbone.

V

I went with dogs after a moose in the early morning. The dogs barked at the moose which stood still and then ran after the dogs. It ran so close to me, it stepped on my snowshoes. It was so close I could hear its heart beat. I was holding the gun by its muzzle and I fired. The moose fell and I jumped off the snowshoe. Its leg was sticking through the snowshoe. I skinned the moose and went home to my tipi.

DISPERSION OF THE TRIBES.—Dunvegan Dialect.

A dog was seen by a woman to defile a quiver of arrows. She told the owner who said he would clean them, but his younger brother said if that happened to his arrows the one who did it would soon fall over (dead). The dog that did it was standing there and the man took his bow, shot the dog and killed it. The men then all got up and began fighting. Many were killed and the remainder fled, some in one direction and some in another.¹

¹ The narrator said this happened when the various tribes were separated at the beginning of the world.

INTRODUCTION.

The texts with a few exceptions were recorded during the summer of 1913 near Vermilion on Peace River, Alberta. Work was begun with the chief of the band, Ambroise, a man probably then past sixty. His father was part Chipewyan and he knew some Chipewyan tales. Those he told were, however, Beaver. He spoke rather distinctly and fluently but his diction had some noticeable peculiarities when compared with that of the other Beaver living in that neighborhood. John Bourassa served as interpreter. Except for language dealing with the less usual phases of Indian life, he has a good command of Beaver which he pronounces with some accent. Mr. Bourassa speaks Cree and French as well as Beaver and English. He tends to unlaut his long back vowels and to break the forward ones. Later, an attempt was made to secure texts from Ike, a man about seventy years of age who has a nervous affection of speech. His enunciation proving too difficult, his son-in-law Louisçon was employed. While he was a middle-aged man, he knew many myths and tales, and told them fluently but too rapidly for easy writing. As a result his narratives cannot be clearly translated in several instances. The interpreter employed was Alexander Cardinal, a part-blood Cree whose command of Beaver was somewhat limited. It is hoped, however, that these texts will furnish material for an exposition of the structure of the Beaver dialect to appear in this volume.

KEY TO SOUNDS.

- a as in father.
- e open as in met.
- i as in in.
- ī close as in pique.
- o open as in on; occurs rarely.
- ō close as in note.
- ū as in rule.
- û as in but.
- ā, ē, ĭ, ō, ū are a, e, ī, ō, and ū as described above, but nasalized.
- y as in yes.
- w as in will.
- m as in met.
- n as in net.
- ñ as ng in sing.
- l as in let.
- ł a surd lateral spirant; the breath escapes between the teeth and the back of the tongue.
- l' the last described sound with glottal affection.
- z sonant as in lizard.
- s surd, nearly as in sit but sometimes approaching c.
- j sonant as z in azure.
- c as sh in shall.
- γ a sonant palatal spirant similar to the sound of g in Tage as spoken in Northern Germany. In a few instances it may have been confused with g.
- x a surd palatal spirant as ch in German nach.
- h as in hit.
- b as in bit; rare, probably connected with m.
- d an intermediately sonant dental stop; that is, sonant in the latter portion only.
- t a very strongly aspirated surd dental stop.
- t' a glottally affected surd dental stop.
- g a sonant palatal stop. It frequently occurs in the texts but is found in few separate etymological elements. In some cases it may have been misheard for either γ or ġ.
- ġ intermediately sonant palatal stop.
- k a strongly aspirated surd palatal stop.
- k' a glottally affected surd palatal stop.
- dz, dj; ts, tc; and ts', tc' are sonant, surd, and glottally affected affricatives akin in sound to a combination of the simple sounds composing them.
- ' is used to denote especial aspiration after a vowel.
- ˈ is used for the glottal stop.

INTRODUCTION.

Of all the Athapascan languages of the north that of the Beaver Indians has been most neglected. Father Petitot was not among them himself nor did he include material from them in his great work on the northern Athapascan. Father Morice's personal contact with the Indians has been chiefly west of the Rocky Mountains and therefore he has not been able to furnish examples from the language of the Beaver.

The text material on which the following grammatical sketch is based is somewhat wanting both in extent and quality, but it is, however, sufficient to furnish the main characteristics of the Beaver dialect, both as to phonetics and morphology. While the lexical material is rather limited it is probable that the more important elements forming the nouns and verbs are represented.

Both the order and the form of treatment employed for the Chipewyan has in the main been retained to facilitate comparison. Citations of comparative material in special instances have been made to Chipewyan, Hupa, Kato, Jicarilla, and Navajo. When the citation has the form of double numerals, the works referred to are the published texts of these languages,¹ and the references are to the pages and lines. The citations with single numerals on the other hand refer to the grammatical sketches of the various languages.² There is much additional material for comparison in Petitot's large comparative grammar³ and in Father Morice's various papers.⁴

PHONETICS.

The dialect of the Beaver stands off distinctly from the other Athapascan languages of the Mackenzie river drainage in the matter of one phonetic shift. In Beaver the sibilants s and z are found where in Chipewyan and the related dialects interdental continuants, θ and ð, appear. Since the sibilants appear to be the original sounds, being found in all other localities, there is this much evidence of Beaver relationship across the Rocky mountains rather than toward the north and east.

A very interesting oscillation takes place in Athapascan languages between the bilabial nasal m and a bilabial stop b. As far as material now at hand indicates the distribution is not one of geographical grouping. In Beaver both m and b appear. This is also true of Navajo but in that case m can usually be explained by the presence of n in close proximity which seems to have produced a nasal assimilation. It has not been possible to explain all such occurrences of m in Beaver. There is good reason to suppose that b is not original in Athapascan since both aspirated and glottally affected stops found in the other series are wanting in this. The original Athapascan sound probably was a continuant, either a nasal m, or a bilabial spirant such as is found among the Tena on the Yukon.

In many cases final n has produced a nasalization of the preceding vowel and has then disappeared. In the actual recording of the texts the same words or word parts appear sometimes with the final n, at other times with a final nasal vowel, and in still other instances with an oral vowel, both the nasalization and the nasal stop being lacking. It seems probable that the latter instances have resulted from faulty hearing during the transcription.

The vowel a when followed by n tends to become o. Comparison with other Athapascan dialects indicates that a was probably the original vowel. There are also a number of instances of e becoming i upon nasalization.

Considerable confusion exists in the texts between a and e. This may be due in some instances to a coloring of a in certain settings. For instance a demonstrative has been recorded as: a yī, ai yī, and e yī. The following y may have influenced the quality of the a in this instance. In general it is believed however that differences in vowel quality are traceable in some way to accent as will be seen below (page 507). There are regular shifts in verbal stems which seem only explainable as being due to accent, similar apparently to Indo-Germanic ablaut. All the variations in recording have been scrupulously maintained in the published text to make certain that any evidence of this sort should be preserved.

MORPHOLOGY.

NOUNS.

The Athapaskan nouns fall into a number of classes, some of which appear to belong to an old period and are common to most of the dialects. These are the monosyllabic nouns and nouns with prefixes which are in themselves mostly monosyllabic. Other classes which consist of compounds have many nouns of more recent derivation.

NOUNS WITH SUFFIXES.

A variety of suffixes are used with nouns. Some of these merely limit the nouns in a temporary manner as inflections by indicating number, gender, mode or tense; others are word forming suffixes making nouns of other parts of speech or of other nouns. Several of the suffixes are also used with verbs, especially those expressing mode and tense.

While nouns in general are singular or plural without any change in form, the names of classes of individuals, such as age classes, have a plural suffix.

-gū, -gū, -gō.

ec ke gō, young men, 377, 9.

xō nū, my brothers, 329, 7.

me tc'il lū, his younger brothers, 340, 12, 15.

lū dūγ γū, brothers, 301, 1.

-ye, may possibly be a plural suffix.

me ġe ye, co-husbands, 334, 14.

mūt tce yī', his father-in-law, 316, 5.

-ke, occurring but once, seems to be a plural suffix.

mūt tū e ke, his daughters, 309, 14.

-tc'e, suffix denoting feminine gender.

xat da tc'e, cow moose, 375, 8.

There are a few limiting and qualifying suffixes, adjective in nature but not in form.

-tī, -tī, superlative suffix, very.

da tcin tī γa, by the large tree, 341, 6.

dūn ne tī, headman, 365, 8.

dūn nai tī, headman, 321, 13.

-zē, -ze, zī, real, primitive as opposed to imaginary or introduced.

dūn ne zē, Beaver (Indian), 379, 14; 338, 17; 339, 15; dūn ne, person.

l̥i zī^ε, proper dog, 351, 10.

dūn ne zī^ε, Beaver, 341, 8.

-tcōk', augmentative suffix, large.

xa k'ī tcōk', large buffalo, 308, 15.

tū tcōk', ocean, 333, 10; tū, lake, body of water.

tse' tcōk', large stones, 354, 9.

l̥in tcōk' ḡa, beside a horse, 396, 7; l̥in, a pet, domestic animal.

A corresponding diminutive was not recognized in Beaver but an interpreter who rendered xa k'a, young buffalo, said it was phonetically different from xa k'ī^ε, buffalo, indicating that a suffix has disappeared by contraction.

The two words listed below appear to begin with me-, by means of, with. It is probably accidental that more instances of names of instruments so constructed do not occur.

There are several modo-temporal suffixes frequently used with nouns.

-ī' ī, denotes that the object has actually ceased to exist or that the particular phase mentioned has terminated.

ya je ī' ī, young one, 322, 2.

me kwā ī' ī, his camp had been, 329, 10.

ḡūt dje' ī' ī, geese that were, 389, 3.

dūn ne ī' ī, man, 338, 14; 342, 15.

tca^ε ī' ī, beaver that was, 372, 14.

kō la ī' ī, old man had been, 349, 9.

-e cī, a modal suffix of present indicative force with an implied statement on the authority of the speaker.

ne jī ne e cī, your songs, 343, 11.

nō dūḡ ḡa e cī, your brother you say, 302, 17.

xūt da' e cī, moose it was, 341, 10.

tc'it dū 'a cī, children, 382, 13.

-cōn, -cō, a modo-temporal suffix indicating a degree of doubt as to the statement of possession or relation implied in the composite substantive.

ma tc'ī yū 'e cō, her husband, 356, 10.

-le', -la, a suffix probably identical with the verbal stem, to be.

'at t'ō le', summer, "leaves are," 381, 6.

a tcū ne la, stranger (is), 308, 2.

-lō, a suffix common in verbs is used to designate an act or fact as discovered from evidence observed.

me tcwē lō, his boy, 368, 16.

xa k'ī lō, buffalo, 317, 6.

Locative suffixes in some cases seem to form new nouns rather than transform substantives into temporary adverbial expressions.

da tcūn ta, timber, forest.

dūn ne ta, among the people, 317, 9; 339, 11.

In one or two cases it is difficult to decide whether the second element of certain combinations is to be considered a noun or a locative suffix.

-lo, -lō, the end.

e dō wō lō, the end, 318, 9.

'ī cī ne lō', end of stump, 304, 18.

'ī cī ne lō', on the end of a stump, 304, 16.

yet ye lō, on the ends of his horns, 308, 16.

ma lō, its end, 377, 8.

dī ġe lō, land, 373, 5.

dī ġe xō lō dō', this world's end, 355, 5.

tca' tca lū, at the end of the beaver meat, 374, 13.

tcez ō lō', end of gun, 393, 10.

-la', end.

γūt la', pine brush, 368, 3.

-mai', border, edge.

ma mai', its shore, 301, 3.

da t'ōl mai, her nest's edge, 306, 6. (Fig. 97.)

tū mai, shore, 333, 11.

kōn mai', camp border, 363, 6.

A suffix -hī, probably in origin an enclitic article, makes a noun of an adjective.

xais l'a hī, the youngest, 326, 5.

de gac ī, the black, 393, 18.

-ne, a suffix meaning person used with demonstrative pronouns and adverbs.

a tca t'ī ne, other people, 362, 14.

et dū lī ne, nobody, 362, 8.

et ts'ūn ne, a stranger, 347, 2.

ta de na, three persons, 326, 4.

kū γain del 'ī ne, those who had come in, 386, 9.

kwōn' t'e ne, that kind of person, 350, 12.

COMPOUND NOUNS.

The nouns compounded with other nouns fall into several categories.

The first noun names the possessor of the second. Compounds of this sort are quite numerous in Beaver. The Athapascan languages of the Pacific Coast and the south generally employ a pronoun with the second element, rendering it less immediately dependent on the first element.

an ne kwē, mothers camp, 382, 14.

xat da de' e', with moose horn, 366, 10.

xat da tsī', moosehead, 391, 10.

xa k'ai zis, buffalo skin, 330, 3.

gō tsī' γa', their head hair, 371, 6.

The first noun qualifies the second by describing it, the idea of possession being slight or entirely wanting.

a ta xa t'e 'ī, store, 390, 13.

a ta xa t'e ī kwē, trading house, 390, 12.

e la tūn ne, its hand trail, 342, 11.

e zis nī ba lī, skin tents, 337, 14.

lūt sa gā, Smoky river.

de cīn ne za γa, Cree language, 387, 7.

dūn nī nī' t'c'ī, man's face wind, 373, 10.

- tsa γa, beaver teeth, 391, 15.
 tsī djic, stone mittens, 309, 9.
 tsī^ε kwē, Ft. Vermilion, "Red paint fort."
 tca^ε i le^ε, beaver dam, 301, 7.
 tca tū, beaver lake, 312, 8.
 ġa mīl, rabbit snares, 357, 11.
 ġūt kwē¹ pine house, 390, 12.
 ke Pūl, shoestring, 326, 7.

Descriptive substantives are formed by a noun which names the object followed by an adjective which describes and limits the noun.

- es da dlōk, grassy point, 309, 16.
 'es da tc'il e, a sharp point, 360, 8.
 dūn ne tc'ul la', bad man, 323, 3.
 tse k'as, perpendicular cliff, 359, 7.
 tse k'ac 'i 'i, cliff had been, 359, 9.

Certain complexes, treated and used as nouns, are really substantive clauses consisting of or containing a verb.

- e dai q', for a door, "it is across," 335, 17.
 ye dai 'q e, his door, 336, 3.
 γūt dai, animal, "that which is alive," 306, 5; 316, 15; 323, 2.
 mūg γūt dai^ε, his animals, 317, 12.
 xa γūt dai, that kind of a being, 322, 15.
 kwōn sūt dai, a married man, 366, 13.
 a za^ε se 'ō, (gun) cap, "its mouth it is on," 395, 3.
 in la tc'i ne 'ai, single barrel, "one projects" (?), 395, 1.
 ye wō 'a, his servants (?); "ones sent" (?), 308, 16.
 nez tō, a leaning tree, 394, 17.
 nō de 'ōtc di' crossing place; contains the verbal stem -'ōtc, to travel, used of animals only, 376, 1.
 ce dai ne 'q, my equal; has the appearance of a verb, 362, 8.
 tses di lī, rapid.

UNANALYZED NOUNS.

A large number of nouns consisting of two or more syllables and therefore presumably derived, do not readily yield to attempts to analyze them.

- a ma γai, slave, 370, 15.

PRONOUNS.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

There are personal pronouns for the first and second persons, singular and plural. The pronouns in the third person are also demonstrative. The personal pronouns have a longer form when used independently and occur also with a suffix -ne. The form with the possessive and postposition is shorter or weaker and has the vowel influenced by the sounds which follow it.

First person, singular.

- sai, I, 316, 9.
- sûn ne, I, 395, 13.
- cai, I, 325, 8.
- caɪ, I, 354, 15.
- caɪ, I, 356, 6.
- caɪ, m^e, 339, 18.
- caɪn, I, 328, 16.
- cain, mine, 370, 3.
- cûn ne, I, 394, 14.

ca-, sa-, se-, are the forms used as a possessive prefix and with postpositions making adverbial place and directional phrases.

- ca wō^ε, my teeth, 349, 9.
- ca^εze ʔi ʔi, my former nephew, 329, 3.
- ca zī, my son-in-law, 341, 4.
- sa bût', my belly, 310, 9.
- se ze, my uncle, 328, 12.
- ca yū e, under me, 317, 2.
- ca ġa, beside me, 394, 15.
- ca k'e, after me, 394, 15.
- ce tc'ɪ^ε, to me, 329, 17; 346, 3.
- ce ġa, to me, 336, 17.
- ce ke da, behind me, 381, 18.

A weakened form with the vowel û followed by a consonant determined by the following syllable occurs. In two cases where n follows, the vowel is probably nasalized.

- sîn la, my hands, 394, 16.
- cin wō^ε, my nose, Ft. St. J.

cin la ġwon ne t'a, in my finger nails, 344, 11.

cût day ɣa, my older brother, 394, 6.

cût tcū 'a, my boy, 327, 1.

cût da ɣa, for me, 301, 16; 371, 4.

Second person singular.

naï, you, 329, 17; 346, 5.

na nī, you, 362, 9; 373, 13.

nī, you, 327, 15.

nûn e, you, 329, 17; 330, 1.

nûn nai, you, 320, 12.

nûn ne, you, 320, 10.

ne mī le^ε, your snares, 357, 8.

na dûɣ ɣa, for you, 302, 15.

ne tc'i, from you, 336, 16.

ne k'e, after you, 338, 1.

nī ka ts'i, to you, 319, 18.

nī k'e, on you, 317, 17.

First person plural.

The expected form would be na hī or nū xī. The possessive form has na xa but other forms have the n missing.

na xa ġût dai, our animals, 314, 12.

na xûs ke ġe, our children, 310, 2.

a xa, for us, 328, 13; 343, 12.

a xat tc'i^ε, after us, 382, 9.

'a xa t'a, with us, 369, 11.

a xût ta, among us, 339, 12; 396, 2.

Second person plural.

As is the case in some other Athapascan languages the first and second persons of the plural are not differentiated in Beaver.

'a' xa, you, 341, 18.

na xa ġût dai, your animals, 313, 16; 318, 1.

a xain ka^ε, after you, 358, 16.

a xai dī', without you, 359, 2.

A reflexive pronoun occurs in Beaver, chiefly but not exclusively in the third person. The possessive forms are without the initial syllable a.

- a da ne*, himself, 364, 5.
at da, for herself, 391, 9.
at dai, himself, 304, 10. (Fig. 52.)
at dūn ne, he himself, 318, 16.
‘at dūn nī, he, 320, 17.
ūt dain, I myself, 314, 11.
ūt dain, himself, 313, 2.
ūt da ne’, he himself, 352, 9.
‘ūt dūn ne, himself, 338, 17; but himself, 359, 16.
da ‘a xa’, his own snowshoes, 333, 2.
da mī le’, his snare, 303, 15. (Fig. 27.)
da bī ze’, her knife, 305, 9. (Fig. 72.)
dī t’a, his feather, 324, 18.
dūt ū le, her line, 305, 14. (Fig. 94.)
dūt tca ī, his grandmother, 307, 12. (Fig. 131.)
dūt tcī zē’, her mitten, 311, 5.
dūk ke’, his own moccasins, 304, 13. (Fig. 60.)

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

For the third person demonstrative pronouns are generally employed. There is a complementary pair ye- and me- both with variations as to vowels due to following consonants. These seem to be used with some regularity in distinguishing the individuals involved in a narrative or dialogue. The principle on which the assignment of these is made is not apparent. It is not sex but may be rank.

- ma*, for him, 320, 8; to them, 329, 4.
me’, with, 347, 6; 392, 2.
me da γa, for him, 373, 12.
me tcq, between them, 387, 7.
me t’a, near them, 363, 9.
me ts’ī ū a, his wife, 308, 2. (Fig. 142.)
me ġa, for him, 349, 2.
mīn ka, after them, 317, 8.
mō’, for him, 335, 16.
mō tc’ī, to him, 333, 5.
mūt ū se’, its grease, 304, 2. (Fig. 31.)

mûť dũğ ġa, for him, 304, 1.

mûť ts'ĩ^ε, to it, 332, 9.

mũk ġa, to it, 394, 2.

Forms with b apparently varying phonetically with m appear.

ya, for him, 305, 9; 320, 8; to him, 304, 3. (Figs. 31, 78.)

ya ʔ^ε e, behind her, 314, 17.

ye ġa, its hair, 322, 14.

ye ta, among them, 307, 8. (Fig. 120.)

ye ts'ĩ^ε, toward him, 321, 1.

ye tc'a^ε, from it, 342, 12.

ye tc'ĩ^ε, to him, 346, 16.

ye tc'õ, from him, 372, 10.

ye ġa, beside him, 329, 16.

ye k'e, after him, 303, 19; 358, 7; 384, 10.

y^εq, to him, 324, 17.

yũk k'e, on her, 324, 2.

yũ ġa^ε, by them, 316, 2.

There is a frequently used demonstrative appearing in different forms, ai yĩ, a yĩ, e yĩ, 'e yĩ, 'ĩ e, ĩ. With a suffix an adverb or conjunction is formed, 'e jĩ 'e^ε, then, which occurs at the beginning of sentences in stories.

ai yĩ, she, 316, 6.

e yĩ ne, them, 370, 17.

'e^ε yĩ ne, those people, 350, 10.

'ĩ e ne, those, 350, 11.

ĩ ne^ε, those, 381, 6.

in ne, those, 309, 14.

Referring to the person or object nearer than others with which the comparison is made is dĩ.

dĩ, this, 301, 10; 304, 2; 317, 13; 331, 10. (Figs. 83, 108.)

dī ġī, this, 336, 11.

de yī 'e', with these, 391, 14.

gī-, gū-, (ġī-) is found rather infrequently as a demonstrative; its definite force as yet undetermined. It has perhaps been confused with gī-, gū-, the plural prefix.

ġī da ʔa, for him, 365, 13.

gī tc'i', to it, 362, 16.

gī k'e, after him, 335, 6.

gū tac e, his arrows, 319, 7.

PLURAL PREFIX.

A prefix ġū- (gū-) indicates the plural with reference to the limiting rather than the limited noun. In character it resembles the possessive forms of the personal pronouns.

gū ye t'ō e e cī, their arrows, 314, 3.

ġō ye', with them, 363, 4.

ġū ya, for them, 316, 10; 388, 14.

ġū ye tc'q', from them, 315, 10.

ġū ġa', with them, 316, 5.

ġū k'e, after them, 372, 5; 382, 8.

Compare the suffix -ġū used with certain nouns to form a plural, p. 418 above.

ARTICLES.

There is a proclitic ī, which seems to be a weak demonstrative or an article.

ī de cīn ne, the Cree, 331, 11.

ī dūn ne, the Beaver, 370, 3.

ī tse, stones, 392, 9.

ī tc'e ġe, that woman, 334, 16.

ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS.

There are a few rather descriptive pronouns which are listed below. One or two of these might have been considered demonstrative pronouns as well.

- ai ta, all, 302, 11.
- ai tai, all, 310, 11. (Fig. 190.)
- ai te, all, 317, 11; 318, 7; 324, 4.
- ai t'e, all, 331, 7.

 dɔ̃ t'e, why, 335, 5; 357, 7.
 dɔ̃ t'ɔ̃ t'e, what is the matter, 358, 4.

There are several interrogative prefixes and particles associated with verbs.

- ye-, prefixed to verbs, asks what.
 ye ōn tc'e, what is it, 393, 18.
 ye 'ɔn t'e, what is it, 371, 18.
 ye da' dī, what did you (plu.) say?
 me 'a lī', who is it, 310, 16. (Fig. 183.)
 me' a ce dī, who says it of me? 317, 18.
 da- with verbs inquires how or what.
 da 'ō wūn ne da, how did you live, 321, 4.
 da wac ta, what shall I do, 325, 1.
 da wōc t'e, how shall I live, 352, 16.

 da γūt dja, what has happened to, 327, 1.
 da dja ōn t'e, what is the matter, 380, 1.
 da dja 'qon t'e, what has happened, 365, 5.
 dī dō' dī a t'i, what does he mean, 307, 3.
 dī dq t'e, who is this, 361, 2.

gon-, kq-, loosely connected with the verb phonetically, marks the statement of the verb interrogative as to the fact. That is, it is used with direct questions where in English the order is reversed, or the inflection of the voice is changed.

- gon nī t'i', are you lying down?
 kq tī da a na t'i', are you alone?

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

The interrogative elements may express uncertainty although but few examples of this appear.

- da ūs t'e e le, something is going to happen, 378, 4.
 da ce wō te, how exactly, 351, 13.
 dac t'e, something is the matter with me, 378, 4.
 dōn t'a, whatever happens, 368, 15.
 dū' da, somewhere, 310, 10. (Fig. 178.)

NUMERALS.

The numerals of Athapascan as far as five are the same or phonetically related in practically all dialects. A considerable variety exists above five. In Beaver, six has "three" for its last component and eight has "four." They must mean then "twice three" and "twice four" or "another three" and "another four," although the first component is not recognizable. Nine appears to mean "nearly ten."

The suffixes used with the numeral may be locative in origin; -dj, and -djī at least seems to be, while -tc'e has not been even tentatively identified.

As obtained in series.

ōñ kī tc'e', two.

POSTPOSITIONS.

The usual number of postpositions which occur in other Athapascan dialects are found in Beaver and in almost every instance the identical particles. With the nouns and pronouns with which they are joined they are nearly equivalent to compound nouns or a possessive complex. Those have been listed here which have no independent substantive use.

VERBS.

The verbs of Athapascan form the great body of any of its dialects since they are practically complete sentences. Their structure has been discussed in various connections, the remarks concerning the Chipewyan verbs on page 126 of this volume in particular being especially applicable to Beaver also. The elements entering into the verbs are listed in the order in which they occur in the verbs themselves: prefixes of several ranks, stems, and suffixes.

ADVERBIAL PREFIXES.¹

‘a-, ‘ō, a prefix occurring with a limited number of stems in verbs meaning to be, to do, to say. Its meaning is uncertain but it may serve as an object or in the place of one.

- ai le, they are, 304, 11. (Fig. 53.)
 ‘a’i lō, he had, 378, 10.
 ‘a ye ‘i’, they did it, 383, 19.
 ‘a ye dī ‘a k’e he, the way he told him, 352, 1.
 ‘a yin la’, he caused, 303, 1. (Figs. 9, 109.)
 a wa’ dli, make, 314, 18.
 a wō’, was killing them, 375, 1.
 ‘a wōn dla’, he caused, 310, 1. (Fig. 163.)
 a wōn t’e, you are?, 336, 16.
 ‘a’ na wac dle, I will make, 349, 9.
 a na wō dja’, it happens again, 335, 8.
 a dī, he means, 307, 6. (Fig. 116.)
 ‘a dja’, it went, 305, 2. (Fig. 63.)
 at tēk’, (they) were crying, 359, 8.
 a t’i, he was, 303, 3; it was 317, 2. (Fig. 11.)
 a kū dī, he thought, 305, 1.
 ōn la’, he made, 338, 6; 370, 5; 346, 11.

da-, in a position before the second modal prefixes and following adverbial and objective prefixes. The meaning seems to be from, off, agreeing with dī-, on p. 477.

ca da γût tcīt, let go of me, 388, 17.

Cf. ca' tcūt, take hold of me, 388, 16.

SECOND MODAL PREFIXES.

Most if not all Athapascan dialects have verb forms containing obscure elements which seem to refer to the relative progress of the act. Of these, two seem to have recognized force. -n- (when alone -nī-) marks the completion of an act. It is found with adverbial prefixes which may be interpreted as necessitating completed action. -γ- seems to be employed of acts in progress. The third second modal -s-, is used of objects at rest, but also very regularly with certain prefixes and adverbial phrases such as de- and ye t'a.

nī-, n-, of completed action, also with certain adverbial prefixes.

nī ya, he came, 307, 8. (Fig. 120.)

nī P'a', came running, 303, 14. (Fig. 34.)

a yin la', he made him, 307, 2. (Fig. 109.)¹

yin tcūt, he caught it, 306, 11. (Fig. 102.)

γa-, γi-, γû-, of action progressing, and with certain adverbial prefixes.

γin del, they flew off, 310, 12. (Fig. 177.)

γin ti, lay, 374, 13.

a γûl le', they tried, 303, 13. (Fig. 33.)

na γût P'a, he ran, 387, 5.

na γût dal da', when he comes back, 305, 19. (Fig. 189.)

γût tinl, he was carrying, 364, 14.

s-, used of actions which are persistent such as remaining in position. It also occurs with certain prefixes and adverbs.

sût da', (he) sits, 302, 18. (Fig. 8.)

sût ti, lay, 308, 17.

da se tɔ, lay on them, 318, 8.

des ɣain, was carrying, 337, 7.

des t'atc, he cut open, 305, 12. (Fig. 12.)

ye t'a se deɬ, (near them) they came, 383, 17.

-ō-, -ū-, with a position preceding the subject prefix, or where it is lacking, the stem. It denotes the future.

da wō deɬ e cī, we will come, 370, 5.

xa dū' 'ac e cī, they will go out, 336, 1.

SUBJECTIVE PREFIXES.

First person singular -c-, -s-, a reduced form of the independent pronoun cai on page 428 above. In certain verbs the prefix does not occur.

Hupa and many other dialects have a vowel i or ē for all definite tenses.

'a wōc dle, I will make, 343, 15.

Cf. a wōn dla', he made.

a dūc le hī, I will make, 307, 3.

ɨ dū cū dī, I will drive them, 341, 7.

 zī a xai, I killed, 312, 12.
 γī wōn, I have killed, 377, 15.
 de ya, I came, 358, 16.

First person plural. The southern dialects of Athapascan have t, usually appended to a preceding syllable and standing immediately before the stem. But a few cases of -t have been noted in Beaver. A vowel; i, or ū or ō usually is found. The ū or ō may however be connected with the future and have no relation to the subject.

- a wō de cī, we will live, 322, 12.
 a na ū de he, we will surround (?), 318, 7.
 a tc'ul le, we will make, 318, 12.
 wō 'a cī, we will travel, 324, 12.
 Cf. γa ac, they traveled, 324, 13.
 me γait da γa, we will live, 324, 11.
 na wō de lī, we will come, 316, 8.
 Cf. na γa deł, they came, 316, 8.
 sūt dū lī dī, we will build a fire, 317, 17.
 γī zū xail, we would have killed him, 387, 13.
 γīt dle', we stayed, 338, 4.
 de sī ts'ī ĩ ĩ, we are sitting, 387, 4.
 de sī k'ōn, we built, 396, 1.
 dī t'es, we will roast, 371, 15.
 ts'a dū de lī, we will go, 317, 8.
 ts'ūz zū xail, let us kill him, 318, 16.
 ka wō t'a ze, we two will go to him, 309, 16.
 ka dō dī ē lī', we will go for, 309, 14.

Second person singular. -ne-, -nī-, -n-; if no syllable is available for the attachment of the n it stands as a separate syllable with its vowel, but where a syllable is present it usually is appended.

- a ne le', you make, 315, 14.
 ma ne t'es, cook for him, 320, 2.
 xa ne le, get out, 367, 6.

 yū nī le', jump on it, 306, 10. (Fig. 100.)
 Cf. yūn l'a he, he jumped on it, 306, 10. (Fig. 101.)
 mō nī ī nī da, you watch them, 309, 18.
 Cf. mō nī e dja', he watched them, 309, 18.

 ta na de l'a, he ran away, 387, 3.
 kū yin da, go in, 322, 3.
 kū dīn dī, you think, 347, 8.

Second person plural. -a'-; but this is probably due to a contraction with an initial vowel. The final aspiration is the chief characteristic occurring also in all known dialects of Athapasean.

- a wa' dlī, make, (plu. imperative), 314, 18.
 a na t'i, you are, (plu.), 305, 18.
 a' le', you make, 339, 5.
 wa' sīl, you will run along, 315, 20.
 ca' tetc, lie down, 359, 12.
 γī zū xail, you kill, 323, 3.
 da ts'a, are you sitting, 314, 8.
 Cf. de ts'i lō, they were sitting, 314, 8.
 ta na dīl, go (plu. imperative), 318, 2.
 ḡa 'ac ī, go (plu. imperative), 310, 8.

Third person. The third person as subject is not represented in the verb.

In the future which is often hortative a ū appears.

xa dū' 'ac e cī, they will go out, 336, 1.

Cf. xa de 'atc, they went out, 336, 3.

da yūn lī', they will be, 317, 12.

ū sits 'e, let him eat.

(kwa) a gūs sīt, I have eaten.

THIRD MODAL PREFIXES.

The term third modal prefix was employed in discussing certain Hupa verbal elements which stand immediately before the stem following the subjective prefix when one is present.

-dī, -t- (coming before a glottal stop -t'-), occurs with prefix na- meaning back or again. Since the prefix na- has the force of repetition this prefix containing the dental may mean from, the two together meaning back from.

na wō dī ġa, it was daylight again, 303, 8. (Fig. 15.)

na γūt dī dja, does he come back? 305, 19. (Fig. 96.)

na des t'atc, they started back, 302, 10.

na γūt de t'atc, they two went away from, 374, 10.

Cf. na γin t'atc, they two came, 374, 11.

Certain stems are invariably preceded by -dī.

ya tc'e dī bat, they were starving, 319, 11.

ye dī ts'ūk, heard him, 324, 10.

-n-, preceding the stem, but occurring only in the third person. For phonetic reasons it may have disappeared from the other persons. The meaning is unknown.

xa ya γin tī, he took it out, 361, 12.

STEMS.

The position of the stem is at or near the end of the complex. In its function it fairly well defines the nature of the act as will be observed in the following list in which the stem alone varies.

des 'atc, they two started, 327, 5.

des ya, he started, 346, 16.

des sō, it ran after, 395, 9.

Variations in Stems.

The Athapaskan dialects have striking variations in verb stems which have come to have, probably through association, distinctions in meaning. This characteristic is shared with the Tlingit, but whether through a common inheritance or by assimilation is as yet undecided. These variations in the stem are clearly of two distinct classes as to origin. Many of them are phonetic, resulting from accent of some sort; others are the result of suffixes especially of -i, and -n. The latter in Beaver has in some cases nasalized the preceding vowel and disappeared

- ke, -keḷ, to paddle about.
- tḷ, teḷ, tḷ, to move a living thing.

SUFFIXES.

The verbal elements following the stem for the most part fall into two classes: those which qualify the statement as to its actuality or certainty; and those which make of the verb a conditional, temporal, locative, or substantive clause. Intimately connected with the suffixes of the first class having a modal character are those of time since future acts cannot be viewed as certain.

-e'. The examples first listed below indicate a progressive force, the continuation of the act for sometime. The second list contains because or when in the translations which were the result of the impression that the suffix had the force of the postposition -e', with, (p. 453).

- a dja' e', it became, 349, 15.
- a γa wōn e', they were killing, 348, 5.
- 'a' da tc'e le' e', they were making, 392, 2.
- Cf. 'a' da tc'e le', they made, 392, 9.
- 'e' tcet da e', he was chiseling for, 366, 11.
- 'ō ce de tḷ e', he threw me away, 376, 14.
- ya γīt da e', they were living on, 374, 18.
- ye nī djit dī e, he was afraid of it, 342, 7.
- ye' ka da deḷ e', where are you going, 386, 3.
- na γat daiḷ e', you are traveling, 339, 4.
- nī 'ī e', he looked for, 331, 4.
- ce γūt da e', he was alive with me, 340, 4.
- γa des da e', they were moving, 375, 19.
- xain la e', he took out, 319, 7.
- xa la ga 'ī e', they were doing to each other, 348, 14.
- dḷ dī e', you were saying it, 369, 3.
- in tcūt e', when she took, 323, 6.
- q nī ya e', because he was frightened, 372, 9.
- yū dī e', because he thought, 330, 7.

wō' di l'a tse 'e', because it is shallow, 363, 18.

gī ya in tcūt 'e', because they gave him to eat, 373, 7.

-e, -ī. This suffix is associated in the same syllable with h which results from the final aspiration of the preceding syllable, or with the voiced form of a preceding consonant. In a large number of instances its use is with a future tense of a first person.

a dō dle he, we will make, 317, 13.

ye zū xai le', will kill him, 373, 10.

me' jūc xai le, I will kill him, 320, 3.

a na wac dle hī, I will make, 349, 10.

a dūc le hī, I will make, 307, 3.

ī dū cū dī, I will drive them, 341, 7.

q da' wō tel ī, we will throw it away, 372, 11.

ū' wū t'ū hī, let us shoot them, 385, 1.

-tc. Often repeated or customary acts usually require the verb to terminate in -tc. There are a number of stems which have -tc as a permanent final element.

en na wō di t'īntc, kept showing, 338, 13.

ī hwō' at l'etc, he runs back and forth, 307, 14. (Fig. 139.)

na date, he used to come, 335, 4.

na de dī k'ōñtc, it kept catching fire, 339, 8.

nō letc, you bring, 336, 17.

ke na gī date, he kept climbing up, 303, 9. (Fig. 16.)

'a na gūt de 'īnts, they used to renew themselves, 349, 13.

-l, -le. When the act is a sustained one a suffix -l is frequently employed.

With the addition of e, l becomes le.

ya γail, was carrying a load, 323, 11.

γa γal, he went, 305, 3. (Fig. 75.)

ya γai le, she carried him, 324, 3.

-e le, -e le', is used of habitual past acts.

e ze' xai e le ne, he kills anything, 366, 14.

ye tc'et de 'īntc e le, they look, 343, 13.

wō lī e le, would be, 386, 8.

- mī tc'e le e le, he used to be bad, 328, 11.
 na dī he le, he used to live, 309, 17.
 na dītc e le, used to be there, 309, 15.
 ōn letc a le', they used to be, 350, 3.

- ī' ī'. A temporal suffix with pluperfect force; it is used of actions or states which have terminated, and of things which have ceased to exist. Cf. Hupa, (p. 305.) -ne en.
 ac t'ī ī' ī', I used to be, 347, 17.
 a' γin la ī' ī', they had made, 368, 10.
 a tc'et t'ī ī' ī', they had been looking, 388, 2.
 e lī ī' ī', he was, 365, 5.
 'es kai ī' ī', used to be young man, 361, 17.
 ōñ ke t'ī ī' ī', there were two, 341, 13.
 ya γūt da ī' ī', he had kept it, 378, 15.
 ne' des del ī' ī', who went with you, 339, 3.
 nī γa de ī' ī' ī', they had passed out of sight, 366, 4.
 ze xai ī' ī', he had killed, 365, 3.
 γai yaī ī' ī', had been walking, 337, 12.
 gūc kel ī ī, I was paddling along, 355, 11.

- lq -e lq. A suffix of modal force used in statements the information for which is indirectly secured. The cause or preceding act is inferred, from the directly observed result.
 'a ī' lq, he had, 378, 10.
 a ye ī' lq, he did that, 360, 5; 368, 4.
 'a' wō dja' lq, had become, 359, 14.
 e lī lq, he was, 325, 8.
 ye ze xai lq, had killed him, 352, 14.
 wq lī lq, it is, 368, 5.
 a dī e lq, made the noise, 342, 12.
 e nū dlī e lq', I think, 387, 14.
 ōñ k'e t'e lq, were two, 341, 2.
 ye ze xai e lq, he killed him, 343, 8.

- e cī, -e cī, -cī. The essential import of the suffix seems to be the assertion of the speaker's belief in the truth of the statement or prediction.
 a wōc ī' e cī, I will do, 351, 14.
 a tc'et t'ī e cī, they are, 386, 8.

in da wō dū dla^e e cī, it will be hard, 372, 3.

ma γa won da^e e cī, you will treat him, 352, 10.

a wōn dai cī, you will live, 306, 17. (Fig. 107.)

tc'e des del e cīl, they started, 382, 16.

-cōn^e, -cōn, -cō^e, is used when the act or condition is assumed on evidence that is not conclusive.

ûl le cōn^e, I suppose it is, 356, 14.

na nī yīc a cō^e, might see you, 319, 6.

*t'a γūn nes sūt ō cōn^e, they died, 338, 11.

Cf. dī e dī cōn, where I wonder, 344, 5.

-e yōn, -e yō, -yō, occurs in most cases with verbs preceded by the negative particle ût dū and expresses the impossibility of accomplishing the act named in the verb. When not used with the negative it implies the necessity or imminence of the act.

le tcūn e yōn, might smell, 336, 16.

gū ye de lī he yōn, they were being carried downstream, 388, 16.

a la γai dle e yō, they could do anything to each other, 347, 5.

a sī dle hī e yō, we can do anything, 388, 9.

ac de e yō, I can do anything, 340, 14.

*a' tc'el le a jō, they could do anything, 318, 11.

e t'es ai yō, they were going to roast, 339, 7.

na des da ai yō, I can go back, 359, 2.

-la, is an interrogative suffix attached to a form which otherwise would be indicative.

wōn lī la, it is? 371, 1.

γin γai la, you are carrying? 343, 11.

gū ya γin k'in ta la, do you see them? 306, 10. (Fig. 111.)

gū ū djōn la, is it good? 306, 11. (Fig. 112.)

-ya, in the majority of cases seems to express purpose or intention although the translations do not always indicate this.

a yaç da ya, I will give, 376, 16.

et da wõt dī ya, because he knew it, 340, 14.

‘e’ gūs te ya, I am going to bet, 361, 10.

yet dī ya, after he said it, 340, 14.

ye tc’ûγ γī xûl ya, he struck him with it, 327, 18.

me yaît da ya, we will live, 324, 11.

ne ta ya, he would look, 322, 4.

se ze xai ya, he will kill me, 325, 4.

t’a na kī e ya, they will kill you, 340, 10.

t’a ya ne ts’it ī ya, they were about to die, 381, 14.

gū ye ze xai ya, they would kill them, 372, 6.

-xa, seemingly related to the preceding, x being the surd of γ. Purpose is plainly expressed. The interrogative element is the prefix da-.

da wōc dī xa, what can I do? 343, 1.

da γō dī xa, what will we do? 371, 19.

-e ka, -ka, of unknown meaning but in most instances the verbs are future with some purpose implied.

na wōc dle e ka, I will become again, 337, 8.

da gōc dī he ka, what am I to do, 320, 9.

as t’ī ka la, I will be, 303, 4.

ye ze xai ka, they would kill him, 331, 10.

dac t’ī ka, I will try myself, 347, 12.

t’a ne sī sūt wq ka, until we die, 374, 5.

When a condition is stated or implied the suffix is -de°, -e de°. The condition may relate to the future, but also to past as contrary to fact.

-de°, -e de°.

ye na γût dī e de°, if they know, 314, 3.

wōñ lī e de°, if he had had, 387, 13.

ne ne djit e de°, if you are afraid, 385, 5.

e na gût dī ût de°, if they know, 314, 6.

- e zī xaj et de, if you kill, 351, 14.
 ya γī dai de^ε, if they are alive, 314, 9.
 ne dū we et de^ε, if had been none, 357, 16.
 nī ya et de^ε, if I go, 375, 5.
 ze xaj et de, if I kill him, 364, 11.
 γai dai de^ε, if we live, 372, 2.
 dīn ts'ûk' et de^ε, if you hear, 375, 5.
 dī ts'a γût de^ε, when he heard it, 347, 3.
 Cf. mō na ī dac da^ε, when we came to them, 326, 15.
 kų dī de da^ε, when you think, 305, 10.

-ī he^ε, -e he^ε, is used to form causal clauses.

- 'e' ze' xai ī he^ε, because he killed it, 351, 10.
 et da na kainl ī he', because he was heavy, 342, 14.
 e t'es ī he^ε, because he was roasting, 360, 12.
 yū nī 'ets ī he, because he kicked him, 307, 18. (Fig. 132.)
 wōn lī' ī he^ε, because he was, 363, 13.
 mûk k'ût da lī dī ī he^ε, because he would be burned, 303, 12. (Fig. 18.)
 na tca' ī he^ε, because he was large, 343, 6.
 ne dū e ī he^ε, because none, 387, 12.
 de bût ī he^ε, because he was starving, 357, 1.
 a dja^ε e he^ε, because he became, 361, 16.
 da ye t'ôk e dī e he^ε, because he shot up, 305, 1. (Fig. 66.)

-k'e he^ε, -k'e. That this suffix expresses manner is evident from the following examples.

- 'a' ī a k'e he^ε, the way I do, 352, 10.
 'a ye dī 'a k'e he, the way he told him, 352, 1.
 a ne 'ī a k'e he^ε, the way you do, 351, 13.
 ac 'ī a k'e he^ε, the way I do, 351, 13.
 a dīn dī a k'e xe^ε, as you say, 343, 13.
 γa γût da k'e he^ε, the way they had lived, 310, 18. (Fig. 185.)
 ka na des datc a k'e he', the direction he went for, 364, 12.
 k'e det ditc a k'e he^ε, because they put their hands, 354, 10.
 a dīn dī kwōñ k'e, you speak that way? 320, 13.
 a t'ī gī k'e, the way he did, 337, 16.
 et ts'it xō k'e tcin, he eats it is like, 335, 5.
 ye ze' xai k'e te, he appeared to kill them, 340, 12.
 won djō ke he, good way, 371, 14.
 na wō za sait a k'e he, as they were rushing along, 370, 12.
 γai ya lī k'e, the way he was walking, 337, 16.

A temporal suffix makes adverbial temporal clauses of verbs without changes in their forms.

-do', -dɔ', -da', when, at the time when.

ū wat dī la dō', until the snow is melted, 371, 16.

ya ɣit da dō', when they lived, 353, 10.

nī wō tc'in 'a dō', when was put, 336, 11.

ac lī dɔ', when I was, 394, 14.

wɔ lī dɔ', when it was, 392, 5.

ne dū e dɔ', when were not, 348, 4.

sūt sī dɔ', before my time, 395, 15.

te ɣa dɔ', when he jumped in the water, 389, 5.

ya tc'e ɣī da dɔ', when they were living, 392, 15.

e lī da', when he is, 347, 17.

'et dī' da', if he said anything, 322, 15.

ōn le' da', when it will be, 391, 4.

wɔ 'ī da', when they see them, 350, 12.

-ū, when suffixed seems in some cases, to subordinate the verb in a continuing rather than a definite temporal manner.

ya' dī bat dū, when they were starving, 318, 10.

na tc'a de lū, they were camping, 371, 14.

xa ya da ne lūt yū, she had singed them, 324, 1.

de bût dū, hungry, 335, 5.

-e t'e, seems to be connected with the adverb e t'e and has been rendered immediately, differing from -dɔ, in a narrowing down of the time.

et da tc'et dī ke t'e, they knew, 373, 1.

na ts'ût de t'e, as soon as he fell, 343, 7.

ɣai ya le e t'e, immediately coming, 301, 9.

dī ts'ûɣ ɣe t'e, immediately he heard it, 340, 13.

-ɩ'ɔ 'e', -ɩ'ɔ dji', indicates that the action of the principal verb was after the completion of the one involved in the verb to which the suffix is attached.

na' yīc ɩ'ɔ 'e', after they knew, 386, 2.

ya ɣût dī tcût i ɩ'ɔ i, after they were hunting, 387, 15.

a' da dja' ɩ'ɔ dji', after became, 340, 6.

Locative suffixes are used with verbs transforming them into adverbial clauses.

-dī, place at which.

na de dī, where they live, 350, 9, 11.

ne te dī, where he was going to sleep, 331, 6.

-dji, -dji', place at which.

yū e da 'e' gūc dji, where he is fishing, 312, 9.

nī de ya dji', where they were standing, 339, 11.

-tc'i', toward, thither.

a' din dī tc'i', the direction you mean, 368, 16.

dīn ya e cī tc'i', you are going, 337, 10.

Substantive clauses are formed by the use of -ne. This suffix, which is rather common, means those who or whom.

ya da wō ne, those he killed, 328, 6.

TRACINGS.

The tracings of the Beaver dialect made with the Rousselot apparatus were only in part successful. Due to difficulties in transportation the instrument arrived only a few days before it was necessary to leave Vermilion. Just then an interpreter could not be secured and the work was hampered and the results rendered less certain in consequence. A considerable proportion of the sheets on which the tracings were made were damaged on the return trip. As a consequence the material here presented is not so well selected as might be wished. The usable tracings were those made of a long text which was traced by repeating sentences and phrases to the subject who had been the informant for the text. As the order of the text was followed, he recalled his story and repeated it into the mouth-piece.

There are several considerable breaks in the tracings of the text due to results which were poor in themselves or which would not engrave properly.

From these tracings the character of the consonants can usually be made out and the length of the vowels can be measured. The rate of speaking for all the tracings probably was not the same, but the regular habits of speech for the most part were not interfered with.

Now that published tracings of this sort are available for Kato, Chipe-wyan, and Beaver, and unpublished ones for Sarsi, Jicarilla, Mescalero and San Carlos Apache, the very great basic phonetic uniformity of the Athapascan dialects begin to appear. This is quite in keeping with almost identity in morphology and very marked similarity in lexicon.
